My text is that verse in the twelfth chapter of the epistle to the Romans in which the apostle says that there are some things hard to be understood which the unlearned and the unstable wrest to their own destruction. It is true that Satan often hides in the dark passages of God's word. It is also true that the hardest things to understand are not those that the intellect has to unravel and explain, but the things that concern the deeds. For my part, whoever else may have found it hard, I have not found the ninth chapter of Romans as hard as the twelfth. Even if I did not do it very well it was easier to think straight than it is to be good. It is a wonderful thing that, after all these mighty, reverberating words, that search the very heights and depths of the plan of God that make this letter so compact up to this point, it all broadens out in the most natural fashion into administrative matters. I notice that the thing about the twelfth chapter is that it does not say anything about what we must not do. It is always true that if you get light in darkness will go out. The way to keep our hearts empty of evil is to fill them up to the brim with good. We do not get the darkness out of this room with a broom, but with a match or a spark. Dr. Thomas Chalmers used to speak about the "expulsive power of the new affection." To many a man who never amounted to anything the honest, pure love of a true woman has been an incentive to him to make something of himself for her sake; and whenever the love of God comes into the human heart it drives out evil and seeks to clothe itself with living and loyal action; and if there is any one who thinks the deed is easy and the doctrine hard, that is not my experience.

I want to speak to-night upon this special admonition to service which Paul says is reasonable. God does not ask anything that is not rational. Christianity and Christian living can give account of themselves. There is nothing so silly as to be a sinner. It makes angels weep and devils laugh to see a man trying to serve God and himself. That man is walking north and south; it is a straddle. Now Paul says it is a reasonable service. He said, try it, put it to the proof, and he was an expert who had tried it for thirty years. I am going to take one special line of analogy. You have often heard it said of a man of intense activity that he was a "perfect steam engine," and that would be said more often if there were more men who were what they ought to be, "a perfect steam engine." I think there is a sermon in that, and I am going to try to get at it. You will help. You will think a great many things which I won't and preach a sermon to yourselves about being perfect steam engines. For our present purposes we will talk about that particular style of steam engine, the railway locomotive. America is doing a great business in making these, and wherever they are sent—Africa or South America or Asia, every one of them is a kind of missionary force, a living testimony of that force and skill which are resident in free mankind. The call now is loud and clear for Americans who shall be more committed to teach the world manhood. The tide of time is rising and sinew and muscle are called into the service of God. This is no time for limping or loitering.

Look out upon this world and see how God is compressing and packing it together. If we won't take our Gospel in the missionary ship, it shall go in the warship. Somehow men are going to be brought together. We are a conceited lot, we Americans, but we do not like to be told so. We have a good thing, and like to keep it. We say of the Chinese, "shut them out; put them aside." And perhaps of some others, also, "Don't let those good-for-nothing Russians, Poles and Italians come." Bless your heart! Your great grandfather or grandmother was nothing but an emigrant—mine was a Dutchman, at that. We are all the children of immigrants; we are all intruders on this continent. The only Americans are not now citizens, but live on pensions. We have stolen everything they had that was in sight. You had better not talk about that. God's plan is to keep the races of this world marching and moving. Yet, somehow, some cannot get it through their thick heads, their gold-plated heads, their noddles, hard with cruel ambitions and paltry pride, that when the Scripture says, "He made of one blood all nations," it means what it says. If you won't learn it by peace you will learn it by war; if you won't learn it in Bibles, you will learn it by bullets; if you won't learn it in packed Europe and Asia and go there, God will bring these people here. Let them come. I laugh at all this talk about checking immigration. King Canute might just as well have tried to throw back the waves with his mandate. In a certain sense it is proper to say that God is a mighty utilitarian. It is a great time for service; we need to wake up, it was nearly daylight, it is dawn, great things are coming. Therefore, I think that our churches, colleges, schools and homes ought to engage in the manufacture of locomotives.

That wonderful, intricate engine—who made it? Did a baby locomotive grow up into that great machine? You say it is evolution. Evolution describes the way a thing is made, but never made anything. The process of making is evolution. If you ask me if I believe God made this world by process, I say yes. That is the way He makes everything. When He makes anything that can grow He gives it a chance to grow. His plans are made and I don't care where He began! I care more for where He ends. You say it took a long while. Yes, the larger the pattern, the larger the plan. Our steam engine is a fine instance of evolution. It is man's creation and it represents his Creator's idea and intention. It is a wonderful epitome of mind working for an intended end; of a purpose perfected by thought. And your bodies? They just happened? The steam engine had to be made and you are an accident? A master mechanic and designer, he is a mere chance? Do not think it. Where is our reason? God is back of this adaptation, this mighty thing that we call life. Our purposes are the service. That is first.

And, second, your perfect steam engine is made with a purpose. The railroad company owns it. They employ an engineer to run it. Now in a sense it is his; it is his to use and control, but it is not his to sell. It is his to take care of and to get as much as he can out of, but in no other way. But if he takes a notion that he can run the whole road and ignore schedules and orders then very soon from him will be taken even that which he seemed to have. Now, we do not own our bodies—these engines. We are the engineers, but not the owners. My body is mine only in a relative sense. I am to give account for it. You say, "May not a man do what he will with his own?" Certainly, if you own anything. What is the engine for? To look at? No, for use. Is it made to be destroyed? If so it might just as well be made of wood and paint or a chromo engine. Some men are such they look like the real thing, but they do not act like it. You have seen a model engine under a glass case; that you wind up. The wheels go, but the engine does not. The wheels work easily because they don't touch the track. I have seen some men and I suppose there are some women, who are wound up with keys. The wheels buzz, but there is nothing done. There are people who sit in a theatre, and the tears run down their cheeks, and they think they are good because they can cry. They pay $1.50 for the privilege of weeping. We all know how we smooth ourselves when a tear comes. We feel penitent and say, "We are not so bad as we thought." It is a toy engine, the wheels go, but it does not advance. A perfect engine is meant to do something in the world, and so are we if coupled to the task that God gives us. Some people don't want to pull, they want to be pulled. You always see a dead engine in the middle of a train. Which end of the train do you like, the front or somewhere in the middle? God give us the front, with all its dangers and perils and joys.

Perfect engines get hold of the track. Orders come with lightning rapidity to the engineer, and they must be obeyed without question. The responsibility for the orders is not with him, his responsibility is to execute them. God can run this world, but He has put it into your hands to run yourself. When you stop at the end of the road you can be perfectly certain that if the passengers are too busy to take notice of you, you will not be forgotten by the manager. Well, I have mixed it. The engineer and the engine together—that is the way we are. We are the engines? Yes. We are engineers? Yes. I said at the outset, "You preach the sermon." I think there is a great analogy in it. I think there is a living parable for those who have eyes and ears. Respoisibility? Yes, lot's of it. But, then, who will shirk that? Danger? Plenty, but you are a man. Work? Yes, but that is all you are for. We are not made for nothing. Covet the place. Ride with hand on the throttle, making the best time, within safety, that a man can make. Ride right over the driving wheel. There is where the best men have always sat. Then, by and by, when this engine is worn out, you will get a better one.

Morbus Sabbaticus.

Morbus Sabbaticus, or Sunday sickness, a disease peculiar to church members. The attack comes on suddenly on every Sunday; no symptoms are felt on Saturday night; the patient sleeps well and wakes feeling well; eats a hearty breakfast, but about church time the attack comes on and continues until services are over for the morning. Then the patient feels easy and eats a hearty dinner. In the afternoon he feels much better, and is able to take a walk, talk about politics, and read the Sunday papers; he eats a hearty supper, but about church time he has another attack and stays at home. He retires early, sleeps well and wakes up Monday morning refreshed and able to go to work, and does not have any symptoms of the disease until the following Sunday. The peculiar features are as follows:

1. It always attacks members of the church.
2. It never makes it appearance except on the Sabbath.
3. The symptoms vary, but it never interferes with the sleep or appetite.
4. It never lasts more than twenty-four hours.
5. It generaly attacks the head of the family.
6. No physician is ever called.
7. It always proves fatal in the end—to the soul.
8. No remedy is known for it except prayer.
9. Religion is the only antidote.
10. It is becoming fearfully prevalent and is sweeping thousands every year prematurely to destruction.

A Hard Lesson.

Of all the lessons that humanity has to learn in life's school, the hardest is to learn to wait. Not to wait with folded hands, that claim life's prizes without previous effort, but, having struggled and crowded the slow years with trial, seeing no result such as effort seemed to warrant—nay, perhaps disaster instead—to stand firm at such a crisis of existence, to preserve one's poise and self-respect, not to lose hold or relax effort, is greatness, whether achieved by man or woman.—Reformed Church Record.

The Past a Guarantee For the Future.

If we would reassure our restless hearts that our future is in the hands of God we have but to scan our past. Can any man that is not altogether blind look over the way he has traversed without surprise and awe as he sees it marked everywhere by mysterious footprints of the living God? We thought we were going a way of our own, and all the time we have been on the King's highway.—J. E. McFadyen.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR JUNE 18.

Subject: The Heavenly Home, Rev. xxii., 1-11—Golden Text, Rev. iii., 21—Memory Verses, 3-5—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

I. The heavenly state (vs. 1-5). 1. "And." The first five verses complete the description of the new heaven and earth. The entire passage 21:1 to 22:5 should be read as one unbroken description. "He showed me" (R. V.). It was the angel interpreter of 21:9, 17, who "showed" John this wonderful vision. "Pure river." This is evidently a reference to the garden of paradise, and the river by which it was watered. "Water of life." This is a familiar scriptural image. Living, pure water is everywhere the type of blessing (Psa. 36:8; 46:4; 105:41; Joel 3:18; John 7:37-39). "Proceeding," etc. The supply is exhaustless. Here is an unfailing fulness of love, joy and peace.

2. "Street of it." This refers to the city described in the preceding chapter. "Tree of life." The symbol of perpetual immortality. The heavenly paradise, like the paradise in Eden, has its river and tree of life. The tree of life is a favorite image of Solomon's wisdom; the fruit of the righteous, the fulfilled desire, the wholesome tongue, each is "a tree of life." What possibilities of blessing these figures shadow forth, who shall say? "Twelve manner of fruits." Rather, twelve fruitages, or fruit harvests. The idea is not that there were different species of fruits, but successive crops. "Leaves of the tree." The very leaves, in their fadeless beauty, are a universal guarantee that perfect health is the constant and everlasting blessing of the glorified state. "No more curse." As there shall be no more sinning against God, so there shall be no more curse of God upon the people, for they shall be all His servants and serve Him. 4. "Shall see His face." This is that "vision of God" of which theologians have much spoken, constituting the highest glory of heaven. See 1 Cor. 13:12; 1 John 3:2. "In their foreheads." Saints of God in this life often reflect the image of the heavenly in their countenances.

5. "No night there." John in his vision sees one eternal day. This is figurative language. Darkness is the emblem of sin, sorrow, pain and death; none of these will be found in heaven. "Giveth them light." The divine glory never dims. No revolving of the orb renders the opposite hemisphere dark. Who can anticipate what honors God may have awaiting the saints. "For ever and ever." "Unto the ages of the ages." R. V., margin. "Unto eternities of eternities."

II. God's sayings are true (vs. 6, 7). 6. "And." The visions which John saw are now ended. The remaining verses of the chapter are his epilogue. "He said." The interpreting angel (v. 1) here reaffirms the words of God (21:5). "These sayings." The utterances and revelations of this book. "Of the spirits of the prophets" (R. V.) The God who called and commissioned the prophets to reveal His word. "Shortly be done." There are many things in this book which, if taken literally, would intimate that the prophecies were to be fulfilled in a short time after their delivery. This would support the idea that they referred to those times in which the apostle lived, and to the disturbances which took place among the Jews and in the Roman empire. What they all mean, and when and how they are to be fulfilled, God in heaven alone knows! 7. "I come quickly." There is a difference of opinion as to what this coming refers: 1. Some think it refers to Christ's coming at the end of the world. 2. Others think it may refer to His coming in the gospel dispensation. 3. Christ comes to each of us at death, and in this sense His coming, at the longest, will be soon. "Blessed." Blessing and woe are dependent on the spirit in which the truths of this book are read and practiced.

III. God only is to be worshiped (vs. 8, 9). 8. "I John saw." The R. V. is better here. "John had placed his name in the title of his book (chap. 1:4, 9), and now at the close he names himself again, so that we might perfectly know that he, the Apostle John, had written this testimony as to the coming of Jesus Christ." "I fell down." Overwhelmed with wonder and reverence at the extraordinary revelations made to him, and filled with praise at the amazing blessedness God has prepared for His children, John felt the impulse of worship, and it may be that Barnes is right in his suggestion that the apostle "not improbably entertained some suspicion that it was the Redeemer Himself who had manifested Himself. There was the same attempt and refusal in chapter 19:10. This twice offered and refused worship is full of teaching. "Thy fellow servant." One bond of service unites angels and men, to be servants of God is the highest title they can attain; worship is for God alone. The words "worship God" are most emphatic; "to God give thy worship, and not to me."

IV. In the future world character is fixed (vs. 10, 11). 10. "Seal not the sayings." Isaiah (8:16; 30:8) and Daniel (8:26; 12:4, 9) were commanded to seal up their prophecies. Their prophecies related to far-distant times. John was directed not to seal up his predictions, but to leave them open so that a persecuted church might have access to them. 11. "He that is unjust." See R. V. The words contain that solemn lesson often taught in the Scriptures that we are fixing our own character every day we live and that, if judgment overtake us at the last, the result will be traceable to no arbitrary decree, but to the manner in which, as moral beings, we met the conditions of that moral system in which we have been placed.

GAS AND WATER.

ONE AS NECESSARY AS THE OTHER?

ers of Large Cities Say It Is.

New York, June 13.—In the recent tion here about the price of gas, demand for lower rates was supported by the argument that every resident is as dependent upon a supply of gas as upon a supply of good water. It has come to pass that the day laborer uses gas as his only fuel for because of economy, and the man uses gas on account of its convenience. Gas for lighting, with improvements in burners, is cheaper, better and more satisfactory than any other kind of light. Gas at $1.00 per thousand cubic feet in large cities, and from that to as high in smaller towns.

The consumer of gas in the country Acetylene (pronounced a-set-a-lene), and each user makes his own gas is independent of Gas and Electric companies. Acetylene is a more perfect illuminant than the gas sold by big gas companies in the cities, and cost to the smallest user is about equivalent of city gas at 85 cents thousand.

Acetylene is the modern artificial light, the latest addition to the many inventions that have become daily necessities.

The light from an acetylene flame is steady and brilliant, and in quality is only rivaled by the sun's rays. Water and a solid material known as Calcium Carbide are brought into contact, the immediate result is the making of this wonderful gas. The generation of acetylene is so simple that experience or even apparatus is not necessary to make it. If it is desired to use it for practical lighting, and to keep it for immediate use, then a small machine called an "Acetylene Generator" is employed. There are many responsible concerns making acetylene generators. In practice this gas is distributed in small pipes throughout buildings, grounds or entire cities and towns in the same manner as ordinary gas. Acetylene is the only satisfactory means of lighting isolated buildings located in the country or suburbs at a distance from city gas or electric plants.

If the wishes of the American people had prevailed, Fitzhugh Lee would have been buried in the Campo Santo of Arlington, and a stately shaft would have risen there to his memory. But his own desire has prevailed, very rightfully thinks the Hartford Courant. Years ago, as we now learn, he told his family he wanted to be buried in the Hollywood Cemetery at Richmond when the time came and on one occasion at least he pointed out the very spot—near Jefferson Davis's grave—where he wished his grave to be made.

Several Atlantic liners arrived in New York harbor within a single day, bringing to our shores 12,000 immigrants. The New York newspapers say the new arrivals are a sturdy lot and that few or none of them will be sent back. The steamship companies closely scrutinize applicants for passage on the other side, and few deportations, therefore, become necessary.

The construction of a navy, like any other experiment in the application of modern science and invention to any other department of the public service, was an experiment which involved great risk as well as great boldness in design and conception, and as history shows that Mr. Whitney was the first officer of competent authority to inaugurate the system of construction and armament which has placed our navy upon a plane of efficiency, proportioned to the number of its vessels, with the advanced nations, it seems but just that he should be accorded due credit for his work, the Louisville Courier-Journal declares.

As the question stands today the problem of turbine installation in ships of war is vexing because of the variety of duties imposed by ordinary cruising and by the necessity in emergencies of a sudden rush. At the higher speeds turbine machinery is more economical in fuel, but at the lower speeds the coal advantage shifts with equal decision to the reciprocating type. This raises at once the tactical question whether the gain in maximum speed is more than equivalent to the greater steaming distance possible at the lower speed, the New York Herald points out.

In a brief resume of the comparative importance of meat eaters over the vegetarians as a people the Farm and Live Stock Journal brings out the importance of the live stock growers, and says: The natural history of mankind, and the history of nations since time began, show that the meat eaters have always been the preponderating force in the advancement of the world, while the vegetarians have become weak, timid and irresolute, and incapable of protecting themselves from the aggression of others.

TERRIBLE PENANCE OF NYEN-DE-KYI-BUK MONKS

Percival Landon, the Traveler, Tells of the Most Uncanny Thing He Saw in All Tibet.

Perhaps the most terrible penance suffered for religious reasons anywhere in the world is that of the monks of Nyen-de-kyi-buk, as described by Percival Landon in "The Opening of Tibet." These monks live in the ordinary manner during the novitiate; then they go into cells for a period of six months; then, after an interval, for three years and ninety-three days; later, for life.

And such a cell! "Almost on a level with the ground," says Mr. Landon, "there was an opening closed with a flat stone from behind. In front of this window was a ledge eighteen inches in width, with two basins beside it, one at each end. The abbot was attended by an acolyte who, by his master's orders, tapped three times sharply on the stone slab; we stood in the little courtyard in the sun, and watched that wicket with cold apprehension. I think, on the whole, it was the most uncanny thing I saw in all Tibet. After half a minute's pause the stone moved, or tried to move, but it came to rest again. Then very slowly and uncertainly it was pushed back and a black chasm was revealed. There was again a pause of thirty seconds, during which imagination ran riot, but I do not think that any other thing could have been as intensely pathetic as that we actually saw.

"A hand, muffled in a tightly wound piece of dirty cloth, for all the world like a stump of an arm, was painfully thrust up, and very weakly it felt along the slab. After a fruitless fumbling the hand slowly quivered back again into the darkness. A few moments later there was again an ineffectual effort, and then the stone slab moved noiselessly across the opening.

"Once a day water and an unleavened cake of flour is placed for the prisoner upon that slab, the signal is given and he may take it in. His diversion is over for the day, and in the darkness of his cell, where night and day, moon, sunset and the dawn are all alike, he—poor soul!—had thought that another day of his long penance was over."

WISE WORDS.

History fades; mythology endures.

Trust must either be accepted as absolute, or not at all.

He who can not rule himself has no right to condemn others.

Religion has triumphed only when it has remolded the desires.

Facts are obdurate, unplastic to the spirit's artistic, creative fingers.

A man is never so liable to fool himself as when trying to fool others.

The world's best work is done far from the haunts of gilded mediocrity.

There are none so lonesome as those who fail to keep abreast of the times.

Few men regret their evil deeds so much as the fear the consequences thereof.

To know when to let go is as essential to success as to know when to hold on.

O friend, never strike sail to a fear! Come into port greatly, or sail with God the seas.

He has not learned the lesson of life who does not every day surmount a fear.—Emerson.

The millennium will be with us when the best impulses of men shall also be their strongest.

The soul shows itself best in works of pure imagination, because it works there unimpeded by the limitations of fact.

You can help your fellow-men; you must help them; but the only way that you can help them is by being the noblest and the best man that it is possible for you to be.—Phillips Brooks.

There can be no real and abiding happiness without sacrifice. Our greatest joys do not result from our efforts toward self-gratification, but from a loving and spontaneous service to other lives. Joy comes not to him who seeks it for himself, but to him who seeks it for other people.

Success of Liquid Fuel.

A successful method has finally been invented for injecting liquid fuel into the furnaces of passenger boats. The fuel is brought under a pressure of from ten to twenty pounds to the square inch and evaporated by a somewhat modified "Kortings" burner, without use of steam. This apparatus works very satisfactorily, without noise and without the loss of fresh water. Formerly the liquid fuel was injected into the furnaces by means of a steam jet, making very great noise, a great inconvenience, annoying to the passengers and causing the loss of much fresh water in the form of steam. A suitable furnace arrangement, recently invented, also, guarantees proper and perfect burning of the fuel, so that very little smoke escapes from the funnel, steam is kept regularly at the same pressure during the voyage, and the boiler is kept at a uniform temperature, thus preventing much trouble from leakage and other damage.—Chicago Journal.

A Boy's Wit.

An English schoolmaster promised a crown (about $1.25) to any boy who should propound a riddle that the teacher could not answer. One and another tried, and at last one boy asked: "Why am I like the Prince of Wales?" The master puzzled his wits in vain, and finally was compelled to admit that he did not know. "Well," said the boy, "it's because I'm waiting for the crown."

Norse Legend.

According to a recent work on Norway, the scantiness of the soil in that country is explained by some of the country people as follows: At the creation of the world the angels whose duty it was to scatter the soil forgot Norway. Seeing this, the guardian angel of the land made complaints to the Creator. What was to be done? Impossible to restart the whole of the creation for the sake of Norway. "Come, my little angels," said he, "look carefully and perhaps you may find a little earth." The conscience-stricken angels swept the floor of heaven and the little dust they found they gathered in their draperies and scattered over the Norweigian rocks.

The Man Who Laughs.

Senator Depew recently gave utterance to this burst of philosophy: "The man who laughs is a doctor without a diploma. His face does more good in a sick room than a bushel of powders or a gallon of bitter draughts. People are always glad to see him. Their hands instinctively go out half way to meet his grasp, while they turn involuntarily from the clammy touch of the dyspeptic who speaks in the groaning key. He laughs you out of your faults, while you never dream of being offended with him and you never know what a pleasant world you are living in until he points out the sunny streaks in its pathway."

Large Subterranean City.

The town of Epernay, France, is a vast subterranean city, the streets for miles and miles being hewn out of the solid chalk, flanked with piles of champagne of all blends and qualities. There is no light in this labyrinth of streets, crossings and turnings, except that which the sputtering candles afford. All is dark and damp, with the thermometer down about zero. The largest champagne manufacturers in Epernay possess underground cellars which cover no less than forty-five acres and contain 5,000,000 bottles of wine.

Sultan Hates Darkness.

The Sultan of Turkey strenuously objects to darkness and his apartments in the palace and the surrounding gardens as well are flooded with light every night. He is read to sleep by a brother or favorite servant, and if he dreams an interpreter is summoned directly he awakes to explain the meaning of the dream to him.

Gift from a Stranger.

Mrs. C. Durga, of Bethel, Vt., has received $20,000 by the will of Alfred Lurte, of Liverpool, England, almost a total stranger. A few years ago, while Mr. Barte was visiting in Bethel, Mrs. Durga did some writing for him and would take no pay. She had not heard from him since.

Cheap Chinese Newspapers.

Chinese newspapers, owing to the cheap quality of paper used and to the low price of labor, both literary and mechanical, are issued at an extremely small figure. The price of the ordinary Shanghai journal is 4 cash or about 1-5 of a cent.

THREE YEARS AFTER.

Eugene E. Lario, of 731 Twentieth avenue, ticket seller in the Union station, Denver, Col., says: "You are at liberty to repeat what I first stated through our Denver papers about Doan's Kidney Pills in the summer of 1899, for I have had no reason in the interim to change my opinion of the remedy. I was subject to severe attacks of backache, always aggravated if I sat long at a desk. Doan's Kidney Pills absolutely stopped my backache. I have never had a pain or a twinge since."

Ducks and Geese.

In raising ducks never keep anything but white feathered stock. The Pekin duck is the best and always brings the top of the market. With geese only the largest breeds should be kept. The Toulouse, African or any other large breed is all right, and it cost no more to raise a large bird than a small one. The market is never overstocked on large, fat geese.

The region between the Manchurian cities of Mukden and Simmintin has for centuries been notorious for brigandage. The brigands, however, allow anyone to travel in safety after paying a certain percentage of the goods carried in advance.

HON. JOHN TIGHE.

Assemblyman Tighe's letter should be read by every brain worker leading a strenuous life.

Hon. John Tighe, No. 98 Remsen St., Cohoes, N. Y., Member of Assembly from the Fourth District, Albany County, N. Y., writes as follows:

"Peruna has my hearty indorsement as a restorative tonic of superior merit. At times when I have been completely broken down from excess of work, so that my faculties seemed actually at a standstill, Peruna has acted as a healing restorer, starting the machinery of mind and body afresh with new life and energy.

"I recommend it to a man tired in mind and body as a tonic superior to anything I know of and well worthy serious consideration."—J. Tighe.

Excess of work, so common in our country, causes impaired nerves, leading to catarrh and catarrhal nervousness—a disease that is responsible for half of all nervous troubles.

Peruna cures this trouble because it cures catarrh wherever located.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

ARE YOU SICK?

Let a SAMPLE BOTTLE of CHECKERS HELP YOU to GET WELL!

Perhaps you have the most stubborn and fatal disease the doctors know about.

Perhaps you've suffered untold agony and daily torment.

Perhaps you are unable to look after your daily work, maybe not well enough to give it a fraction of the time it needs.

Perhaps you're discouraged with life—never expect to get back your youthful vigor again—lost your ambition, take no interest in your business, no longer enjoy old pleasures, find home and friends less attractive. The above are the usual penalties of disease suffering.

Perhaps you've tried a dozen doctors and a dozen different medicines. Then given up with disgust. It's a common experience.

Do you expect to stop trying and risk the fatal end? Or are you still open for a positive cure? Your confidence, no doubt, has been shattered before by a dozen trials, but because you have grasped at straws in the past, will you refuse now to try a proven life preserver? Won't you bolster up your faith in human nature and try again? A positive cure depends on your answers.

Dr. Checkers, of Austria, gave his country the famous Checkers formula—this wonderful Medicine to be taken into the stomach, there to be absorbed by the blood—making the people new all over. Checkers is just beginning to be known in the U. S. It has cured thousands, it has cured wherever it has been tried. It is not a drug; it's like nothing you have ever tried—but it will cure you. It checks and stops the ravages of Consumption, it cures Stomach, Liver, Kidney, Nerve and Blood Diseases, Catarrh, Bronchitis, Coughs, La Grippe, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Heart Disease, Indigestion, Malaria, Chills and Fever, Nervousness, General Debility and all known Female Complaints. I am very sorry to say that the health of Ashby has not been very good the past week. But be it God's will, we all have to suffer and worry all through life, we can not have life just as we wish but as God thinks best. The sick, which for the past week has been very low, are as follows: Mr. Joe Carter, Mrs. L. P. Brock, Mrs. J. W. Little, Master Alvis Fitch. Attended by Dr. E. G. Mr. W. H. Thomas, of Thomas, was in town Thursday to repair telephone box which was burned out by lightening some few days ago.

Miss Lyda Oakley has returned home to the delight of her many friends after a very long stay at Ironton; and by the noise of the sewing machine we guess there is to be a good time about Sunday.

Mrs. Maggie Splawn spent Thursday here with her sister, Mrs. V. L. Hubbard, also visited friends in Montevallo Friday.

What has become of Mr. Thomas Merony of Pine Hill I see M. D. from Pine Hill Come again, Tom Some one asked me to clip all your news from the Banner and send to her, some one dear to you; could not hear from you any other way, why don't you write.

We soon are to have the long distance telephone in Ashby with office at the residence of Mr. J. G. Oakleys. Cuban Diarrhoea

U. S. Soldiers who served in Cuba during the Spanish war know what this disease is, and that ordinary remedies have little more effect than so much water. Cuban diarrhoea is almost as severe and dangerous as a mild attack of cholera. There is one remedy, however, that can always be depended upon as will be seen by the following certificate from Mrs. Minnie Jacobs of Houston, Texas: "I hereby certify that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy cured my husband of a severe attack of Cuban diarrhoea, which he brought home from Cuba. We had several doctors but they did him no good. One bottle of this remedy cured him, as our neighbors will testify. I thank God for so valuable a medicine." Indigestion Causes Catarrh of the Stomach.

For many years it has been supposed that Catarrh of the Stomach caused indigestion and dyspepsia, but the truth is exactly the opposite. Indigestion causes catarrh. Repeated attacks of Indigestion inflames the mucous membranes lining the stomach and exposes the nerves of the stomach, thus causing the glands to secrete mucin instead of the juices of natural digestion. This is called Catarrh of the Stomach.

Kodol Dyspepsia Cure

relieves all inflammation of the mucous membranes lining the stomach, protects the nerves, and cures bad breath, sour risings, a sense of fullness after eating, indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach troubles.

FRANK AND I.

Well, Frank, my dear old doggie, they say your race is run,
And our jolly tramps together up and down the country are done.
You're only a dog, old fellow, a dog, and you've had your day,
But never a friend of all my friends have been truer than you alway.

We've had glorious times together in fields and pastures fair,
In storm and sunny weather we have romped without a care,
And however bad we've been treated, through an unfair deal,
However many the friends that fail me, I've found you true as steel.

That's right, my dear old fellow, look up with your knowing eye
And lick my hand with your loving tongue that never told a lie
And don't be afraid old doggie, if your time has come to go.
For somewhere out in the great unknown there's a place for you, I know.

Then don't you worry, old comrade, and don't you fear to die,
For over in Europe or Chilton I will find you by and by
And I'll stand by you, old fellow, and our love will surely win,
For never a heaven shall shelter me, where they won't let Frank in.

When I reach that city glorious, behind the waiting dark
Just come to the gate and wag your wounded tail and bark,
I'll hear your voice and know it and I'll come to the gate and say
You're mine yet old Frank and you may come this way.

Then I'm sure the gate will open and you will come frisking in
And we'll roam the fields together in a country free from sin,
So never you mind, old Frank, if your time has come to go
You've been true to me, I'll be true to you and we'll be happy together you know.

You are only a dog, old fellow, and you've had your day,
And I too, old boy, haven't long to stay. so some say
But you've stood by me, old comrade, and I'll stand by you,
So don't you worry, old Frank, we will yet pull through.

V. O. CAMPBELLE.

HE MAN ON THE CORNER of the Sights He Saw, and Some He Saw Not.

"Diversification, something to ll every day' That is the motto f the Southern Cotton Association, d a mighty good one to follow it H C Young of Jumbo is a eliever in it, and what is more to e point, he practices it, and ought into town on Tuesday a d of dry corn and bacon for sale, d went home rejoicing with the sh in his pocket. I don't know w much he realized, but he emed in good spirits over the nsaction, so I reckon it was satisfactory. Good luck to every rmer who has something to sell ery day.

Here's another example of diversification and a good one too. It es from Thorsby this time in shape of some of the finest s I have ever seen or tasted. believe in patronizing home industries and bought a box and liked m so well I am waiting for the xt to come along. Thorsby wberries were fine, the plums better, and I hope the peaches ill cap the list. Good luck to rsby diversifiers, what with it and vegetables they are getting near to having something to ll every day.

Stop a moment, farmer, and just nk how nice it is to have something you can sell for cash every y, instead of toiling all the year und and trusting to luck what may get for your cotton in the ll—it may be four cents and it y be eleven, but you have' to e chances on that. Now, just k on this picture for a minute d tell me how you like it. It s t overdrawn, it is all quite probe in the near futnre, and you ll be the greatest beneficiary.

When the new ginnery is built re will be three ginneries in nton; soon we will have two rehouses; then the fertilizer nt, next a chemical plant and ton factory; an electric light and er plant, with cars running ough the town to Maplesville. l these enterprises have to employ a large number of men, and e men with their families have live, and to live they must buy r produce There's your mar- right at home; you come in h your wagon load of produce, d go home with your pocket full money, your wife smiles, the dren dance around in glee, and are the happiest man in the ld O yes, one thing more, e Banner office with twenty or ty printers at work, all will be tomers of yours. You may per- think this is a far fetched ure, but it's coming alright, ght, and you can hasten the e by patronizing home enterses already established. Spend r money at home and it comes k to you, spend it abroad and never see it again.

The Baby Show was a great suc-, and everyone, especially the es, thoroughly enjoyed the occasion. What prettier sight can be gined than that of pretty babes the arms of pretty mothers, on a ty day, in a pretty grove? Of four contesting babies, the reed judges declared the seventhe old fatherless babe of Mrs. hony to be the prize winner, a beautiful boy it is. But the rs were beautiful infants too, I can't understad bow the ges could arrive at any decision, pt that I don't believe either Dennis or Peyt Wilson know thing at all about babies, poor, ched bachelors that they are. shall have the pleasure of showyou the picture of the lovely pri winner in next week's you can judge for elves of its beauty.

Raton, New Mex., June 15, 1905

Dear old Banner: I would beg for a small space in your columns to describe as best I can my new home in the West.

As many know, I was compelled, on account of my son's health, to leave Verbena and my many friends.

We left home the 1st of June, having a very pleasant trip through South Alabama, Mississisippi, Louisiana and Texas, arriving at Ratan on night of 6th.

The crops in Texas and Louisiana looked very bad but everybody seemed in good heart; said it was on account of so much rain. We spent the night in Ft. Worth and one day in El. Paso, both we found to be very nice towns

This is a nice country out here, of course there is not much farming around in this region. Ratan is a very nice little town, situated in a series of mountains and inhabited chiefly with people from the East, who come out here for their health, and like the country and people so well they settle here. We have a rich coal field just opening up about 1½ mile from here. So in a year or two Raton will be a fine mining town and railroad centre.

Well, as I only asked for a small space I guess I had better desist.

Best wishes to the Banneer and my old friends.

B. H. Nelson.

Old Waddy.

Editor Banner: As I have heard so much about stock law I will give my opinion. I have lived in stock law counties and seen the effects of stock law, and I know we do not need any stock law in this county I think that those who want stock law had better go and live in stock law awhile and see if they want it before they vote for it. I notice that the Pop Republicans are the ones that are most in favor of the stock law, so if they do not like it they can blame the Democrats for voting for it. They blame Cleveland for cotton being 4 cts., but if the farmers had not organized we would have had some 4 cent Roosevelt cotton. I would like to learn from the little Cheap-John that was crying hurrah for Roosevelt and 15 cent cotton. We get Roosevelt all right but the 15 cent cotton is selling for 7 cents, and then they say the Democrats are disfranchised. I think the black an tans got the majority of disfranchised voters.

The farmers of this part of the country are progressing nicely.

Rev. R H Long had a nice crowd out Sunday to hear him, but I am sorry to say that there were some few intoxicated with whisky. It is so bad for a person to give their life to whisky, it is a bad habit, young men, and let us quit that old evil, it will cause you to do many bad things. If the folks would only give the money that they pay for strong drink to the poor people. Very often I see young men staggering from one side of the road to the other. I once had a kind father but he is gone to the sweet beyond waiting for me to come. I one time was by the death bed of a friend and he seemed to go to sleep, and it was not long till he aroused up and he said he bad seen heaven and that he would never get well, and he asked me to meet him in heaven, and very often it arises in my mind what he said to me.

Maplesville.

We suppose our farming fraternity, the bottom round of the ladder of the nation's prosperity, would like to hear first of crops and weather. We had a most delightful rainbow shower the 18th that was much needed by everything growing.

Your correspondent has been from here several weeks, and was pleased to find the crops in such fine condition after a visit to the canebrake. We returned to our beautiful pine groves, healthful climate, lovely woods, peace and good will between employer and employee (phrenologically speaking) with our bump of patriotism much developed. We found some of the cotton near Uniontown in fine condition, but much had been turned "out to grass" and was made into a fine quality of hay; corn had been neglected so long from incessant rains in May that much was stunted. The greatest change that impressed the writer was the wanton destruction of the beautiful forest trees, particularly cedar and oak, this gives some of country an air of desolation. No better law could be made than to protect the forests as the British do, and to replant with our native growth instead of the hateful china, mulberry and alanthus. The writer was much affected by this and tearfully called to mind the beautiful lines,

"Woodman, spare that tree,
Touch not a single bough,
In youth it sheltered me,
And I will protect it now."

This country is as all others, those who have exercised industry and economy are prospering and have climbed on the top round of prosperity to look with contempt on those below. The delightful old Southern warmth ot chivalry is there yet that we sincerely hope may never grow less.

Five Massachusetts towns have pooled their issues for the purpose of reducing the expense of caring for their paupers. Even those who are forced to depend upon cold charity for support cannot escape contact with trust methods, comments the Providence Journal.

Ah, those practical Germans! Instead of supplying his readers with dolls, paper soldiers, and other such like trifles, an enterprising German editor now prints a weekly edition on only one side of the paper so that the publication, once read, will be all the more readily available for doing up packages.

We can learn to live nobly only by acting nobly on every occasion. If you shirk the first trial of your manhood, you will go so much weaker to the second; and if the next occasion and the next find you unprepared, you will unquestionably sink into baseness. A swimmer becomes strong to stem the tide only by frequently breasting the high waves, concludes Success Magazine.

Get into the American spirit, admonishes the Louisville (Ky.) Courier Journal. Learn the value of an hour. Do not allow a solitary one of the precious hours to flit past unutilized. If you are at work, work hard and reap the reward; if not at work, pick up a good, substantial book and add to your learning; if you are not reading a substantial book, take some physical exercise and benefit your health. But do not lie around and kill time. Stir yourself today—this morning.

The purveyors of amusement to the American public rarely confine their efforts to one town. Theatrical companies of the first rank travel now from one end of the land to another and there is not an exception to this rule. So the play that pleases equally everywhere must have very unusual qualities. The field was never so large as it is today for the dramatist who will base his play on the emotions of love and hate, which are understood everywhere, concludes the New York Sun.

The Milwaukee bank president who has embezzled $1,500,000 is not altogether bad: in his last address as president of the American Bankers' association he made "a sturdy plea for the highest standard of honor in financial dealings." Also, he was "noted for his high regard for the maxims of Benjamin Franklin." That he was distinguished for the purity of his private life goes without saying, asserts the New York American. Let him among you who has never stolen a million-and-a-half dollars cast the first stone.

The beauty of earth, except for some spots that our sordid industries have ravaged, has altered but little since the days of Augustus and Pericles. The sea is infinite still, still inviolate. The forest, the plain, the harvest, the villages, rivers and streams, the mountains, the dawn and the evening, stars and the sky, vary as these all may according to climate and latitude, offer us still the same spectacles of grandeur and tenderness, the same soft, profound harmonies, the same fairy-like scenes of changing complexity, that they gave to the Athenian citizens and the people of Rome. Nature remains more or less as it was; and besides, we have grown more sensitive, and today can admire more freely, declares Maurice Maeterlinck in the Critic.

Where the Loafer Works.

The problem of the unemployed and the vagrant is a question of science, not sentiment, in Berlin.

Let a ragged man make his appearance in Friedrichstrasse or the Lindens and in a minute a policeman is after his papers. If he has slept in the asylum for the homeless more than a certain number of nights he is forthwith conducted to the workhouse and made to labor for his board and lodging." This is why Berlin's strets are so free from loafers and ragged vagabonds; why her public parks are not filled, almost to the exclusion of decent people with the dregs of the criminal and vagrant classes.

WASHINGTON CHOSEN

As the Place to Hold the Russian-Japanese Peace Conference.

THEY MAY USE ENGLISH.

Armistice Will Be Signed on the Plains of Manchuria Equi-Distant Between the Armies.

Washington, D. C.—The American national capital has been selected as the seat of negotiations between the plenipotentiaries of Russia and Japan for a treaty of peace. The choice of Washington as the locattion of the peace conference marks another forward step in the negotiations toward the ultimate peace in the far east instituted by President Roosevelt.

Official announcement of the selection of Washington was made by Secretary Loeb at the White House Friday. It was in typewritten form and read as follows:

"When the two governments were unable to agree upon either Chefoo or Paris, the president suggested The Hague, but both governments have now requested that Washington be chosen as the place of meeting and the president has accordingly notified both governments that Washington will be so selected."

May Adjourn from Washington.

This statement was supplemented shortly afterwards by a semi-official announcement that "after meeting and organizing, the plenipotentiaries of the two governments, if it should be found to be uncomfortably hot in Washington, may adjourn the meeting to some summer resort in the North and continue their sitting until such time as the weather in Washington shall be more comfortable."

Now that some of the details of the negotiations which have been proceeding for more than two weeks are known, the selection of Washington is regarded as the only logical solution of the problem presented to the belligerent governments.

After the acceptance by Russia and Japan of President Roosevelt's proposition that they consent to consider the question of peace, Russia indicated Paris as the most desirable place for the meeting to negotiate a treaty, and Japan indicated Chefoo. There the subject rested for forty-eight hours. Finally Japan declined to consider Paris for obvious reasons, and Russia objected to the holding of the conference in an oriental city.

Japan Objected to Paris.

He indicated that both for practical and sentimental reasons The Hague would be a most desirable place of meeting for the plenipotentiaries. Further consideration of the subject developed the practically unalterable objection of Japan to any European capital as a place. She objected to The Hague, saying it was too far within Russian influence, and for a similar reason she declined favorably to consider Geneva.

Until today, however, Japan's irreconcilable opposition to the selection of any European capital was not known definitely. At a conference which Kogoro Takahira, the Japanese minister, had with President Roosevelt, he conveyed to the president the Japanese refusal to consent to holding the conference in Paris.

Russian Ambassador Notified.

The refusal of Japan to agree to the holding of the conference in Europe was communicated by the president to the Russian ambassador and likewise cabled to St. Petersburg. While the president did not act in the capacity of arbiter between Russia and Japan, he was in a position after the conference with Minister Takahira and his communication to Ambassador Cassini to formally announce the selection of Washington as the seat of the conference.

In view of the selection of Washington as the place for the conference it is expected that within a few days at most Russia and Japan will announce formally the names of their respective plenipotentiaries. It is deemed likely also that coincidentally with the announcement of the plenipotentiaries an agreement will be reached as to the time of holding the conference.

While the date is not so important a detail as the place, it is of particular concern, especially at this season.

To Sign Armistice.

Alone on the plains of Manchuria midway between the two great armies the Russian and Japanese commanders will meet to sign the armistice which will pave the way for the Washington conference if the present tentative program is followed.

Exchanges on this point are now in progress between Tokio and St. Petersburg via Washington, but no final conclusion has been reached. It was first thought a preliminary protocol might be signed at Washington pending a temporary cessation of hostilities, but in view of the fact that this concerns directly the armies in the field, it is believed the belligerents will agree that arrangements of the armistice be best entrusted to Linevitch and Oyama, the respective commanders-in-chief, who in such event would be telegraphed special powers to sign.

Will Be Headed by Nelidoff.

Prior to the signing of an armistice, however, will come the official announcement of the Russian and Japanese plenipotentiaries. Russia has indicated that her mission will be headed by M. Nelidoff, the Russian ambassador at Paris, and it is understood the Japanese emperor has requested Marquis Ito to head the Japanese mission.

Should M. Takahira be placed on the commission the chances are that M. Nelidoff will be accompanied by a second plenipotentiary from Russia and would be joined in Washington by Baron Rosen, the new Russian ambassador.

Neither country has suggested the names of the other plenipotentiaries nor has the number been agreed upon, although the belief is that there will be three on a side. With Marquis Ito, it is believed, there will come another great statesman of Japan, who has had wide diplomatic experience and Mr. Takahira, the Japanese minister, it is suggested here, may be named as the third plenipotentiary.

May Use English Language.

Another important detail which has been the subject of informal conversations at the White House is the language to be used at the conference Russia will ask that the French language be used. Japan will express a preference for English, and in recognition of the courtesies to be extended the plenipotentiaries by the Washington government diplomatists believe that the English language will be used jointly with French, the proceedings of the conference being recorded in both languages.

Drowned in the Warrior.

Jasper, Ala.—T. J. Davis was drowned in the Warrior river near Cordova Thursday afternoon at 5 o'clock. According to reports received here, Davis, in company with W. H. Parker and George Williams, was in a boat, and all the men are said to have been under the influence of whiskey. A row came up and it is reported that oars were used, the result being that Davis was thrown or knocked overboard and drowned. Coroner Moses Newburger went to Cordova in investigate the affair, and it is probable that arrests will follow.

Selma, Ala.—The steamer "Hard Cash," the first boat on the Alabama river to come this far up in several weeks, reached here early Friday. The boat brought a good load of freight and a full passenger list and will regularly from now on ply up and down the Alabama river.

The "Hard Cash" is owned by Winston Jones, of Mobile, and heretofore has been running on the Tombigbee river. A few days ago it was decided by her owner to put the "Hard Cash" on the Alabama river for the purpose of fighting the alleged combination that had been formed by the other steamers which had been running on the Alabama.

Florence, Ala.—The two-story frame dwelling house of W. F. Givens, near Hope, this county, was burned Friday, together with the barn and smoke house. Mr. Givens carried $1,100 with the Dillard Insurance Company, of this city.

A TRIPLE HANGING

In Decatur, Three Criminals, Seen by Crowds are Sent Hence by Legal Route.

THE ROPE SLIPPED ON SMITH.

Convicted Murderers of Miss Bloodworth Protest Innocence, as Did Slayer of Officer Steele.

Decatur, Ala.—John Collier and Harvey Smith were hanged Friday for the murder of Miss Belle Bloodworth, and Will Jackson was hanged for the murder of Sanitary Officer E. L. Steel. All three were placed on the scaffold at 12:58. The drop fell at 1 o'clock and at 1:10 the attending physicians pronounced Collier and Jackson dead, death being due to strangulation.

The knot slipped on Smith's neck and he was carried to the balcony, where he fainted. Upon leaving the scaffold he said: "I am free, I am free. God will cause vengeance to fall upon those people for my death." All three professed their innocence to the last. Collier confessed religion and sang and prayed considerably before being executed. Collier said: "I am going home to my God; they had no evidence on which to convict me." Rev. T. H. Ham and Rev. S. M. Robinson were their spiritual advisers. Smith was led back to the scaffold by the assistance of the three men and when the drop fell the doctor pronounced his neck broken and Smith dead at 1:25 p. m.

The bodies of Smith and Collier were shipped to Tennessee for burial. Jackson's body was buried in the potter field here. A large crowd was in town, assembled about the court house and jail. Just before the execution the crowd was ordered to leave the court yard, which they did. There was no trouble. The prisoners were accompanied here by troop D. cavalry, of Birmingham. The company returned to Birmingham at 3 o'clock

Was an Outrageous Crime.

The crime for which Collier and Smith were convicted was the most outrageous that has ever blotted the pages of the criminal records of Alabama's fair history. Miss Belle Bloodworth was a young lady in the prime of young womanhood, popular, beautiful, highly educated, refined, and a young woman who had all of those graces and charms that go to make up the womanhood of this land of the free and the home of the brave.

On the afternoon of January 21 of the present year Miss Bloodworth went to her father's store on Second avenue, in Decatur, to carry her father's supper, as was her custom. This was about 6 o'clock. Leaving her father's store she crossed the street, going over to T. D. Wilkinson's, where she telephoned to her mother, "I am coming home at once." As she passed out the door a little negro girl, who nurses for Mrs. Wilkinson, was sitting in the door. "Hain't you afraid to go home by yourself, Miss Belle?" said this girl. "Yes, it is rather late and rather dark," said Miss Bloodworth. This is perhaps the last words that ever came from her lips, unless she uttered a cry thinking it might bring her assistance.

Failed to Reach Home.

At 8 o'clock Miss Bloodworth had failed to reach home. Her parents became uneasy and a search was at once instituted. About 10 o'clock that night the lifeless body of the young lady was found in an alley in the rear of Colonel Dick Adams' residence, within less than two blocks of the young lady's residence. Her body was covered with blood and mud, her clothing badly torn and cuts of a most ugly character were found on her person.

Near by the scene of the crime was found a bloody stick of stove wood which gave the evidence of the three licks on the young lady's skull which caused her death. Lying near by was a letter addressed to Miss Bloodworth and blood was spattered over the fence and bloody finger marks were found on the fence. Aside from this there was absolutely nothing for the officers to work on.

Charles Heflin one day in his own way got a tip that Collier and Smith were guilty of this crime. He spotted a negro whom he thought knew something of the crime. This negro Heflin followed all over the state of Mississippi.

Important Discovery Made.

In the meantime, while Mr. Heflin was working on the case, B. M. Bloodworth, the father of the young lady, with his young son, was walking one afternoon in the vicinity of the murder when the lad discovered something in a sink hole near by. Calling his father's attention to the matter the case was investigated and it was found that the object in the sink hole was a pair of bloody overalls. Upon examination it was found that the pockets of the overalls contained a small note book, bearing John Collier's name. Mr. Heflin caused the arrest of Collier. Collier was taken to a private office in the Morgan County National Bank building, where he was accused of the crime. Collier broke down when accused of the crime and said Harvey Smith was the guilty man, as Smith had told him that he had killed the young lady. Smith was then arrested, but would not talk.

Harvey Smith was convicted on May 3. John Collier was convicted on May 4. Will Jackson was convicted on May 5 and all three were sentenced on May 6—the date of the hanging being fixed at June 16th.

The evidence against these negroes although mostly circumstantial, was most conclusive. The strongest evidence against Smith, and in a sense against Collier as well, was given by the 14-year-old son of Harvey Smith. He told how he went down town with his father that night and told their every movement until the time when they were in the store of T. D. Wilkinson while Miss Bloodworth was telephoning. He said his father was there, that John Collier preceded the young lady when she left the store and that Smith followed her.

This boy also testified that he went home early that night and that his father came home late and was "blowing" when he came in.

Girard, Ala.—Girard has been visited by two severe rain, electrical and wind storms within the past two days the second occurring early Friday morning. A good deal of damage was done in both Girard and Phenix City. Several houses were struck by lightning, many houses were blown down and several persons had narrow escapes from serious injury if not death.

A calf a year old was blown from one lot to another, over a fence, without being hurt. Lightning played a number of queer freaks. The residence of Mr. Coursen ignited in two places, but was extinguished. Mrs Coursen was knocked down by the lightning, but got up and pluckily went about the work of extinguishing the fire.

ON THE PROW.

Strange, silent East! Across the solemn calm
The slender ship outward and onward strives,
Bearing to odorous shores of date and palm
The burden of a hundred little lives.

On a light course drift I toward the verge
Beyond which lies what now I may not know;
Yet my heart whispers, "These gray wastes of surge Stretch whither it is good for me to go."

Youth like the speeding sun left far behind,
Unanswered questions mutely sent before,
O great, dim East, what welcome shall I find
When thy wide arms unveil the distant shore?

The prow knows not the harbor that it nears,
Nor I if thou shalt bring the seeker rest,
Yet the strong hand the fragile ship that steers
Will guide her to the haven that is best.

THE TRAILERS.

By Harry Robinson Wright.

PRIVATE DAMER came up the steps of his shack, yawned a little, looked out into the night, and shivered. He made his way to the saddle rack, and throwing the familiar burden over one shoulder staggered under its weight out to the picket line.

"Pretty chilly for old Arizony, eh, Joe?" he said to the sentry, as he untied Dick and led the horse away for [illegible]

Damer sauntered to the cook house. [illegible] awaited him, with a cup of black coffee and several [illegible] of bacon and bread. As he ate, he managed to have a very comfortable [illegible] with the cook.

"It's a holy terror, Doc, ain't it?" he [illegible] "Here we've been in a bloomin' [illegible] four months guarding this old [illegible] hole, and ridin' over to meet F [illegible] every day. Why, if it wasn't fur [illegible] graves we'd never know Geronimo was alive. Lord only knows, I [illegible] they'd kill him or give him up [illegible] a Charley Ross, an' let us get back [illegible] the past [illegible] the potatoes and onions, [illegible] sick of boot leg and sow belly."

"That's it!" answered Doc. "You fellers come growlin' at me. Where you 'spose I'm goin' to get taters an' onions? Am I one of them fellers that say, 'Let there be taters an' onions,' [illegible] there they be? Go chase yourself."

The cook was ruler of the camp. Damer fled. As he cinched up his [illegible] he vented his unexpended energy [illegible] the latigo strap. A snap of teeth, [illegible] a kick, warned him he had reached [illegible] limit. With a "Whoa Dick, durn [illegible]" he slipped the bit in the horse's [illegible]th and buckled the throat latch. [illegible] he looked to his weapons. He [illegible] a cartridge in the chamber of his [illegible], closed the breech block, set [illegible] hammer at a safety, and slipped [illegible] carbine in its boot. He spun the [illegible] of his six-shooter, and let the [illegible] rest on the empty chamber.

[illegible] mounted; and as he started, two [illegible] figures appeared in the semi-[illegible]ness—for it was nearing daybreak [illegible] stood by his side. They were the [illegible] scouts who were to accompany [illegible] on his twenty-five mile search for [illegible] chance trail of the hostile [illegible]ches.

"[illegible]lloa!" exclaimed the soldier. "Big [illegible] and Pretty, too! Well, run [illegible]g. I'll meet you at the hill."

[illegible] Indians slipped away as Damer [illegible] up his reins and touched his horse [illegible] the spurs. Past G troop, with [illegible] Sibley tents, he rode; past the [illegible] where his comrades had been [illegible] by the Apache band, a short [illegible] ago, and on beyond the sutler's [illegible]

The gray of morning had heightened. The walls of Gaudaloupe Canon [illegible] the splendid art of nature on [illegible] side. Titian bronzes mingled [illegible] the green of the fields. Piles of [illegible] the aftermath of cloud-[illegible]—made the setting for a perspec[illegible] of [illegible] mural designs in chaos, [illegible] only some master hand to ar[illegible] them. Birds twittered, as they [illegible] precarious breakfasts.

[illegible] was all lost on Damer. He whit[illegible] a pipeful of tobacco from a well-[illegible] plug and lighted his pipe. [illegible] his horse was climbing the [illegible]

[illegible] dismounted, as he reached the [illegible] to take up the slack in the cinch. [illegible] sun just then asserted his full [illegible]. A flash of light from the east; [illegible] rays beaming skyward, [illegible] a rim of white fire from [illegible] of the mountains; a full burst [illegible] of the glory of another day [illegible] the sun of Arizona had begun [illegible] its scorching and parching [illegible] plain and bleaching moun[illegible]

[illegible] never saw the daily miracle. [illegible] now he was swearing vigorously [illegible] Dick, who swelled himself after the [illegible] of well-seasoned cavalry horses [illegible] the tightening of the cinch. [illegible] punches in the ribs settled the [illegible]. Dick assumed normal propor[illegible]. It was force of habit that [illegible] him to play the trick. He knew [illegible] a loose saddle meant disaster. A [illegible] sudden shy from a prairie [illegible] hole—the crash of the trooper as [illegible] and man slipped under his belly; [illegible] Dick would have killed his master [illegible] he could have stopped himself.

"[illegible] you! What do you mean?" [illegible] the familiar expletive, with the [illegible] affection for his horse as the [illegible] the startled anxiety of [illegible] was half soldier, half [illegible] in the [illegible]

[illegible] cavalry horse shows the repug[illegible] for an Indian scent of his [illegible] the Indian cayuse, for the odor [illegible] white man. The rider had been nodding. But the sensitive nostrils of the horse were alive to the faintest whiff in the parching air. The nervous shy of the horse brought Damer's trained eyes to the cause—for no army horse turns aside save for some good reason.

Damer saw a small beating down of the bushes, the faint impression of unshod hoofs, and the rooting up of earth that evidenced a struggle.

His intuition painted an instant picture in his mind's eye. Geronimo and his band had again cut the trail for Mexico. One of the Indian scouts had prevented the other from giving him the warning. The struggle proved that. The loyal Indian was lying somewhere in the bushes. The other one was hidden, ready to kill Damer should he betray the fact that he had noticed the crossing trail.

Damer tightened the bridle reins. He said, aloud, and calmly: "Go on, Dick! What's the matter with you?"

A glance to the right and left, a loosening of the carbine in the boot, and Damer slowly dismounted. As he busied himself with the cinch, he cut two strips from the latigo strap, slowly and with much care. Remounting, he slipped the button from his pistol holster. Dick jogged along; and Damer, in the saddle, rode with the air of a man longing for sleep.

An Indian appeared on the trail, with his "long tom" slung across his arm. The hammer was at full cock.

A false move—an inkling of what had gone before—and Damer would have filled the buzzard maws, and Geronimo would have gained another recruit. But the soldier was merely dully curious.

"Helloa, Pretty! Where's Big Head?"

"Big Head? Him down that way. Mebbe not in to-day. Saw deer."

"All right then; you trot ahead."

The Indian swung around on the ball of his foot—the moccasin right about—and advanced again, reassured.

Damer sank both rowels in Dick's side. As the frenzied jump of the horse carried him to the trailer he brought down the butt of his pistol mightily on Pretty's head. A jerk of the bridle, a swift dismounting, and, in a moment, Pretty's hands were behind him.

As Pretty was assisted to his feet, he slowly grinned at his captor. The primitive man had asserted himself. Despite of four years of careful schooling, and long mingling with the different environment, the Indian had come back to his own. Damer understood, and he answered the mirthless, significant smile:

"You bet! You've fooled a heap of people—but not your Uncle Dudley."

They started on the back trail.

"I knew you were laying for me and — Go on, blast you!"

Pretty made a small show of protesting.

"You savey, Damer? Court martial for hittin' Injun. What's the matter? You loco?"

"Court martial! It'll mean hanging for you, if I don't kill you myself. Here's how it reads: Trail discovered by two Injuns. One of 'em—and it's not you—honest enough to give me the tip. You kill him; and you'd have killed me. Now, you show me what you've done with him."

Indian and soldier slowly traveled the back trail.

"Now then, Pretty; here we are."

Damer dismounted, untied his lariat, cut the straps from the Indian's hands, and, leveling his forty-five, added: "Go ahead! Bring him out!

"No monkeyin'! You know me! Another move like that, an' there'll be one less Injun to eat Government beans."

There was a little brush of mesquite where they had halted. Pretty had cast a cunning, stealthy glance at Damer, to see whether the chance of a sudden bolt would avail. No! There was a glint in the gray eyes that looked him squarely in the face, and a nervous twitching of the lips which, with the careless Western method of handling Colts, caused him to change his mind. The soldier had the snapshot habit—no looking over the sights, no aim taken; yet, when you glance, the ugly muzzle seems to be covering all parts of your anatomy at one time. Pretty noted the signs shrewdly. Like a wise Indian, he parted the bushes and glided away from the trail.

There had not been much of a struggle—a downward blow from the butt end of a rifle while Big Head was examining the trail, a swift binding of hands and feet, and the dragging of his body into the bushes. There he lay now, dead. His face was upturned to the beating sun, mouth agape, eyes distended, and bloody marks where the cruel thongs had cut his flesh. Pretty, at the body's side, began a protest:

"Damer, I not kill him. I only hit. What the matter, I not know."

"Killed himself, eh? Bloomin' magician he must have been! Pick him up, my son, and drag him out to Dick. We'll take him into camp with us. First rate evidence he is."

"You heap dog!" gritted Pretty.

Hate—the bitter malevolence of a race refined in cruelty—glared out of the Indian's eyes.

"Yep!" and the six-shooter waved rhythmically up and down the line of Pretty's body. "Yep!" repeated Damer. "Me heap dog. And you'll be dog meat in just a holy second if you don't move—Quick!"

The command snapped outward from his teeth like the crack of a Winchester. In its harsh abruptness was all the dominance of the men who had conquered his people years ago. The Indian stooped over and placed his hands around Big Head's body. With a yell he leaped backward, shrieking to the soldier:

"Cocheo, pronto! Knife, knife, quick!"

A cold glance of inquiry started from Damer's eyes as he looked, first at the body of the dead man, and then at Pretty's face.

The Indian's hand was frantically clutching at his knife sheath. The soldier had not forgotten the knife when he took Pretty's rifle from him. The shining blade of the Indian rested alongside his own.

"No," answered Damer. The thought of treachery was chill within him. "You stop this monkey business and drag Big Head out here to the trail."

"Look!"

The word fairly rasped from the Indian's throat. Holding up both hands, palms outward, Pretty supplicated the soldier.

He saw—on the palm of the left hand—two pin pricks, about an inch apart. Even while he stared, two tiny drops of blood started. A rattlesnake bite! As Damer hesitated, The Indian commenced, with an inhuman snarl, to bite chunks of flesh from the wound. A few seconds, and the poison would be swiftly traversing its way to the Indian's heart.

"Here!"

Damer whipped out his knife and spun it, hilt first, to Pretty.

A swift snatch at the blade, a circular sweep of the steel, the swishing sound of parting flesh, and half of Pretty's palm lay on the burning sand.

Pity filled the soldier's heart as he stared, ox-eyed and dumb, at the frightful, bleeding hand, the glare of horror in the Indian's eyes, and the dead body at their feet.

A rustling of dry scales over drier twigs acted as a shock. Damer was alert once more; his pistol arm brought the Colts to the front, as he saw four feet of sinuous, twisting body, the gyrating tail and cold, emotionless eyes of death incarnate, glide out from under the dead man's body, and coil as though to strike again. He blew off its head, and turned to the Indian.

Already a hideous gray mottling was appearing through the bronzed skin. The trailer's eyes were twitching, while great sobs burst from his lips as he struggled for breath. Too late—no chance for life. As the deadly poison swiftly sought his heart and the cold damp of fear burst out on his brow, more swiftly did the thought come to Pretty of revenge.

Damer had partly turned away, sick of the dreadful sight, when, with a noiseless spring Pretty was upon him.

They tumbled to the ground. Damer's gun had been knocked from his hand. As the Indian struck, again and again, with his knife, the soldier knew he was struggling for life, the Indian for a double death. With the trained muscles of a clean frontier life, Damer evaded the knife thrusts, twice, thrice; then he felt the cold steel grate against his ribs—a glancing blow. But the next one! There must be no next. With a frantic effort he managed to seize the hand which held the knife, and sought for Pretty's throat. He knew that his only hope for life lay in the quickness of the poison's work. Could he hold out against the last frenzy of death?

Over the dead body of Big Head they rolled, over the bloody headless body of the rattlesnake. Pretty was beating him in the face with the mangled hand.

Covered with blood and slowly weakening from his wound, the tensity of the soldier's grasp relaxed. With a sudden jerk, Pretty tore his arm free and drew back for the full stroke. As he glared in Damer's face, the soldier closed his eyes.

There was a sudden gasp, a mighty upheaval of the body, and Damer was tossed aside.

Pretty was dead. As Damer arose and looked down at the tragedy, far off, in the blue sky, the buzzards could be seen coming to their feast.—Outing.

Force of Habit.

A telephone inspector had occasion to visit a country house to repair the instrument, which had been out of order. After executing the necessary repairs he was informed that the lady of the house would like to see him in the drawing room. He was shown into the room by the servant, and at once noticed an old lady seated by the fire.

The old lady informed the inspector that she was slightly deaf, at the same time putting a large ear trumpet to her ear, in order that he might inform her what had gone wrong with the telephone.

Imagine her look of surprise when the inspector commenced by shouting down the ear trumpet, "Halloa! Are you there?"—Chicago Journal.

Four Questions.

Why do we always talk of putting on our coats and vests when we always put on first our vest and then our coat?

Why do we refer to the coverings of our feet as shoes and stockings when the stockings are first put on?

Why do we invite people to wipe their feet when we mean their shoes?

Why, in the olden times, did a father tell his son he would warm his jacket, when every one knew he meant his pantaloons?—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

THE PULPIT.

AN ELOQUENT SUNDAY SERMON BY THE REV. C. E. JEFFERSON.

Subject: Wanted: A New Vision of God.

New York City.—In the famous Broadway Tabernacle the pastor, the Rev. Charles Edward Jefferson, D. D., on Sunday preached the following sermon entitled, "Wanted: A New Vision of God:"

The great word on the lips of the coming preacher will be "God." The name which is above every name has been too much neglected in these recent years, even by the men anointed to proclaim it.

There have been reasons for this neglect. The evolutionary philosophy awakened a new and thrilling interest in man. Whence he came, how he started, what have been the processes of his climbing, these are the questions which have bewitched and absorbed us all. The phenomenal achievements of the last half century have worked toward the same result. Never has man been so wonderful as now, never has he done such mighty deeds. He is a miracle worker who says each evening, "I will do greater things to-morrow." His prowess, cunning and mastery are astounding, and to chant his praises has been our pastime and delight.

The miseries of man have also conspired to fix our attention on him. He has come from the country to the city and he is in trouble. He has become the victim of all sorts of economic and social forces, which have left him lying bleeding and half dead by the side of the road along which the strong have driven furiously to wealth and power. To lift the man who is down and place him on our beast and get him into the nearest inn is a problem of vast dimensions, and has taken a deal of our thought and time.

We have been caught in the complex of secondary causes, and have little inclination to consider the Cause which underlies them all. To many minds God's presence has become dim, His personality vague and doubtful. His holiness has been by many quite forgotten. In admiring or pitying the creature we have gotten our eyes off the Creator. Our first duty is the step of the prodigal, "I will arise and go back to my father."

The prophet of the coming days is going to say in the words of one of old, "I have yet somewhat to say on God's behalf." Man's cause has been pleaded eloquently and long, and the time has arrived for the forthputting of the claims of God. Beginning at the earth always ends in Babel, beginning at the throne of God leads to Pentecost.

We are coming back to the old evangelism of the apostles. Wherever Paul went his message was, "We pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God." Simon Peter met the uproar in the streets of Jerusalem on the Day of Pentecost with a great declaration of God—"I will pour out of My spirit upon all flesh"; and from first to last it was upon what God had done in Christ that he based his passionate exhortation to repentance.

All deep-eyed men are seeing with increasing clearness that it is not by ecclesiattical might or political power, but by the spirit of Jehovah that the mountains of iniquity are to be leveled and the rough places made smooth. The evangelism of the coming days will begin with God.

Three doctrines will be counted cardinal. In the forefront will be placed the sovereignity of God. If the Puritan passion has died out of our blood it is because the Puritan conception of God has faded out of our hearts. What we need to see to-day is a throne with God on it. Democracy has made havoc with our ideas of authority, and the result is a flabbiness of responsibility and a laxness of conduct which unless counteracted, will lead to our ruin. The pessimism and hopelessness so prevalent to-day, even among professing Christains are the direct result of a failure to grasp the fundamental doctrine of God's omnipotence.

Along with the doctrine of God's sovereignity will go the doctrine of His immanence. It is an old doctrine couched in fresh phraseology and with new light shot through it by modern science. The doctrine is written large across the pages of Scripture, and in every land and time the saints have known that God dwells in the hearts of men. In Him we live and move and have our being, as the apostle long ago declared. And centuries before Paul's day a Hebrew poet thrilled by the thought of God's omnipotence wrote the 139th Psalm.

That God is above all and through all, and in all, and that of Him and through Him and to Him are all things is one of the commonplaces of the Bible; and whether we use the old phrase, "the indwelling God," or the phrase now most popular, "the immanent God," the thought needs to be emphasized and wrought into the consciousness of the Christians of our day that God is in His world and dwells in special fulness in the hearts of those who love and serve Him.

Nor will the holiness of God be forgotten. The decadence of the sense of sin has been caused by the blurring of the doctrine of God's holiness. Holy Father was the title by which Jesus knew God, and it is thus that we must know Him if it is to be well with our souls. The forms in which retribution was often preached in preceding generations were so grotesque and arbitrary that some of us have been ashamed to say it right out clear and strong, that God punishes men for their sins. In the coming day we are going to believe again that whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap, that without holiness no man can see the Lord, that there is no peace unto the wicked, that the soul that sinneth dies in the act of its sinning, and that God is calling upon men everywhere to repent.

No man acquainted with the teaching of the latest science need be ashamed or afraid to preach the most rigorous doctrine of retribution. "You preachers do not tell men often enough that every sin brings its inevitable punishment," is a sentence spoken to me years ago by a physician. Behold the goodness and severity of God! This is the completing statement of the apostle, and the prophets who are redeem the twentieth century will let the sentence stand without abridgment.

With cities rotting at our doors and the wail of the damned ringing in our ears, and with an ancient empire crumbling to pieces before our eyes, it is not hard to believe that while God is ready always to forgive the penitent He will by no means spare the guilty.

Behold your God! will be the stirring note of the coming message, and the only God who will stir the hearts of the people will be the God who is revealed in Jesus Christ. Christ is God manifest in the flesh. He is the express image of His father. Through Him the revelation of the Infinite heart has come. In seeing Him we see the Father, and we come to the Father only through Him. We do not see Christ as He is unless we see in Him the majesty and autnority of a king. We have too much followed the idea of Goethe and Carlyle, that Christianity is a religion of sorrow, and that its chief end is that of consolation. This leads men like Mr. John Morley to call the gospel a "sovereign legend of pity," and to long for a wider Gospel of justice and progress.

Christianity is more than a legend of pity, it is a bugle blast calling men to battle. Jesus is more than the consoler of people in trouble. He is the anointed King of men. He announces His Kingship again and again in His discourses, and it is as Lord and Messiah that Peter presents Him to His countrymen on the Day of Pentecost. To submit to Him unconditionally is man's wisdom and peace. It is not the picture of the earthly Jesus with His hand upon a leper that this age needs most of all to see. We need to see the Son of God as John, the apostle, saw Him, with many crowns upon His head, the universal Sovereign of the kingdoms of life.

God's condescension will also be seen afresh in Christ. The great words spoken in the upper chamber will be restudied, and upon many hearts they will fall with the emancipating charm of a fresh revelation. "Ye shall know that I am in My Father, and ye in Me and I in you." "If a man love Me he will keep My words, and My Father will love him, and we will come unto him and make Our abode with him." We do not know God as He is until we have seen Him not only high and lifted up, sitting on a throne, but also as the apostle saw Him, standing as a suppliant, saying, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock: if any man hear My voice and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with Me."

In Christ also we see God's indignation against sin. He is the holy Christ. Though merciful, He says to workers of iniquity—I never knew you. Though gracious, He says to transgressors of God's will—depart from Me ye cursed. Tender above all tenderness known to mortals, He paints pictures of loss and pain and doom so terrible that they have burned themselves into the retinas of men's eyes and into the gray matter of their brains forever. Wherever His Gospel is preached men cannot go to the judgment saying, I did not know the heinousness nor the awful penalties of wrong-doing.

With the Tractarian method of seventy years ago there began a fresh emphasis upon the authority and sacraments of the Church. To-day it is the Church which is still uppermost in many minds, and its worship, its unity and its government are counted all-important themes.

With Maurice and Kingsley there began a new interest in the social aspect of Christianity, and men began to labor for the establishment of what was called Christian Socialism. This force has not yet spent itself.

But neither High Churchmen with their sacraments, nor social settlement workers with their philanthropies are equal to the crisis which is now upon us.

It is not a loftier conception of the Church, nor a wider diffusion of culture and social cheer which is most urgently demanded by our times. What is needed is a fresh vision of God, a new baptism of spiritual life, a lifting of the heart to higher levels of aspiration and devotion. The world groans and travails in pain, waiting for the appearance of a new race of prophets—men of insight and of courage, who endowned with the Holy Ghost shall say to our generation in tones which burn with fervent heat: "Le the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; and let him return unto the Lord, and He will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for He will abundantly pardon."—Congregationalist and Christian World.

Happiness in Spite of Deprivations.

If I am so happy in spite of my deprivations, if my happiness is so deep that it is a faith, so thoughtful that it becomes a philosophy of life, my testimony to the creed of optimism is worth hearing. My optimism does not rest on the absence of evil. I can say with conviction that the struggle which evil necessitates is one of the greatest blessings. It teaches us that, although the world is full of suffering, it is full also of the overcoming of it. My optimism rests on a glad belief in the preponderance of good and a willing effort always to co-operate with the good that it may prevail. I try to increase the power God has given me to see the best in everything and every one, and make that best a part of my life. To what is good I open the doors of my being, and jealously shut them against what is bad.—Helen Keller.

A Good Man's Humility.

An appeal was made one Sabbath evening in a church for volunteers to work for Christ. No sooner was the appeal made than a Mr. Ketchum, a wealthy New York merchant, rose up and offered his services to the pastor. The minister said, "In what way, Mr. Ketchum?" and the reply was, "As a hod carrier." What he meant was that he was willing to serve in any humble capacity in which he could be most useful. How often have I thought of that good man's humility. And God blessed him as afterwards he went from house to house asking parents to send their children to the Sabbath-school that was connected with his church.

Present Obedience Necessary.

If you are truly aroused to seek heavenly comfort, you will soon discover that this is only to be found in the path of present obedience.—Chimes.

You Are Wanted.

Men are wanted to do the hard work of pushing the car of salvation along; and men should welcome the duty every day in the week.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR JUNE 25.

Review of the Lessons For the Second Quarter of the Year—Read John xvi., 1-13—Golden Text, John xx., 31—The Summaries.

Lesson I. Topic: Jesus the Shepherd of souls. Place: Jerusalem. Jesus tells them that He is the shepherd of the sheep; He is also the door; the Pharisees and false professors were the thieves and robbers trying to destroy the sheep. Those who trust in Christ and enter in through the door shall be saved; Christ comes to give His life for the sheep; the wolf—Satan—tries to destroy the sheep, the hireling fleeth when the wolf cometh; the Good Shepherd cares for and protects the sheep; other sheep—the Gentiles—were soon to be brought into His church. Although He laid down His life yet He would take it again.

II. Topic: Jesus in the crisis times of life. Places: Bethabara, in Perea; Bethany, near Jerusalem. Lazarus was sick and his sisters, Mary and Martha, sent to Jesus informing Him; Jesus remained in Bethabara two days; then took His disciples and went to Bethany; when He arrived in Bethany Lazarus had been dead and buried four days; Martha met Jesus first; Mary was then called; they mourned that Christ had not been there before he died; Jesus groaned in spirit and wept; the Jews said, "Behold, how He loved him;" Jesus asked them to take away the stone; Christ prays; calls with a loud voice; Lazarus then came forth; many of the Jews believed in Jesus when they saw the miracle.

III. Topic: Love's service to the Master. Place: Bethany, at the home of Simon the leper. Jesus is again in Bethany; a feast is provided for Him and His disciples; Lazarus who was raised from the dead sat with Him at the table; during the supper Mary anointed Christ's head and feet with very costly ointment; the whole house was filled with the odor of the ointment; she wiped His feet with her hair.

IV. Topic: The kingship of Jesus. Place: From Bethany to Jerusalem and in the temple courts; Jesus took His disciples and started toward Jerusalem. The people who had heard of the raising of Lazarus crowded around Him; a great throng of people came out from Jerusalem to meet Him; they greeted Him as a king and cried, "Hosanna;" Christ rode on a young colt; certain Greeks desired to see Him; Andrew and Philip tell Jesus; Jesus came out where the Greeks were and taught them.

V. Topic: Jesus teaches humility. Place: An upper room in Jerusalem. Jesus and His disciples are about to partake of the Passover supper; the disciples disputed over which should be the greatest and Jesus teaches them a lesson in humility by rising and washing their feet; Peter objected; Jesus answers his objection; Peter says, "Not my feet only:" Christ refers to His betrayal.

VI. Topic: Aids to fruitful service. Place: In Jerusalem in an upper room. The supper is over; Judas has left and is planning to betray Him; Jesus teaches His disciples important truths through the figure of a grapevine; He is the vine; His Father is the husbandman; Christians are the branches; the branches must be purged that they bring forth much fruit; those who abide not in Christ are cast into the fire; Christ is glorified when we bring forth much fruit.

VII. Topic: Christ's prayer for His followers. Place: In an upper room in Jerusalem. Before Christ and His disciples go out into the darkness of the night Christ prays: 1. For Himself. 2. For His disciples. 3. For all believers. He desired that they be kept from the evils that are in the world; that they be sanctified; that they may know the truth; that all believers should be truly united; that they may be partakers of His glory; He asks that His love may abide in them.

VII. Topic: Christ's challenge and vindication. Place: Pilate's judgment hall. The Jews accuse Jesus; He is taken before the high priest; He is then taken before Pilate; it was early in the morning; the Jews would not enter the judgment hall; Pilate went out to them; demands a formal charge; questions Jesus; is convinced that Christ is innocent; they clamored for Barabbas and asked that Jesus might be crucified.

IX. Topic: The crucifixion of Jesus Christ. Place: Golgotha. Christ goes forth bearing His cross; a great multitude follows; He was crucified at 9 o'clock; two thieves were crucified with Him; Pilate wrote the title in Hebrew, Greek and Latin; the soldiers cast lots for Christ's tunic; Psalm 22:18 is thus fulfilled; Jesus provides for His mother.

X. Topic: The resurrection of Jesus Christ. Place: A garden near Calvary. The women were early at the tomb; several women and John and Peter had left; Mary tarried; two angels appeared to disciples in the upper room.

XI. Topic: The ministry of the risen Christ. Place: Isle of Patmos. John had been banished to Patmos; John was in the spirit on the Lord's day—Sunday; heard a voice; saw seven golden candlesticks and one like unto the Son of man standing in the midst; Christ is described; John fell at His feet as dead; was told to write what he had seen; this same Christ is still walking in the midst of His people.

XII. Topic: The blessedness of heaven. Place: Isle of Patmos. John had a vision of the new heaven and the new earth; in the midst of the city was a beautiful river of water; there was also the tree of life which bare twelve manner of fruits; servants served Him; there was no night; the Lord gave light to the city.

CLANTON TAKES ALL THREE.

The Clanton boys won all three of the games from the Calera team here last week. The Calera boys played good ball at times but as a whole, were far outclassed by the home team.

The first game was played Thursday evening, and for a few innings it looked as if the game would be close, but in the sixth inning the locals took a liking to Mr. Hunt's balls and batted him all over the lot; the team went to pieces behind him and the game became too one-sided to be interesting, ending 15 to 5 in favor of Clanton.

The second game was played Friday morning, and was the most exciting and closely contested game ever played in Clanton. In this game Calera used three players from Maylene as well as three from Columbiana, while Clanton used two from Montgomery. After 9 innings of pretty playing, Clanton won by a score of 2 to 1. The 3d game was called in the 7th inning with the score 10 to 0 in favor of the locals. Custred and Hunt were again the opposing pitchers, Custred pitched a nice game, only one of the visitors reaching second, while Mr. Hunt was unable to make any improvement over his first performance.

The Clanton team plays to day (Thursday) and to-morrow in Prattville, where they will have an opportunity of showing what they can do against one of the strongest amuter teams in the State.

Arrangements have been made for a strong team from Bay Minette to play here the Fourth. The team has played games with Mobile, and several towns in Florida, and only lost one game this season. A peculiar feature of the team is a deaf and dumb pitcher, who is said to be one of the best on the team. Although he can neither hear or speak, he is the liveliest boy on the team, and his funny antics and gestures always keep the spectators laughing.

ON THINGS IN GENERAL.

Verbena, June 19, 1905

Editor Banner—I was impressed by your reference in your last issue to the committee or whoever had the barbecue hand bills printed in Birmingham instead of allowing it done in our county town. In this you took the proper view, for if we expect patronage in any line or from any source then we should patronize those to whom we look for patronage. My advice to all is to first be true to yourself, and the average person who is true to himself is true to others. Patronize your home school, church, doctor, lawyer, merchant, as well as your county or home paper, and last but most important, be sure, young man, to select and marry if you can, one of your home raised, rosy cheeked girls, for I tell you they are a fine investment.

Recuring to the original proposition will say, isn't it funny that the average man wants to patronize some one or some thing other than that which he should or which is to his best interest? One man or set of men are probably excusable in this, viz.: The man who has a bad case in the court of his county, usually seeks foreign counsel, because he does not desire justice, and hence he goes out among strange gods under whom he hopes to get shelter, but the man who sticks to his friends and homefolks in every department of life is the one who does his country good and the reflection back upon him is both honorable and profitable in the long run. Had I had charge of the printing of those hand bills I would have first given it with any other printing to the county paper, possibly not asking the price of the work; after it was done I should have asked a contribution and in consideration of my liberality would have naturally expected a liberal contribution, and I feel sure this would have been done in case of the hand bills, as it is it is now the privilege at least if not the pleasure of the Banner to cast its mite in the contribution box and await developements, and if you do I feel it will be "as bread cast on the water coming back fifty and four fold many days hence." Suppose you try it, friend Crichton. I don't hear much of the celebration on July 4th, what is the matter? Suppose we leave off a lot of the visiting communications and it is to be especially desired, I feel sure, that those who sign any name at all should select more euphoneous names than has appeared at the foot of the average correspondence recently in both our county papers, and give us something edifying as well as interesting or nothing at all. Very few people care to know that cousin Jane has been visiting sister Sal or that Miss Jones has returned from a very pleasant trip to some wide place in the road, or that uncle Snipe went fishing. Then think of the nom de plumes which have appeared lately, viz.: "Long Goody," "Long Bill" and forty others which would not last on the mind of any thinking man longer than he saw it, but would dispel it from his mind with utter disgust. If I am right I ask your readers to say so, if wrong let them say so and I will promise faithfully not to pen another line.

In conclusion, will say that Verbena is going to try to furnish the best teams, the best looking men and women and best grub that goes to Clanton, so if we beat you need not be surprised. So let each individual and each community do their whole duty and success will be ours. I, as vice-president of our county associatiation, have written letters to some of most noted men of our State, asking them to address us on the Fourth, and it is to be desired that our president, secretary and our committee shall all be up and doing to see that each and every nook and corner of our county is represented on July 4th, and that even the professional grub hunter should not go away hungry.

Yours truly,
F. A. GULLEDGE.

THE SEPARATE PRIMARY DEPARTMENT

There is room and need in the Sunday school for all, old and young, youth and middle aged, but those for whom it was designed and planned, those who receive the greatest good and to whom it means the most are the children. Their minds are plastic and yielding, a waxen tablet on which the stylus of learning may write what it will and it hardens in memory, ineffaceable through the longest life; their hearts are soft and tender and the thoughts and feelings implanted therein show in life's wearing even till the "silver cord be loosed." So especial stress is laid on primary work in the Sunday school, especial attention is given to classes of young children, the best methods of teaching are sought, especial meetings are held for primary teachers, especial place is given primary work on convention programs, in all things, thoughtful consecrated men and women are doing their best for the little children in the Sunday school. Many changes are the outcome of thought and development in this work and one of the most important is the Separate Primary Department The realization has come to many teachers that it is impossible to teach little children properly and successfully in the same room with the rest of the Sunday school. For many reasons a separate room is best. It secures better attention. When all classes are in the same room, the children are usually looking around to see what the others are doing—in a separate room this is impossible. Primary children should be taught differently from the older pupils—a blackboard, special songs, pictures, and motion exercises, should be used with them, but all this would attract the attention of the other clusses.

The little children should have their own simple songs and they should be taught to pray, being led in a simple child's prayer by the teacher, they repeating it after her, and should be taught to offer little prayers of their own. This cannot well be done when they are in the same room with the rest of the school. In many villages and country churches, a separate room would be too expensive, but its substitute, the "curtained off corner," is within reach of all. This has all the advantages of a separate room and need not cost over two dollars. A convenient corner of the church, a post 3 inches square and 7 feet high, placed at right angles to the walls, wire to reach from wall to post and to the other wall, cloth to curtain the two sides—and you have a separate primary department. In a few years we hope to have one in every Sunday school school in Chilton county.

Mr. J. T. Barber of Irwinville, Ga., always keeps a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy at hand ready for instant use. Attacks of colic, cholera morbus and diarrhoea come on so suddenly that there is no time to hunt a doctor or go to the store for medicine. Mr. Barber says: "I have tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy which is one of the best medicines I ever saw. I keep a bottle of it in my room as I have had several attacks of colic and it has proved to be the best medicine I ever used." Sold by Upchurch Drug co., Clanton; A. Horn, Thorsby.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

Special correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, June 19, 1905.

With the aftermath of the Post Office Department scandal in "our midst," on account of the trial of several more of the grafters, we are confronted with more of the rottenness that is constantly coming to the front in this Republican administration of the public affairs of the United States. There seems to be nothing but grab, graft and steal in this Republican administration. It positively is getting to be so common here that it excites no comment when some man comes to you and says that something new and rotten "in the state of Denmark" has been unearthed. The latest scandals that have come to the light of day is the peculation of some $50,000.00 from the Smithsonian Institution by one of the trusted employes, and which the government will never recover because the surety does not cover the amount stolen; the sale of examination papers in the marine corps service; the sale of examination papers in the civil service and a lot of other things that do not attract attention, because they are too small in the face of bigger things.

The people of the country seem to be too busy to regulate these things by their votes. They seem to think they will regulate themselves, because they constantly vote the Republican ticket until that party, entrenched in power, seems to believe that the people are with it, no matter what it does, that it owns the public offices of the country to exploit them as it sees fit, and its individual members work upon the hypothesis that public office is a "private snap" and not a public trust. When, oh, when, will the people get their eyes open to the facts that stare them in the face and turn down a party that has ever robbed them and despoiled them of their dearest heritage? If there is not something done in that direction soon, then the good, conservative people of the country will be amazed to find the socialistic vote of the country increasing to such proportions as to become a menance to the existing institutions of the country, for there is an old saying that when things get to a certain rotten stage they mend themselves.

In case that saying be true, then it is high time that the conservative, right thinking people of the country come to their senses and put a stop to this peculation, robbing and graft by turning the rascals out of office. Unless they do so our government will be swept from its moorings and we will enter upon the unknown sea of socialism to drift we know not where. Now is the time to begin to think and the next election is the time to act, or forever after hold your peace when it is everlastingly too late.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

Special correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, June 19, 1905

With the aftermath of the Post Office Department scandal in "our midst," on account of the trial of several more of the grafters, we are confronted with more of the nastiness that is constantly coming to the front in this Republican administration of the public affairs of the United States. There seems to be nothing but grab, graft and steal in this Republican administration. It positively is getting to be so common here that it excites no comment when some man comes to you and says that something new and rotten "in the state of Denmark" has been unearthed. The latest scandals that have come to the light of day is the peculation of some $50,000.00 from the Smithsonian Institution by one of the trusted employes, and which the government will never recover because the surety does not cover the amount stolen; the sale of examination papers in the marine corps service; the sale of examination papers in the civil service and a lot of other things that do not attract attention, because they are too small in the face of bigger things.

The people of the country seem to be too busy to regulate these things by their votes. They seem to think they will regulate themselves, because they constantly vote the Republican ticket until that party, entrenched in power, seems to believe that the people are with it, no matter what it does, that it owns the public offices of the country to exploit them as it sees fit, and its individual members work upon the hypothesis that public office is a "private snap" and not a public trust. When, oh, when, will the people get their eyes open to the facts that stare them in the face and turn down a party that has ever robbed them and despoiled them of their dearest heritage? If there is not something done in that direction soon, then the good, conservative people of the country will be amazed to find the socialistic vote of the country increasing to such proportions as to become a menance to the existing institutions of the country, for there is an old saying that when things get to a certain rotten stage they mend themselves.

In case that saying be true, then it is high time that the conservative, right thinking people of the country come to their senses and put a stop to this peculation, robbing and graft by turning the rascals out of office. Unless they do so our government will be swept from its moorings and we will enter upon the unknown sea of socialism to drift we know not where. Now is the time to begin to think and the next election is the time to act, or for ever after hold your peace when it is everlastingly too late.

OLD CONFEDERATES MEET

In the Fifteenth Annual Reunion at Louisville. The Most Gorgeous of all. Joyous and Happy Hearts are They.

THEY LIVE THEIR LIVES OVER AMID FESTIVITIES.

A Happy Welcome From Kentucky—Many Alabamians Prominent in Their Gayeties—Owens, of Alabama, Commander of the Sons—New Orleans Won for Next Year.

Louisville, Ky.—Veterans of the old Confederacy, grizzled with years and many bowed with suffering, but all full of enthusiasm, filled the streets of Louisville Tuesday.

The morning, afternoon and night trains brought the hosts from the everglades of Florida; from the pine woods of Georgia; from the sand hills of Alabama; the knobs of sunny Tennessee; from the tar forests of North Carolina; from the plains of South Carolina; from every point in the great South.

Some of them came garbed just as they were when the first call to arms was sounded. Hundreds of them laid away their old uniforms in anticipation of just such an event as this reunion.

Age has been kind to these old fellows. Some are bent and their hair is silvered, but youth is still in their hearts. To have been at the railway stations and seen former comrades meet, one would not have thought that sixty and seventy years had passed over their heads. They greeted each other as cheerily as school boys.

Welcome from State and City.

The meeting Wednesday was to make possible the official welcome to the veterans from Kentucky and Louisville. Gov. Beckham came to Louisville from Frankfort to express his pleasure in having the veterans in the state and to assure them of the state's hospitable welcome. Mayor Grainger handed over the city's keys and declared that everything the city had was deeded over to the veterans and their friends.

Gen. Lee Arrives.

Gen. Lee, the venerable commander-in-chief, entered the hall at 9:45 o'clock, with Gen. William E. Michle, the adjutant general. They were instantly recognized by the convention, which stood while the general was taking his seat. He was looking fresh and active and bowed in acknowledgment of the cheers which greeted him.

An informal reception was held by Gen. Lee for fifteen minutes before the convention was called to order, the old soldiers gathering around their great leader to shake his hand and express to him their love and esteem.

Over 2,000 Delegates.

"The Committee on Credentials will make its report," called out James Stone, the reading clerk, whose big voice could be heard all over the building. The chairman then read the following report, showing the number of camps and delegates present as 703 camps and 2,268 delegates, divided as follows according to states:

Alabama, 173; Arkansas, 134; District of Columbia, 7; Florida, 82; Georgia, 215; Illinois, 2; Indiana, 2; Indian Territory, 41; Kentucky, 143; Louisiana, 129; Maryland, 18; Mississippi, 189; Missouri, 89; North Carolina, 127; Northwest, 30; Ohio, 2; Oklahoma, 17; Pacific, 25; South Carolina, 129; Tennessee, 180; Texas, 397; Virginia, 119; West Virginia, 18. Total, 2,268.

The report of the Historical Committee was called for and submitted by Gen. Clement A. Evans, the chairman. The report, which is important, was read by Mr. Stone and was received with the most careful attention.

The report of the chairman of the Confederate Memorial Association was read and affirmed. It was a careful treatise by Gen. Evans on the work done during the year. The report is in part as follows:

Robert on "Battle Abbey."

Gen. S. D. Lee, Commander U. C. V.

In compliance with the provisions of our charter we make the present herewith the report of the Executive Committee, and that of the secretary and superintendent.

In our report last year we expressed gratification that we were at last "in sight" of the completion of our cherished plans—that we had secured the $100,000 to be raised by us to meet the condition of the contribution of the same amount of Comrade Charles B. Rouss—and that we hoped very soon to go forward in the actual building of our Memorial Hall—"Battle Abbey," as it is properly called.

We confidently hoped that we could at this meeting report our building at least commenced. But we then reported that the only obstacle in our way was that the $40,000 balance due from the Rouss estate was hung up by an attachment gotten out by the former secretary and superintendent, J. C. Underwood, in the suit he had instituted against the C. M. A., in the United States court at Brooklyn, N. Y., for the alleged commissions due him. We regret to have to report now that this same obstacle still exists.

Delayed by Suits.

Despite our earnest efforts to get a trial of this suit, we were not able to do so until February last, and then, to our great surprise and that of our able counsel, the jury gave a verdict for about $16,000 against us. Regarding this verdict as very unjust, our counsel took an appeal to a higher court, and are very confident that they will be able to set the verdict aside. But we have to encounter once more "the law's delays," and meantime the Rouss estate is inhibited by the attachment proceedings from paying us the balance of the $40,000 due, or any part of it.

Report of Executive Committee.

Following the report of the Board of Trustees of the Memorial, the report of the Executive Committee was made.

Women to Build Davis Monument.

"The work of erecting a monument to our great president, Jefferson Davis, has been turned over to the women of the South, and we will now have a report showing what these great and good women have done for the cause."

The report of Mrs. N. V. Randolph, president of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, was then read. It showed that $69,000 has been raised and is now in hand.

"The monument is an assured fact and will be unveiled in Richmond on June 3, 1907," the report stated, and the reader was interrupted by a strain of applause. The report was received and filed amid enthusiasm. Gen. Lee paid a high tribute to the women and the work they have done in such a good and noble cause.

Gen. Lee Wanted No Controversies.

"A man named Miles is having a controversy with our own Mrs. Jefferson Davis and we want to express our condemnation of that man and his action," said a grizzled, bearded veteran from Texas.

"No, we must enter into no controversy," said Gen. Lee. "We must not go into politics and there must be no stirring up of such things." Gen. Lee's remarks were received with approval and the man who had made the motion sat down.

The Memorial Exercises.

Dr. Jones, the chaplain general, presided at the memorial exercises. In opening them he said he would not even mention the names of those who died during the past year, as they are too well known. He mentioned the names of Gen. Bates and Gen. Fitzhugh Lee, and then asked the Rev. Dr. N. M. Woods, of Louisville, a Confederate soldier, to open the exercises with prayer. The convention stood while Dr. Woods asked God's blessing on the old soldier who are so near the life's journey end.

Elect Old Officers.

The United Confederate Veterans re-elected their old officers as follows:

Commander-in-Chief, Lieutenant General Stephen D. Lee.

Commander Trans-Mississippi Department, General W. L. Cabell, Texas.

Commander Army of Tennessee Department, General Clement A. Evans, Georgia.

Commander Army of North Virginia Department, C. Irving Walker, South Carolina.

The nominations were made by acclamation, although there was an attempt to defeat the re-election of General Cabell. Post No. 2, of Texas, entered a protest to the re-election of General Cabell, saying that he was not the unanimous choice of the Texas delegation, but the protestor was hooted down and three cheers given for "Old Tige" Cabell while the secretary recorded the election of the old Texan.

Afternoon Session.

The afternoon session began at 3:15 o'clock with the convention hall only about half filled. The first thing was the address by Gen. N. E. Harris. It was the regular annual address which is always delivered by some Confederate.

"The convention will come to order," said Gen. Lee, rapping on the table. "I am sorry that so few persons are here to listen to this address. Those who are not here will be the losers."

"That is right," called out a Georgian who belonged to the camp of the speaker.

"We will now have the annual address," continued Gen. Lee. "It will be delivered by a man who was with Gen. Morgan and it will be worthy the careful attention of the delegates. I now take pleasure in introducing to you Gen Nat E. Harris, of Macon, Ga.

Gen. Harris was received with a burst of applause, and the sentiment expressed by him woke up the veterans, who cheered him to the echo. The speaker painted a picture of the battle of the post, with the soldiers in line of battle and the famous generals in command. He said he could see them as they stood waiting for the signal to fire. As he named the men who are loved by the South the convention expressed by their voices their great affection for these dead heroes. Mr. Harris is an orator and made a magnificent and eloquent address, discussing the causes of the war.

Wanted More Speech.

"We've got half an hour yet, and we would like to hear you," said a delegate. Gen. Harris yielded to the demand and continued his speech, telling of the burning of a city and the extinguishing of it by a storm of water from the heavens.

Sleeping as sweetly as if he had been in his bed at home, a one-legged Confederate sat on the stage during the address, enjoying life. He was dreaming of the days of the war, and when touched by a comrade he almost climbed over one of the press tables. He said he was dreaming of a battle in which he had fought and thought some one was cutting at him with a saber.

Gen. Harris closed after speaking for more than two hours, and he and his wife were congratulated by those of the veterans who could reach him on the stage.

"Order! Come to order!" We have business before us," said Gen. Lee, rapping with his gavel. After order had been restored, Gen. A. B. Booth was introduced, and on behalf of New Orleans invited the veterans to meet them next year. He read a number of inducements which have been offered by the mayor and common council of New Orleans. As he began to speak there were cries of:

"New Orleans! New Orleans! We want to go there next time !"

New Orleans an Easy Winner.

Gen. Booth then read an invitation from the governor of Louisiana to meet in New Orleans in 1906. He spoke only a few minutes, and when he said "Good!" He was hot and dry and wanted to get away.

Miss Louise Blanchard sang "Dixie," and if there had been any doubt about where the convention would go, this settled it for good and all, for the old soldiers simply went wild over the young girl who was singing to them.

"I move we make the selection of New Orleans unanimous," said a delegate, but Gen. George W. Gordon, of Nashville, insisted upon being allowed to speak, and Gen. Lee required silence when Gen. Gordon spoke.

He extended a hearty invitation to the veterans to meet in Nashville in 1906, and introduced G. H. Baskette, editor of the Nashville Banner, who seconded the nomination of Nashville and gave reasons why that city should be selected as the next meeting place.

Dr. W. J. McMurfay seconded the nomination of Nashville and Gov. Jones, of Arkansas, seconded the nomination of New Orleans. Texas seconded the nomination of New Orleans, and when Gen. Lee called on all those in favor of New Orleans to stand up it seemed that the whole convention rose as one man. Later a motion was made to make the selection of New Orleans unanimous, and this was called.

Alabamians in Line.

Raphael Semmes Camp, of Mobile, led the Alabama division, which was commanded by Gen. George P. Harrison. E. K. Jones Camp, Huntsville, was in second place, and then came Camp Hutto, of Jasper, the members of this organization being few in numbers but old in years. The average age of the twelve members of this camp is beyond the four score mark, the oldest being 96, while the youngest is 74. The Fourth brigade, of Anniston, was the last of the Alabamians in line.

Plaudits for Gen. Lee.

His form as erect and his carriage as perfect as it was when he first entered the army of the South so many years ago, looking every inch the soldier in his gray uniform, the commanding general of these veterans, Gen. Stephen D. Lee, stood in the center of the gathering and received the plaudits of the throng which could not cheer him enough. This same man delivered an address in defense of the South and the cause for which it fought that was a masterpiece.

Old Friends Meet.

The scenes at the meetings between some were full of pathos. At the Seventh street station there was a meeting between a man who fought in the Tenth Tennessee and another who went to the front in one of the Virginia regiments. Neither had seen the other since the surrender at Appomattox. One was without an arm, and the other had lost an eye. The trains bearing the two arrived at the station at about the same time, and they met at the gate. The recognition was instantaneous. They forgot all else, dropped their baggage and were in each other's arms in a second, while great tears rolled down their cheeks. "A drink of water from that man's canteen saved my life at Richmond," remarked the soldier from Tennessee, and arm in arm they strode up the street to live over again those old days.

All in Good Humor.

Then there was the amusing side to the scene. Many of the old veterans were in fine humor, despite their long ride, and when they reached the station platform they stretched their legs in a fashion that indicated they had lost none of their nimbleness. The old "rebel yell" resounded through the building, and many a citizen was greeted with a "Hi there, Yank," as they marched up the street. But everybody was in good humor with himself and his fellowman, and the jibes and "kids" were taken good naturedly by everyone.

All Had Mementoes.

Nearly every veterans brougat with him some memento of the war to show to some comrade and he always had its history at his fingers' ends and one did not need to urge him to get the story. An old fellow from North Carolina brought along half a cannon ball which he had picked up on the field of Lookout mountain after the batter. He has retained it all these years and never fails to take it to a reunion.

The most notable relic of all was the sword said to have been worn by Gen. John H. Morgan, Kentucky's noted cavalry leader. It was in the possession of Capt. Patrick M. Griffin, of Company B, Tenth Tennessee infantry, of Nashville. It came into his possession at Nashville Monday night. He secured it from Samuel Holt, a union veteran, who found it in the possession of a negro, who said he secured it from his father, who was Gen. Morgan's cook. Capt. Griffin gave $100 for the sword, and if it is found to be genuine he proposes to give it to the Kentucky Confederates of Morgan's men in this state. The sword appears to be genuine, and is in an excellent stage of preservation. On the scabbard is engraved: "Presented to Gen. John H. Morgan by the Lexington Rifles, 1861." It is gold mounted and at the end of the handle is a golden eagle.

Other veterans brought old pistols, guns, bullets, broken shells, and in fact almost every conceivable object that could possibly be used in a war of extermination.

Where They Met.

Under a canopy of crimson symbolic of blood shed by the men of the South for the cause which they believed to be right, the surviving soldiers who followed the stars and bars of the Confederacy gathered Wednesday in fifteenth annual reunion. With the gentle and kindly face of their old leader, Robert E. Lee, looking down on them from the end of the hall, and about them the flags for which they fought, the gray-aired and glay-clad veterans of the Confederacy came together for another renewal of old friendships, and to further signalize the glory of the South.

Their number woefully diminished, but their spirit undismayed; their strength weakened, but their wills unconquered, they took off their old army hats, waved them about their heads, and cheered for the South and the men who made her famous to all the world. The "rebel yell" sounded once more. That yell, which came to be feared by their enemies, now meant no animosity, no feeling but reverence, and no defiance but to age and the ravages of time.

"Dixie's" Words Not Changed.

"Shall we change the words of Dixie," said Gen. Lee.

"No, no, never, don't change the old words, let it stay as it is," yelled the veterans with one voice.

Gen. George P. Harrison, of Alabama, chairman of the Committee on Dixie, reported against making any change in the words of the famous song and the report was adopted by acclamation.

Ex-Gov. Fleming, of Florida, chairman of the Resolution Committee, made his report. The first resolution condemned war and expressed the hope that universal peace shall prevail. Another resolution called on the camps to have each member write a brief sketch of his life and deeds during the war. The third resolution urged the appropriation by Southern states of sufficient money for the erection of monuments in public battlefield parks.

Gen. A. P. Stewart Sends Greeting.

Borden Springs, Ala., June 15, 1905.—Gen. William E. Mickle, Chief of Staff, U. C. V. Convention, Louisville, Ky: My most grateful acknowledgements to the convention for their very kind message which is a great comfort to me. I am happy to say my health improves and I have in the good providence of God a fine prospect of recovery. My cordial, heartfelt greeting to the old soldiers. No truer men walk this earth.

ALEX. P. STEWART.

The following telegram of greeting from the Pacific coast to the United Confederate Veterans was received last night, addressed to Gen. William E. Mickle, the adjutant general:

Greetings from Albert Sidney Johnston Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy of San Francisco, and a cordial invitation to attend convention on October 3.

ANNIE B. VOORHIES.

Sons of Veterans Elect Officers.

The apparent lethargy that characterized the first day's session of the convention of the United Sons of Confederate Veterans had no part in the last session. The silence that grew monotonous under the reading of long reports on Wednesday gave way to the wildest enthusiasm Thursday and the old building fairly shook with the shouts that shot up from the pit to the dome. The sponsors and maids of honor who accompanied the Sons to the city occupied seats on the stage and in the boxes, while many of Louisville's fairest daughters swelled the audience in the main auditorium.

The first outburst from the sons and daughters was due to the appearance of a delegation of Confederate Veterans, consisting of Gen. I. C. Walker, of Charleston, S. C.; Col Bennett H. Young, of Louisville; and Capt. William T. Ellis, of Owensboro. No sooner had it been announced by Commander Tisdal that these veterans were in the hall and that addresses would be made by them than a tremendous yell went up. The demonstration was kept up for some minutes after the delegation had been seated on the stage. It was soon realized that all efforts toward transaction of business would have to be put aside until the three representatives of the lost cause had been heard from.

Mr. Owen By Acclamation.

There was little time wasted in the election of officers for the ensuing year. All were elected by acclamation, there being no opposition for any office. C. J. Owen, of Anniston, Ala., placed the name of Thomas M. Owen of Montgomery, Ala., before the convention for the office of commander-in-chief. He paid a high compliment to the fitness of his candidate for the position. The nomination was seconded by Thomas P. Stone, of Texas, delegations for other states joining in to make the election unanimous. After the adjutant general had cast the entire vote of the convention for Thomas M. Owen, he was declared elected. Thomas P. Stone, of Waco, Texas; R. B. Horton, of St. Louis, and W. McL. Fayssoux, of New Orleans were appointed a committee to escort the newly elected commander-in-chief to the platform, where he made a short speech in recognition of the honor. He said he was greatly touched by the honor conferred upon him by the Sons of Veterans. Said he:

"I propose to put my whole energy in the work of carrying forward our banner to more glorious success and achievements. We must keep the beacon brightly burning before the coming generations. This organization is a business one. We must do as well as be enthusiastic. I propose to go home and go to work. We must pledge ourselves to maintain the honor of the old soldier."

Other officers were chosen by acclamation, as follows:

Department Commander of Army Northern Virginia, E. Leslie Spence, of Richmond, Va.; Department of Army of Tennessee, R. L. E. Bynum, of Jackson, Tenn.; Department of Trans-Mississippi, I. J. Stockett, of Tyler, Texas. R. E. L. Bynum was re-elected to the office of department commander of the Army of Tennessee. I. J. Stockett, who was chosen to succeed C. A. Skeen as commander of Trans-Mississippi department is the retiring adjutant general of the United Sons of Confederate Veterans.

The Last Day.

Beneath the shot-riddled battle flags that floated over many a sodden field and to the thrilling strains of "Dixie," the song that cheered them on to victory, the veterans who wore the gray marched Friday in proud fore thousands of people Kentucky's chief city to honor.

Bowed with age and scars of battle with time and conclous, perha many of their number th the last review, the vete their uniforms, unfurled and with heads erect as permit, "fell in," ready to part in the last event of the annual reunion of the Unit erate Veterans.

There was not much in formation and order in the as the old boys were they marched with sparkl the old tunes, and heart cheers that have stirred annually since the reunion a part of life in the South the captured battle flags, turned by the government ried in Friday's parade and objects of interest and vene

Great Quebec Bridge.

A record-breaking cantilever bridge is being built in Canada. The Quebec bridge is its name, and it will be a record-breaker in that it will have a single span of 1,800 feet, no other bridge in the world being comparable to it in this respect, so far as can be learned. The river span of the Brooklyn bridge is 1,595 feet, that of the Williamsburg bridge being 1,000 feet. Excepting suspension bridges, the longest span of which is 1,600 feet, the longest span bridge yet completed is the Forth double-track railway bridge, with two spans of 1,710 feet each. Others are the Landsdowne bridge, India, with a span of 820 feet; the Wabash bridge across the Monongahela river at Pittsburg, with a span of 812 feet, and the bridge across the Mississippi at Memphis, Tenn., with a span of 790 1-2 feet.

Chamberlain's Delsarte Oratory.

Joseph Chamberlain was at one time rather given to "sawing the air" with his arms when alone and preparing one of his strenuous speeches. Once he issued an order that strangers were not to be shown his orchid houses. "I will not have my orchids broken," he said to his gardner, pointing to a spoiled valuable specimen. "I suppose you didn't happen to see it done?" "Yes, I did," replied the gardener. "What! You saw it done and said nothing!" exclaimed Mr. Chamberlain. "No, sir; I hardly dared," was the reply. "I insist on knowing who it was," angrily said the statesman. "Well, sir, it was yourself yesterday while you were speechifying."

Supply of Breadstuffs.

With present crop prospects it seems reasonable to expect the United States to contribute largely to the world's supply of breadstuffs in 1905-6, either in the raw grain or in the form of flour. In 1901 the wheat crop was appoximately 748,000,000 bushels. In 1904 it was about 550,000,000 bushels, almost 200,000,000 less than in 1901. The export trade decreased in almost the same proportion. The present year's wheat prospects are practically the same as in 1901, so if nothing interferes to materially lessen the crop, it is more than possible that a large share of this country's export trade in wheat and flour will be regained.

ALL DONE OUT.

Veteran Joshua Heller, of 706 South Walnut street, Urbana, Ill., says: "In the fall of 1899, after taking Doan's Kidney Pills I told the readers of this paper that they had relieved me of kidney trouble, disposed of a lame back with pain across my loins and beneath the shoulder blades. During the interval which has elapsed I have had occasion to resort to Doan's Kidney Pills when I noticed warnings of an attack. On each and every occasion the results obtained were just as satisfactory as when the pills were first brought to my notice. I just as emphatically endorse the preparation to-day as I did over two years ago."

Joaquin Miller.

The conclusion of the Portland Exposition management to have a Joaquin Miller Day is a just recognition. He is worthy of all honor, those of us who have read his poems think. I know of no late American poet who has given us as many quotable lines. He has not had the justice due from American critics, who live largely at the North, or at least sneeze when that section takes snuff. Was it because in 1863 he published that Democratic paper in Idaho which was suppressed for "disloyalty?" To have received praise for his genius he should have shrieked abolition like Whittier or joined John Brown's ruffians like Richard Realf. That was loyalty, patriotism and genius.

A Woman's Chance.

Every woman has the signs which tell the experienced whether she will live to be very old. Here are some of the supposed signs of longevity: The woman who appears taller in proportion when sitting down than when standing has a good chance of long life. If the body is long in proportion to the limbs, the heart, lungs and digestive organs are large. The pulse should beat with a full and normal stroke. Limbs and joints should be large and well formed. Those who resemble their mothers may expect to live longest, and the first-born is longer lived than other children. Out of a million persons 225 women reach the age of 100 years. Only eighty-two men in the same number are privileged to see a century of life. One of the secrets of long life is to have plenty of sleep, and other rules are: To keep the bedroom window open all night; take a bath every day; don't have pets in the living rooms; take daily exercise in the open air; watch the three D's—drinking water, dampness and drains; limit your ambitions; keep your temper, worry less, work more; preach less, practice more.

AN AWFUL SKIN HUMOR

Covered Head, Neck and Shoulders—Suffered Agony For Twenty-Five Years Until Cured by Cuticura.

"For twenty five years I suffered agony from a terrible humor, completely covering my head, neck and shoulders, discharging matter of such offensiveness to sight and smell that I became an object of dread. I consulted the most able doctors far and near, to no avail. Then I got Cuticura, and in a surprisingly short time I was completely cured. I advise all those suffering from skin humors to get Cuticura and end their misery at once. S. P. Keyes, 149 Congress Street, Boston, Mass."

Niagara.

Nearly fifty years ago the late Samuel Bowles, fresh from a visit to Niagara, expressed his enthusiasm as follows: "America is written all over the falls. Its roar is that of the nation. Its majestic sweep typifies the grand progress of America. The maddening, dashing, seething, buffing, pitching, uneasy flood typifies the intensity of the American mind and the vitality of American action. Here is the fountain of true young America; here the breast which gives it milk; here the nurture which gives it vitality." Had the grafters accomplished their purpose or should they do so in future it will not be America that will be written over the falls, because they will not be there. But on the black crags that remains as the ruins of their magnificence will be written beer and patent medicine signs, while above all should be inscribed "Ichabod."

Nervous Women

Their Sufferings Are Usually Due to Uterine Disorders Perhaps Unsuspected

A MEDICINE THAT CURES

Mrs. M. E. Shotwell

Can we dispute the well-known fact that American women are nervous?

How often do we hear the expression, "I am so nervous, it seems as if I should fly;" or, "Don't speak to me." Little things annoy you and make you irritable; you can't sleep, you are unable to quietly and calmly perform your daily tasks or care for your children.

The relation of the nerves and generative organs in women is so close that nine-tenths of the nervous prostration, nervous debility, the blues, sleeplessness and nervous irritability arise from some derangement of the organism which makes her a woman. Fits of depression or restlessness and irritability. Spirits easily affected, so that one minute she laughs, the next minute weeps. Pain in the ovaries and between the shoulders. Loss of voice; nervous dyspepsia. A tendency to cry at the least provocation. All this points to nervous prostration.

Nothing will relieve this distressing condition and prevent months of prostration and suffering so surely as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. M. E. Shotwell, of 103 Flatbush Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:

"I cannot express the wonderful relief I have experienced by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I suffered for a long time with nervous prostration, backache, headache, loss of appetite. I could not sleep and would walk the floor almost every night.

"I had three doctors and got no better, and life was a burden. I was advised to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has worked wonders for me.

"I am a well woman, my nervousness is all gone and my friends say I look ten years younger."

Will not the volumes of letters from women made strong by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound convince all women of its virtues? Surely you cannot wish to remain sick and weak and discouraged, exhausted each day, when you can be as easily cured as other women.

The Secret of Good Coffee
Even the best housekeepers cannot make a good cup of coffee without good material. Dirty, adulterated and queerly blended coffee such as unscrupulous dealers shovel over their counters won't do. But take the pure, clean, natural flavored LION COFFEE, the leader of all package coffees—the coffee that for over a quarter of a century has been daily welcomed in millions of homes—and you will make a drink fit for a king in this way:
HOW TO MAKE GOOD COFFEE.
Use LION COFFEE, because to get best results you must use the best coffee.
Grind your LION COFFEE rather fine. Use "a tablespoonful to each cup, and one extra for the pot." First mix it with a little cold water, enough to make a thick paste, and add white of an egg (if egg is to be used as a settler), then follow one of the following rules:
1st. WITH BOILING WATER. Add boiling water, and let it boil THREE MINUTES ONLY. Add a little cold water and set aside five minutes to settle. Serve promptly.
2d. WITH COLD WATER. Add your cold water to the paste and bring it to a boil. Then set aside, add a little cold water, and in five minutes it's ready to serve.
3 DON'TS { Don't boil it too long. Don't let it stand more than ten minutes before serving. Don't use water that has been boiled before.
TWO WAYS TO SETTLE COFFEE.
1st. With Eggs. Use part of the white of an egg, mixing it with the ground LION COFFEE before boiling.
2d. With Cold Water instead of eggs. After boiling add a dash of cold water, and set aside for eight or ten minutes, then serve through a strainer.
Insist on getting a package of genuine LION COFFEE, prepare it according to this recipe and you will only use LION COFFEE in future. (Sold only in 1 lb. sealed packages.)
(Lion-head on every package.)
(Save these Lion-heads for valuable premiums.)

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS

The more Magazines there are, the more Indispensable is The Review of Reviews

"Indispensable," "The one magazine I feel I must take," "The world under a field-glass," "An education in public affairs and current literature,"—these are some of the phrases one hears from noted people who read the Review of Reviews. The more magazines there are, the more necessary is the Review of Reviews, because it brings together the best that is in all the most important monthlies of the world. Such is the flood of periodical literature that nowadays people say that the only way to keep up with it is to read the Review of Reviews. Entirely over and above this reviewing section, it has more original matter and illustrations than most magazines, and the most timely and important articles printed in any monthly.

Probably the most useful section of all is Dr. Albert Shaw's illustrated "Progress of the World," where public events and issues are authoritatively and lucidly explained in every issue. Many a subscriber writes, "This department alone is worth more than the price of the magazine." The unique cartoon department, depicting current history in caricature, is another favorite. The Review of Reviews covers five continents, and yet is American, first and foremost.

Men in public life, the members of Congress, professional men, and the great captains of industry who must keep "up with the times," intelligent men and women all over America, have decided that it is "indispensable."

Cuban Diarrhoea

U. S. Soldiers who served in Cuba during the Spanish war know what this disease is, and that ordinary remedies have little more effect than so much water. Cuban diarrhoea is almost as severe and dangerous as a mild attack of cholera. There is one remedy, however, that can always be depended upon as will be seen by the following certificate from Mrs. Minnie Jacobs of Houston, Texas: "I hereby certify that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy cured my husband of a severe attack of Cuban diarrhoea, which he brought home from Cuba. We had several doctors but they did him no good. One bottle of this remedy cured him, as our neighbors will testify. I thank God for so valuable a medicine." URACURA
THE GREAT NERVINE TONIC
BLOOD ALTERATIVE
LIVER REGULATOR
KIDNEY AND BLADDER CURE
PRICE 50¢
MANUFACTURED BY Dr. Granger Med. Co. CHATTANOOGA, TENN.

WE WANT TO COVER THE COUNTRY WITH URACURA

Fifty-two per cent of the people in the United States have Liver, Kidney or Bladder disease in one form or another. We want every sufferer in this broad land to know about URACURA and to be brought back to life and health through it's use. We can't find words strong enough to express our faith in URACURA or to convey the earnestness of our desire for the afflicted to enter onto a new and hopeful existence by taking this great medicine.

If we could only sit down in person before you and explain what URACURA is—if we could introduce you to the thousands who have been saved to their friends by this remedy—if you could just hear from their lips the words of praise they bestow on it you too would be as confident and sure as we are.

We know that with URACURA we have solved the problem of Liver, Kidney and Bladder health and we want our message of hope to go forth and be read from ocean to ocean.

Do you suffer with Backache, high-colored urine, shortness of breath, swelling of hands and feet, puffs under the eyes, loss of appetite, fever, sleeplessness, vertigo, constipation, sallow complexion, coated tongue, depression, headache, nervousness? Then you have in a more or less acute form Liver, Kidney or Bladder trouble—you can't go back of the symptoms—but if you would be doubly sure, apply

The unfailing test. Take several doses of URACURA—if you find then that the urine is of a very dark or reddish color with a strong odor of the medicine you can know that your kidneys or bladder are affected. But hope—the very thing that indicates the trouble is also a sign that the medicine has commenced it's good work. After two are three days you will notice that the urine is clear, you will feel less pain about the kidneys and your backache will leave. The nervousness will disappear, your complexion will improve and in every way you will feel stronger and better.

URACURA is a Nervine Tonic, Blood Alterative, Liver Regulator and Kidney and Bladder Cure. It restores strength, renews vitality, purifies the blood, relieves biliousness and constipation and produces a healthy appetite and sound digestion. A purely vegetable compound or concentrated extract prepared from those roots and herbs that years of experience have proved to be the only sure remedies for these troubles known to science.

Clanton, June 27th, 1905

I wish to impress the importance of the proper preperation and signing of monthly reports by the teachers and trustees. While in most cases this is done, but I find some teachers are not careful in this matter as well as some district trustees. The law directs that the trustees must sign these reports, at least two of them. This means two trustees must sign the reports, not one trustee sign for two. Teachers must swear to each report before one trustee. They must have two trustees to sign each report from any and all districts from which they expect to draw money. They must see that the right number of district is placed on the report from which money is to be paid.

All numbers and writing on the report must be with pen and ink, teachers must also state on the file side of the report that they desire money remitted by check and sign their name, unless they meet me at Clanton to receive their pay.

All reports must reach me by the 1st Saturday in each month. Teachers failing to comply with these requirements will fail to receive any pay until it is done. When teachers fail to get their reports to me by the 1st Saturday in each month will get no pay until the next payroll. It is the duty of district trustees to visit the schools and see that teachers have complied with the terms of their contracts before they sign the monthly reports, for under the law you must sign them every month By complying with the above you will save me much trouble, and yourselves annoyance and delay.

Riderville,

Riderville is again in great sorrow and excitement. Last Friday night just at seven o'clock a great noise as the sound of distant thunder was heard west of Riderville which seemed to shake the whole earth, it was the boiler of the E. E. Jackson log engine exploded, the "Five Spot," as it was called. Two hours later, as Bro. J. W. Hinson was finishing an eloquent sermon on the subject of the great court of the judgment and sang the solo, "Brother, where will you stand in that day," and just at this time a negro boy stuck his head in at a window of the church and said "the five spot is wrecked and we can't find Mr. Moore," which everybody understood to be the jolly, faithful engineer, Mr. R. P. Moore, whom everybody in Riderville honored and esteemed. Soon the cry of his loving wife and children were heard, which of course saddened every heart in town. Go find my dear papa, oh bring him home to me, and every one was moved to do something. Soon another engine was fired up and a train load of willing men set their faces toward the scene. Just at 11 o'clock in the night we arrived at the scene, finding Mr. Moore dead, and Grant Peeples, the colored fireman, terribly scalded and one leg broken, from which he died Saturday morning. Dan Andrews, colored. was also painfully burned about the face, also George Shelton was badly bruised and burned.

The scene was frightful, the boiler, the tender, everything was blown away, the debris scattered over at least six or eight acres of land, trees blown down; clothes and fragments hanging on the bushes. Nothing there to make one smile or feel pleasant. As soon as Dr. Centiff could care for the wounded all was again reloaded for Riderville. We arrived back home just at two o'clock to meet the crys of loved ones, which was almost heart-rending. This "five spot" is the same engine that wrecked five years ago, killing Mr. Norman Cunningham, whom the whole county has heard more or less of through the courts of the county. Mr. Moore's body will be shipped to Childersburg this evening for interment. May the God of heaven bless and comfort the poor, broken hearted wife and her dear children is the prayer of those whose hearts are saddened.

Now, Mr. Editor, we wish to say a few words about the stock law In my opinion I do not think there is anyone that wants stock law in this section but those who have got mischievous stock, and they are too lazzie to split rails to make a fense. As for myself, I haven't a vote for or against it. It would be an advantage to some in this county, while there are thousands it would be a disadvantage to. So we do not wish to impose on anyone.

Forty years ago, or even twenty years ago, who would have ventured to predict that Fitzhugh Lee would die a general officer on the retired list of the United States Army? asks the Chicago Chronicle. Surely "the war is over," even though an occasional family jar may momentarily ruffle the serenity of the sisterhood of States.

The population of the city of New York as a whole is now more than four millions, and it seems to be increasing at a more rapid rate than in the past decade. The volume of immigration to this port is larger than ever. It has been more than 300,000 since January, and the new arrivals are of a sort of which a very great percentage always remains here. Of course, this increase of population distributes itself over the different boroughs of the town, continues the New York Sun, but a large part of it sticks to Manhattan Island or remains on this side of the East River, in the Bronx.

Graduation from the Naval Academy at Annapolis is not a prerequisite to winning a commission in the Navy. Not long ago nine enlisted men were promoted to the rank of ensign, having shown themselves fit for service along with those who had had the formal training of the Naval Academy. The promotions were made under a recent act of Congress, which authorizes the Secretary of the Navy to recommend to the President not more than twelve men each year from among the boatswains, gunners or warrant officers whom he considers capable of performing the duties of ensign. The men so promoted are in line to become rear-admirals, or even admirals.

If you are really "a good man," if you can really do good work in any line, you do not need capital, avers the Atchison Globe. In every trade newspaper you will find advertisements of this character: "The services of a good man more important than capital." A cry goes up from every quarter for really good men; men who can accomplish results; men who will not cause more trouble around a shop than their services are worth. Of course, you say you are "a good man," but if you can prove it you are all right. There is no end to the possibilities of a young man who has good habits, good health and is able to do something well.

The railway mileage in this country is about half the total in the world, says the New York Sun. It exceeds the total in Europe by about one-quarter, yet our facilities for railroad transportation are still so far inadequate to the demands on them that the progress of business is retarded seriously. Railroads generally are congested with traffic. More tracks, locomotives and cars are required, and it is impossible promptly to provide the further facilities needed to keep up with the growing traffic. At the rate of the increase in the last seven years the tonnage seven years hence will be nearly doubled. The provision of facilities adequate for the transportation of this traffic is, for this country, the most serious problem for discussion and settlement.

The first "Fourth" in Teawyk

By Francis Sterne Palmer.

IT was, strictly speaking, the second "Fourth;" but, as only a few people knew, on the first "Fourth," that anything had happened worthy of celebration, this Fourth of July, 1777, was really the first—as we look upon the day.

Old Claus Pynrout was the founder of a farming village on the banks of the Hudson River, near Poughkeepsie, in New York. He was also the chief man living there, and was called the Patroon. All the land round about was his and made him very rich; he was said to have lent large sums of money to the Continental Congress.

He had begun to plan the village in the spring of 1774, not long after there had come exciting news from Boston. This news was of a band of Indians, who, not knowing much of the proper making of tea, had tried one evening to steep some of it in the cold water of Boston Harbor. Old Claus, being an ardent patriot (as many of the Dutch were, in spite of the stories told of their easy-going ways), was greatly pleased. When it came to choosing a name for the new village he settled on "Teawyk." "The 'Tea,'" he declared, "keeps one in mind of America's struggle for fair play, while the 'wyk' is Dutch. And there can be no better combination than American and Dutch!"

One of the first people to get in Teawyk on the morning of July 4th, 1777, was Hans Pynrout, the orphan grandson of the Patroon. Before the sun had risen he was up and dressed; he had important plans for the day. Only stopping to get a bite of something to eat, he went outdoors and along the village street till he came to the home of his friend, Ephraim Kidder. There he stopped and threw some pebbles up at a bedroom window.

"Dress and come down," he said, when Ephraim came to the window. "Last night grandfather gave me a whole pound, twenty silver shillings, to spend to-day; and I want to go over to Poughkeepsie to buy some powder; I've thought of something to do. You know it's just a year ago since the Independence was declared; and grandfather says that to-day we ought to show our joy."

In a few minutes Ephraim was ready and had joined Hans. "We can take the path through the woods to Poughkeepsie," he said; "that way it's only four miles."

As they went on through the village they picked up some other boys; there were Anthony Haanlaer and Caleb Holt, and several more. In a little while they left the road, and turned into the woods, following an old path. Hans unfolded his plans.

"I think it would be a good idea to have a sham battle," he said. "I've seen the soldiers do that in New York. We'll have a fight between the Americans and the English. We'll get what muskets we can in the village, and load them with the powder we going for now—I've got plenty of money to buy it with. In the battle I'll be General Washington."

"I'll be the Marquis de Lafayette," cried Ephraim Kidder.

"General Schuyler for me!" chimed in Anthony Haanlaer.

"But some of us must be English," said Hans. Then he added, magnanimously: "I'll be Lord Cornwallis, the English general, myself. Caleb, you are tall and straight and sober-looking, so I'll give you General Washington. You'll do finely for him."

Just then the boys were startled by a loud noise that resounded through the woods. It was not far away.

"It was a drum," said Hans, under his breath. "There must be a company of soldiers; they may be English or Hessians. Perhaps we'd better get out of the way."

"Wait a minute," whispered Ephraim Kidder. "That drum is not moving; it sounds as if it was up in a tree. Come, let's creep a little nearer—very carefully."

They moved stealthily nearer, and this is what they saw: a boy beating a drum was sitting on the branch of an evergreen about eight feet from the ground; at the foot of the tree was an old bear with two cubs. As a rule bears with cubs are quick-tempered toward intruders; but this one seemed so amazed at the sound of the drum that she hesitated about climbing the evergreen. The boy was evidently greatly frightened, and pounded on the drum with desperate vigor; he was dressed in the uniform of a Hessian grenadier.

While the American boys crouched there, peering through the bushes, one of them snapped a twig under his foot. The old bear turned and saw them; fearing mischief to the cubs, she gave a peculiar whine, and to the boys' relief, trotted off, the little ones following. Hans and the others stepped from the bushes and walked up to the evergreen. It was clear that the Hessian lad was relieved at seeing the bear go; but he seemed to distrust the new arrivals.

"Come down from that tree!" commanded Hans, speaking in a severe voice. When the boy stood on the ground, they saw he was pale and thin in spite of his brave, warlike clothes.

"Who are you? and what are you doing here?" Hans went on.

"I am Fritz Schlon. I'm lost, and I want to get to New York. That bear came toward me, and I climbed a tree; I thought he was coming up after me."

"Are you a deserter, or are you a spy?" asked Hans, sternly.

"I'm not either," said Fritz Schlon, with spirit. "There was a skirmish, and I was left behind; that's how I happen to be lost." He spoke fairly good English, but with a German accent.

"Well, you're our prisoner now," said Hans. "Come with us." They went back to the path and kept on toward Poughkeepsie. "He'll do splendidly in the sham battle," whispered Hans to Ephraim. "Now, we'll have real Hessian music."

As they were marching along, Fritz abruptly halted, planted himself on the path as if he meant to go no further.

"What are you stopping for?" asked Hans

"I won't go with you," said Fritz. "You may kill me first."

"Why won't you go?" said Anthony Haanlaer. "We're not going to do anything terrible to you.

Fritz looked at the boys' faces and evidently took heart to speak out.

"I'll tell you why," he said, after a moment. "Because my father is back there in the woods at a little camp we made. Four days ago he and I and other soldiers were sent up the river in boats to forage. When we landed there was a skirmish, and my father was shot in the foot. It was in the woods, and while I was bandaging his wound, the other soldiers went off and left us. Since then we've been hiding. All we've had to eat is a rabbit he shot; and now he's weak for want of food, as well as wounded."

"Here's a bun that I had in my pocket; take it and eat it," said Anthony, who was a fat boy with a constant dread of being hungry.

The others felt the same sympathy which Anthony had expressed in such a practical way. Hans voiced the general feeling when he said, "Take us to where you left your father. We'll help him back to Teawyk, where he'll be properly cared for."

Fritz saw that this was the only thing for him to do. "Very well," he said; "we surrender to you as prisoners of war."

They turned and went back some distance on the path; then Fritz led them into the thick woods. Suddenly a man started up from the bushes in front of them. He held a gun in his hands, and called out to the boys to surrender or he would shoot. His uniform and stern looks and threatening words made him seem a formidable person to the boys, and they halted, not knowing what to say. Fritz came to the rescue.

"Wait, father," he said. "I've already surrendered—for both of us."

The Hessian dropped the stock of his musket to the ground. "Well, Fritz is in command, now that I'm on the sick list; and if he has surrendered, why, we're prisoners—that's all. Here are our arms," and he offered the gun to Hans. When he moved they saw that he limped badly, and that one foot was done up in a rough bandage.

The boys held a consultation, and it was decided to return at once to Teawyk. The grenadier put one hand on Fritz's shoulder and one on Ephraim's, and so got along pretty well as they walked back to the village. Going to the Pynrout house, they found the old Patroon at breakfast. He came out and talked with the wounded man, who said he was Karl Schlon, a sergeant of Hessian grenadiers. The prisoners were taken into the house to have something to eat, and Hans went with them. He promised to meet the other boys after breakfast and go for the powder and arrange about the sham battle. It was now so late that the battle could not come off before afternoon.

At first Fritz was too hungry to find time for words, but after a few minutes he talked with Hans, who had taken a seat beside him at the table.

"I'm tired of being a soldier here in America where I don't care who wins," he said. "I wish we could all go back to Hesse. My mother is in New York; they let her come with my father to America, and said that when the rebellion was put down we could all settle here on good farms. But it's slow work, putting down the rebellion."

"It will never be put down," said Hans, stoutly. "However, never mind about that. Why do you care to go back to Hesse when your ruler, the Margrave, treats you so badly, selling you as soldiers?"

"We don't care to go back; but anything is better than staying here and fighting people we have no quarrel with."

"Leave the army and settle in Teawyk, and be Americans," said Hans.

"That's impossible. We are soldiers—my father and I—and we won't desert. If we could pay our colonel he might discharge us; but we have no money."

"How much would you need?"

"Much more than we have; one saves nothing from the pay, it's so small. Yet, after all, we would not need so very much; for father's wound is so bad that I do not think he could ever be a soldier again, and I am only a drummer. I believe the colonel would discharge us if he was paid twenty-five thalers—that's about four pounds, English money."

"Are you sure your father and mother would like to settle here in America?"

"Quite sure," answered Fritz.

Soon afterward Hans met Ephraim Kidder and the others, as he had promised. He told them of his talk with Fritz Schlon.

"I spoke to grandfather and told him I would like to raise that money, and that I know you boys would help. You know what trouble he has with the farm work, now that so many men are going off to join the army. Well, he said there is a lot of hay out in the fields, and he's afraid it will be damaged by rain; and he offered if we boys will go to work and put that hay into stacks, to pay us three pounds. Of course that's more than he would give if he didn't know what we were going to do with the money."

"What about the sham battle?" said Anthony Haanlaer.

"Oh, there'll be no time for that. Besides, we mustn't use the money my grandfather gave me to buy powder, that must be put with the three pounds to make up the sum needed for buying the discharge."

Anthony and some of the others could not help looking sorry when they heard that the sham battle was given up. But that did not last long, and they soon hurried off to get as many recruits as possible to help in the new scheme.

By ten o'clock twenty boys were at work in the hayfield. It seemed more like play than work, for they had made themselves into a company of soldiers for the day, with Hans Pynrout as captain, and with two lieutenants They marched against the windrows of hay as if they were ranks of hostile troops, and captured them and tossed them upon the stacks as if each stack was a prison. In the meantime, Fritz—who did not look strong enough to take a more active part—was perched on top of a haystack, pounding on his drum to encourage these soldiers that were striving for his and his father's liberty.

The mothers and sisters of the boys came and looked on, and at noon, that there might be no delay, they brought baskets of lunch and cool drinks for the workers. Some of the men, who had intended to take a holiday, got so interested that they turned in and helped, and really a great deal of work was done. Claus Pynrout, the old Patroon, who was there looking on, wearing his best gold-laced cocked hat in honor of the day, declared that he was contributing nothing, since more than three pounds' worth of work was being done. Altogether it was an occasion long to be remembered in Teawyk.

The next day Carl Schlon was given the four pounds with which to buy his and Fritz's discharge, and his wound having been carefully dressed by the village surgeon, he was sent down the Hudson River in a sailboat to New York. A few days later he returned, his mission accomplished. With him was a smiling woman, who wept with joy as she saw Fritz come running to the bank to meet her.—The Independent.

Birmingham, Ala.—R. L. Griffin, a printer, nearly severed the head of C. C. Hudson, another printer, from his body with a pocketknife Saturday night. A gash about eight or ten inches long was made, and the wound went to the bone.

The trouble arose over statements which Griffin is said to have made derogatory to Hudson, but which he denies having made. The statements wdre to the effect that Hudson had "ratted" in Atlanta before he joined the union, a term which means that he was a non-union printer and had taken the place of a union printer who was on a strike.

HILTON COUNTY SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

[illegible]dent—E. B. Dennis, Clanton.
[illegible]tary-Treasurer—W. C. Gibson, Verbena; [illegible]utive Committee—Judson Streeh, Clan[illegible] A. Horn, Thorsby; T. U. Crumpton, [illegible]ville; Dr. H. W. Gailey, Verbena; W. A. [illegible]s, Jemison.

[illegible]E HOUSE-TO-HOUSE CANVASS.

[illegible]e of the latest developements [illegible]e Sunday school movement is [illegible] "House-to-house canvass." [illegible]e Gospel of St. Luke, when [illegible] sent out the seventy, He sent [illegible] two and two into every city [illegible] place whither He Himself [illegible]d come. The house-to-house [illegible]ass is based upon the same [illegible]ciple. It is an effort to reach [illegible]e people.

[illegible]e purposes of the canvass are:

[illegible]. To show the interest which [illegible]hurch has in the unsaved. It [illegible]ad thing for any one to feel [illegible] "No man cared for his soul." [illegible]n without intending it, the [illegible]ches neglect the stranger and [illegible]areless and indifferent ones.

[illegible]. To invite them to attend the [illegible]h and Sunday school of their [illegible]ce. This is a movement in [illegible]h all the churches unite. It is [illegible]he upbuilding of every church [illegible]e community.

[illegible]. To make a record of every [illegible]ly visited. This is done be[illegible] we want to reach every fam[illegible]nd the record is kept so the [illegible]rintendents and other workers [illegible] follow up the work in an [illegible]ive and systematic way. The [illegible] is done by dividing the terri[illegible]to be visited into districts and [illegible]inting a sufficient number of [illegible]rs, to go two by two, repre[illegible]ng different denominations, to [illegible] every home in the district. [illegible] questions asked at each home [illegible]mply the name of the family, [illegible] many attend church at least [illegible] a month, how many attend [illegible]ay school regularly and the [illegible]h preferences of the family.

[illegible]e good results of the canvass [illegible]nd largely upon the careful[illegible]and thoroughness with which [illegible]work is followed up. The [illegible]tion in the community inci[illegible] to the canvass, the work done [illegible]e day of visitation, do quite a [illegible] deal to create public sentiment [illegible]o interest the careless and in[illegible]ent people. Many cities and [illegible] of Alabama have been can[illegible]d, and without exception, [illegible]e the work was carefully fol[illegible] up by the Sunday schools [illegible]churches, a great improvement [illegible]nade. Sometimes the Sunday [illegible]l enrollment was increased [illegible]. The time will doubtless [illegible] when the whole State of Ala[illegible] will be canvassed house by [illegible] and every man, woman and [illegible] cordially invited to come to [illegible]hurch or Sunday school of their [illegible]e.

A New Language Method.

[illegible] person has, as the Celts say, [illegible] one side to his tongue" and [illegible] to add to his resources in the [illegible] of language it might be well [illegible]m to apply to an old man in [illegible]nd, whose methods of instruction [illegible]imple. They are described in [illegible]s In Scotland" by Mr. Sinclair. [illegible]dy visiting in the north of Scot[illegible]wished to get some idea of the [illegible] and employed an old native to [illegible]er a course of language lessons. [illegible]cotsman took the Bible for the [illegible]ook, and, opening it at the be[illegible]g of Genesis, he said:

[illegible]w, ma'am, I'll read this to you [illegible] Gaelic, and you'll see yourself [illegible] will go."

[illegible] solemn intonation and an ap[illegible]g, triumphant glance toward the [illegible]at the end of every clause, he [illegible] read the first four verses and [illegible] to watch the effect. Then he [illegible] a tone of deep conviction:

[illegible]y, ma'am, if you'll take your [illegible]ble and turn to that chapter and [illegible] in English you'll see it's just [illegible]same thing."

[illegible]ld man was much surprised that [illegible]y did not continue her lessons.

The Song of the Hair

There are four verses. Verse 1. Ayer's Hair Vigor makes the hair grow. Verse 2. Ayer's Hair Vigor stops falling hair. Verse 3. Ayer's Hair Vigor cures dandruff. Verse 4. Ayer's Hair Vigor always restores color to gray hair. The chorus is sung by millions.

"Before using Ayer's Hair Vigor I had very thin and very poor hair. But I continued to use the Vigor until my hair greatly improved in every way. I have used it off and on for the past ten years."—Mrs. M. Drummond, Newark, N. J.

Attacks of colic, cholera morbus and diarrhoea come on so suddenly that there is no time to hunt a doctor or go to the store for medicine. Mr. Barber says: "I have tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy which is one of the best medicines I ever saw. I keep a bottle of it in my room as I have had several attacks of colic and it has proved to be the best medicine I ever used." Sold by Upchurch Drug co.. Clanton; A. Horn, Thorsby.

The team from Bay Manette will arrive on Sunday morning and games will be played Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Owing to the large expense of the visitors an admission fee will be charged to the games. The deaf and dumb pitcher will pitch on the Fourth.

Found a Cure for Dyspepsia.

Mrs. S. Lindsay, of Fort William, Ontario, Canada, who has suffered quite a number of years from dyspepsia and great pains in the stomach, was advised by her druggist to take Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. She did so and says, "I find that they have done me a great deal of good. I have never had any suffering since I began using them." If troubled with dyspepsia or indigestion why not take these Tablets, get well and stay well? For sale by Upchurch Drug co., Clanton; A. Horn, Thorsby.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

Special correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, June 26, 1905

Teddy the first and Kaiser Bill the second, are about the only two peas in the pod at the present writing from the nation's capital. Teddy has got the two warring nations together, and got them to agree to accept Washington as the place of meeting for the peace conference, and his work in this direction has amazed all the diplomats of the old world. Why it was plumb easy. All he had to do was to sound the two scrappers and get them to assent to a note from him asking them if they did not think that it was time to go "from labor to refreshments," and then send such a note asking them to be good little boys in the interest of peace and humanity. They were both dead willing to quit, and only waited for some man to use a good, old fashioned brand of Americanism and straightforwardness without all the circumlocution of diplomacy. Teddy did this and he won out. On the other hand the Kaiser is raising all sorts of cain over in Europe, and the first thing he knows he will have strained the patience of the French nation to the breaking point and a world war will be the result. These two men just now are in the limelight and one of them is being praised and the other is being cussed. The distinguished President of the United States does some things well, and again, he does somethings that are humorous. If the comic muse ever condescends to mere history, she will find material for humor in contrasting the attitude of Mr. Roosevelt toward the provisional governments of Panama and of Norway. Acting Secretary Loomis, we need hardly recall, inquired solicitously about the condition of the republic of Panama some little time before the pang of mock revolution had brought the bantling commonwealth into the world. It was on this occasion that the scholiasts advanced the theory that Mr. Roosevelt's dominant quality was celerity. Turning from Panama to Christiana, the same pludits may draw the profound inference that circumstances alter cases, and that even celerity has its good and bad days. If ever there was a defacto government, it is Norway's; she has a parliament is session, an executive council of ministers, an army and a navy. Moreover, it was known some days before the resolution deposing King Oscar that secession was as good as accomplished, and devil a cablegram came from "Loomis Acting." All of which seems to point to a culpable negligence in the Norwegians in failing to keep Washington officially posted as to the evolution schedule. Or is Mr. Loomis's hesitation due merely to a natural reluctance not to be caught again by the difference in time? In any case the comic muse might do worse than ponder the cases of Panama and Norway.

WRECKED AND BURNED

Is the Fate of the Fast Lake Shore Train When Running at Highest Speed.

MORE THAN A SCORE ARE DEAD.

While an Equal Number, Horribly Burned, Taken From Weckage.

Engine Hits Open Switch.

Cleveland, O.—While traveling at the rate of seventy miles an hour the famous Twentieth Century limited, the fastest long distance train in the world, ran through an open switch at the little town of Mentor, east of Cleveland, at 9:30 o'clock Wednesday night, causing one of the most horrible wrecks in the history of the Lake Shore road.

The engine was hurled into the ditch. A part of the train was crushed on top of it and the wreck was partly burned. The horrors of the wreck were doubled in the horrors of the fire.

The train was crowded, practically all its accommodations being taken when it left this city. It was behind time, and the greatest of speed was being made to make up the lost time.

Tortured by Flames.

Late reports give the number of injured as twenty-one, and of these fifteen are seriously if not fatally hurt. Practically all the injured were burned and had to be extricated from the blazing wreckage by rescue parties.

A peculiarly distressing feature of the rescue work was that the injured were so crazed when they were taken out of the wreckage that they could not even reveal their own identity, despite the urgent appeals and entreaties made by officials and others who knew how anxiously news from the wreck was awaited by families and friends of the passengers.

The order was finally given to search the living wreck victims in the hope that identification might in that way be established, but even when this was resorted to but three could be identified. The rest were demented by the agony they had undergone. The scenes that resulted from their pitiable mental condition were affecting to the point of the tragic.

Work of Criminal.

Assistant General Superintendent D. C. Moon, of the Lake Shore, on the scene of the wreck, gave out the following statement at 1 o'clock:

"So far as can be learned the switch was opened and locked by some party unknown, probably a crank, and evidently for malicious purposes. Train No. 10, a fast eastbound train, passed through the same switch forty-five minutes ahead of No. 26, and it was all right at that time. It is positive that no other train or engine, either freight or passenger, passed through the switch between No. 10 and No. 26."

Traveling at the rate of more than a mile a minute, the heavy train was hurled to its doom with a momentum that was appalling. The scene of the accident was at the Mentor depot. The switch that caused the trouble is located about 130 yards west of the depot. As the heavy engine struck the switch the engine left the main track and swung violently to the left. For a distance of twenty yards the engine ran on the rails, and then, leaping from the track, turned on its side just to the east of the depot. The momentum was such that the heavy tender was hurled entirely over the engine and was buried in the depot.

The combination car landed on top of the engine and tender, and in a moment was enveloped in flames.

Smashed to Pieces.

The Chicago sleeper, which was immediately behind the combination car, swung from the track, and crashing into the depot was completely buried in the wreck of the building. The depot collapsed on top of the wrecked coach. The passengers in this coach were crushed and maimed in the wreck and completely buried in the collapse of the structure.

The next sleeper following was left off the track behind and the other remained upright on the rails.

An instant after the crash of the wreck the boiler of the great engine burst with terrific force, scattering fire and stream through the wreck in a manner that made escape for the passengers in the combination car, which had landed on top of the engine, impossible.

The cries of the imprisoned passengers were heard above the roar, but they were beyond all human aid.

A score or more physicians from Cleveland, Collinwood, Ashtabula and Painesville were sent to the scene of the wreck at the request of the Lake Shore officials. After the physicians had treated the injured the latter were placed aboard a special train and brought to this city, where they were hurried into waiting ambulances to the several hospitals.

Burned to Death.

One of the most appalling features of the wreck was the burning of the dead and injured.

Piteous Cries.

The scene following the wreck was terrible. The night was dark save for the light from the blazing wreck. Men swarmed about the burning coach combatting the flames with the means at hand, groping their way through the scalding steam that rose in clouds, hunting for the injured, whose piteous cries chilled the heart.

There was a small water supply, and the means at hand for fighting the flames were pitifully inadequate, but the zeal of the rescuers wrought great things in the first few minutes. It was known that a number of the injured were helpless in the wreck, but though the work was done with frantic haste, the flames gradually drove the rescuers back, and after ten minutes of battle the rescuers were driven away from the blazing combination coach and the imprisoned passengers were incinerated.

Despite their help the fire burned until after midnight, and the last black and burned corpse was not recovered from the funeral pyre until 1 o'clock.

Valiant Rescue Work.

Pullman Conductor O'Neill, with his porters, did valiant work. Bedding, blankets and sheets were stripped from the berths of the four Pullman coaches and used for the relief of the sufferers.

Conductor Alexander Hammond, who escaped, started the work of rescue and led his fellow trainmen and the less seriously hurt of the passengers in deeds of rescue.

Officials of the road started an informal investigation immediately on their arrival.

Negro Gets 1001 Years Sentence.

Waco, Tex.—In the case of Lee Robertson, a negro charged with attempted criminal assault upon a white woman, the jury Friday brought in the following verdict:

"We, the jury, find the defendant guilty as charged and fix his punishment at confinement in the state penitentiary at 1001 years."

The spectators in court cheered when the verdict was read despite the admonitions of the court.

Jasper Coke Ovens Start.

Jasper, Ala.—It is being circulated here that the coke ovens owned by the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company, and shut down over a year ago, are to be put in operation. The reports cannot be confirmed, but owing to the present price of iron it is believed by some that the ovens could be made profitable at this time. In all probability the Tennessee Company will not resume the operations of the ovens, but reports are that some other concern may take charge of them. The Jasper people are especially pleased at the prospect of having this industry revived. It would mean a monthly pay roll of several thousand dollars.

Nelidoff is Doubtful.

Paris, France.—M. Nelidoff, the Russian ambassador here, has not been advised of his appointment as peace plenipotentiary and therefore doubts the report to that effect, as it is considered improbable that the authorities at St. Petersburg would not act without consulting him.

Engineer Wallace Arrives.

New York, N. Y.—Among the passengers who arrived on board the Orizaba from Colon was John F. Wallace, chief engineer of the Panama canal. Mr. Wallace comes here to complete arrangements which were left unfinished on his departure for the Isthmus. He says that the work is progressing very satisfactorily.

Torpedo Boat is Damaged.

Norfolk, Va.—While attempting to back out of his slip at the torpedo reserve station of the Norfolk navy yard, the torpedo boat Porter caught by a heavy wind and outgoing tide, was driven stern first against the bow of the yacht gunboat Siren, lying in the rear of the receiving ship Franklin and several of her stanchions carried away.

Will Develop Gold Fields.

Knoxville, Tenn.—The Unaka Mining and Development Company has been organized by Tennessee and Ohio capitalists for the purpose of developing the gold interests in Monroe county.

Exhort Population to Be Calm.

Moscow.—The governor of Moscow has posted notices of the forthcoming mobilization of troops and exhorting the population to be calm. The mobilization is expected June 29th.

Has Carnegie Scholarship.

Henry Cook Boynton, of Cambridge, Mass., who has been awarded the Carnegie research scholarship of $500 by the Iron and Steel Institute of London, is one of the younger instructors in mining and metallurgy at Harvard. He is 30 years of age, a native of Plymouth, and entered Harvard in 1896. He received his A. B. degree in 1900 and in 1901 took the degree of master of arts. He is the third American to win this scholarship, which is awarded annually, and entitles the winner to expend $500 in research study wherever he desires. Mr Boynton intends to pursue his investigations at Harvard.

Three Strokes of Paralysis.

Found Dead in Bed.

Decatur, Ala.—Charles, aged eight, son of Taylor Sowell, was found dead in bed Thursday night. Heart trouble is said to have been the cause of the death.

A REMARKABLE NEGRO WAS BENJ. BANNEKER.

The "Black Astronomer" Who Helped L'Enfant Lay Out Washington, City of Magnificent Distances

Much has been said recently in regard to fittingly commemorating the services Pierre L'Enfant rendered the national capital when he laid out Washington and made it a "city of magnificent distances." A contributor to the New York Sun suggests that if such honor is to be paid to the architect, his associate in the undertaking must not be forgotten. A Maryland negro, Benjamin Banneker, known as "the black astronomer," was called upon to assist L'Enfant, and so satisfactory was his work that the commission retained him until the service was accomplished.

Banneker was born in 1731. He had an industrious and thriving father, who left him in possession of a snug little farm. The boy grew up, working by day and studying by night. He was largely self-taught, and took delight in working out the most abstruse mathematical problems, and writing the answers in rime. He also had a mechanical genius, and constructed a wooden clock without ever having seen one, his only guide being a watch. Many of his nights were spent in the open air, lying on the ground and observing the movements of the stars. Indeed, so exact were his calculations that he not only made an almanac himself, but he corrected some slight errors which occurred in Ferguson's and Leadbetter's calendars.

The only time when Banneker left his home for any distance or length of time was when he served on the Washington commission in 1789. The members of the commission were much pleased with him, both personally and professionally.

A pleasant picture is left of this much-respected negro. He never married, living alone on his little farm, cooking his own food and doing his own washing. He was a fine looking man in his habitual suit of gray cloth, and his broad brimmed beaver hat. His nature was kind, hospitable and humane. One of his frequent saying is preserved in his own handwriting. "It is said that 'evil communications corrupt good manners;' I hope to live to hear that good communications correct bad manners."

This worthy man had one great failing—his love for strong drink. While in the Washington commission he did not allow himself to taste liquor. "I feared to trust myself even with wine," he said, "lest it should steal away any little sense I have."

No one realized the degradation of his habit more than he, and he finally overcame it.

While the funeral services of Benjamin Banneker were being held at the grave, his little house caught fire, and burned up with every specimen of his ingenuity and scholarship. His best work, however, will last as long as Washington retains its fine avenues.

Shooting Mountain Sheep.

The mountain sheep will stand more punishment than any big game animal I have ever hunted. I could give many instances of sheep having traveled long distances under frightful conditions, but it would not make pleasant reading.

I have seen the large brown bear of the Bering Sea lie down from wounds that would have only helped to increase a sheep's speed.

Two prospectors on the Stikine headwaters had an unusual experience with a large Stonei ram. They saw it feeding on a grassy plateau and made a careful stalk. When within easy rifle range one of the men shot it with a 45.90. It paid no attention to the shot, and stood quietly looking at them as they approached. On examination they found that the heavy bullet had struck at the base of the horn. The ram behaved in a perfectly natural way, except that it showed no fear. After tying a pack-strap to its horns they led it to their camp, where, being in need of meat, they shot it.—B. H. Brown, in Recreation.

Trembled For Papa's Safety.

Jennie's father is a preacher, so whether she wishes it or not, Jennie is dragged to church every Sunday morning. As a rule she finds more food for reflection during these orders in the multi-colored angels over the altar than in her father's sermons, but on a recent Sunday his opening sentence threw even the angels into the shade.

"Let him who is without sin among you be first to cast a stone," announced the clergyman.

That challenge, hurled thus boldly at the congregation, took Jennie's attention, and from then on until the end of the sermon she watched and listened with intense earnestness. Not until the entire congregation had turned their backs on the pulpit and were surging toward the doors did the anxious look fade from her puzzled little face. Then, seeing that the service was at an end, she fell back in a corner of the pew and breathed heavily with relief.

"I'm glad," she said to her mother, "that nobody chucked rocks at papa."—New York Press.

A Deadly Recommendation.

"A friend of mine," said Ernest Cushing Richardson, librarian of Princeton University, "was considering the matter of an investment in a growing Western town. Every advantage of the town was painted to him in glowing colors by correspondence, and finally he was informed that by the following mail he would receive a letter from the leading business man of the place. When the letter arrived it proved to be from an undertaker."—New York Press.

THE PULPIT.

AN ELOQUENT SUNDAY SERMON BY THE REV. ROBERT COLLYER.

Subject: Leading Children Softly.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—The Rev. Robert Collyer, the oldest Unitarian pastor in Greater New York, preached in the Second Unitarian Church, Clinton and Congress streets, Sunday morning. His last appearance in that church was last fall, when he delivered an address on the late Rev. Dr. John White Chadwick, the former pastor, who had just died. The eloquent preacher took for his text: Genesis xxxiii:13-14, "The children are tender: I will lead on softly," and said:

It was one of the secrets of my craft, in the old days when I wanted to weld iron or work steel to a fine purpose, to begin gently. If I began as all learners do, to strike my heaviest blows at the start, the iron would crumble instead of welding, or the steel would suffer under my hammer, so that, when it came to be tempered it would "fly," as we used to say, and rob the thing I had made of its finest quality. It was the first condition of a good job to begin gently, later I could strike with a firmer hand, and in the end pour out all my might in a storm of sturdy blows; but if I began so it ended, as a rule, with a wreck. The perfection of the Nasmyth hammer lies in the blending of its gentleness and its ponderous might, so that it can come down as gently as a June shower or smite like a tornado, according to the need of the moment. So the skillful mechanic starts new machinery, a locomotive, a steam engine or even a sewing machine, gently. It is the first condition of keeping the balance true that the machine shall not tear away at first at high pressure. I noticed the same in the building up of a grand organ. The builder began gently in bringing out its harmonies, with some fine chords, made those true and went on to the others, and so wrought on to the end. Again an animal trainer while he smites the tiger with an iron bar, if he is wise talks to a horse, allures him, courts him and makes him his friend. We do not speak of "breaking" a horse, so much now; we "train" him.

So I love to note such things as these as I watch the perpetual advent of little children into this life of ours, and wonder how we shall deal with them in the one wise way which will weld them, shall I say, to whatsoever things are true and lovely and of good report, start them to the surest purpose and train them so as to bring out the whole power for good which God has hidden in their nature. There must be one right way, and I think this father found it when he said: "The children are tender; I will lead them on softly." They may seem crude, mere machines or little brutes; there are some men who seem by their actions to have such notions of a child's nature, to their eternal shame. Here is the principle: They are tender; we must lead them on softly. Solomon may slip in with his cruel maxim of "Spare the rod and spoil the child." He has no business about my place while my children are tender. I can no more be hard on them than Jesus could. If I hurt them in this evil way I hurt those who are of the kingdom of Heaven. My white hairs have brought me this wisdom: That the unpardonable sin is to be hard on a tender child. I do not wonder that the old grandsire is so gentle with the second generation. He will not tell you, or himself, perhaps, why he is, but he would fain recall some passages of his fatherhood, but that cannot be done, so he chokes back the inextinguishable regret and humbly tries to get even through the overmeasure. My good mother was something of a Spartan, a very gentle Spartan, with her children, but it was wonderfully beautiful to see her in her old age spreading her wide, grand, motherly wings over the children of the new day. She could no more be hard upon them, no matter what pranks they played, than your May sun can be hard upon your May blossom. It was the return of the heart to the soft answer, the sweet submission to the better plan, the vision of the infinite worth of gentle ways with tender folk, the endeavor, unknown to herself, to ease her dear old heart of what little pain there was from the old days, the feeling that perhaps she might have gone more softly once.

These children are not things at all that we can turn out to pattern, but human beings, each one living to himself or to herself, holding a secret we cannot fathom, possessing powers perhaps we cannot even guess at—our children after the flesh; God's children after the spirit, but intrusted to our hands and homes that, coming out of Heaven with hints of the angels in them, they may go back when their time comes as sealed saints. The boy may be the image of the father, yet totally different within. We vainly try in our children, sometimes, to see our image, we detect a faculty or temper we never had. The Holy Spirit, which watches forever, selects and saves, by a law we do not half understand, and we do not understand these tender natures until we know what these powers are which are waking out of their sleep. My boy may have a faculty which in thirty years may be a benediction to the human family, but to-day it may look like a vice to me, and may grow to be a vice if I did not say, "The child is tender, I will lead on softly." He may be born with an overplus of imagination and things that have no existence may seem realities to him; I imagine he is lying right and left, and then instead of a gentle guidance, through which he can find the line between things and thoughts, I give first a stern warning and then a sound whipping. Here is a case where a father and son are alike, but with a difference. The father, a minister, has been drawing on his imagination, time out of mind, for matter for his sermons; the son has come honestly by the faculty, but he is not shrewd enough to see how far he can go without being found out. The father prays for him at the family altar, as if he were a son of perdition, and helps to make him one through such prayers. "Gently," I would say, "pray for insight and foresight; this may be a rare gift you do not understand. The loftiest poet that ever sang may be but a vaster liar by your criterion."

Children are tender we must remember as we try to educate them. We could hardly light on a wiser or better woman than Mrs. Barbauld; but she was so eager to make a very remarkable man out of her little nephew, Charles Aiken, that she educated him out of his mind into idiocy. So good parents, who would shrink from laying heavy burden on their children's backs, do not hesitate to lay burdens on the nerve and brain. They urge them on at their books, or permit the teachers to do this, until the poor young things lose more in wealth of life and life's worth than their education will ever pay for. Lead on softly in these paths of education. If your children want to rush ahead at a pace which will leave them learned but invalids, hold them back; a true education is not a long fever. Here and there a child may need to be urged on a little, but I frankly confess that under the high pressure of our public schools I would take the children's side in their little plots to stay away a day from school when they have been hard at work for many days. I like to plot with them; their success pleases me more than their failure.

In the culture of the heart, also, we must lead on softly. I can no more believe that hard and cruel thoughts of God will be good for my children than I can believe in hard and cruel words and blows, and I have no doubt there are more so-called infidels made, and confirmed to that end, by fathers who thought they were doing God's service than there are of any other type. Such thoughts may be but theology to the father, but they are very often grim, hard, real biting torment to the tender child. It shuts out Heaven and opens hell to him; it is cruel as the hissing and biting of serpents to some delicate small souls. I suffered more agony at one time in my childhood when a revivalist got hold of me and made me believe I might wake up in hell when I laid my poor little head on the pillow than from any other thing that ever struck me. There lies the way to do a fatal mischief, the way the seeds of infidelity are sown in many a noble nature. It is simply the revolt at, the resistance to, and the rejection of, a God their nature is too large and sweet and tender to tolerate. If in these early days there is no day star of a lovelier light, no dawning for the small, bright soul of a better day, then there may be no chance for that soul to pass into the kingdom until it has passed out of the world.

When we quote the Scripture: "Train up a child in the way he should go," we must still take heed to our ways lest we think more of the Scripture than we think of the child—fix our mind and purpose on the other rather than the hither end of the way and train him for what he should be at forty rather than what he must be in childhood and youth. We must answer for what is written in the book of the life of our children. I must lay the patriarch's gentle purpose to my heart: "The children are tender, I will lead on softly," for these in my care, who also have the long hard journey before them.

If this is true of the shadow, how true it must be of the light. If ours is a hard and poor lot, no man or woman, father or mother, need ever fear the children will fail to look backward to the early years with a tender love, if by all the means in our power we make good for them the patriarch's purpose. I think, indeed, our love for the old home is very often deepest and purest in those who have had to face the hardest times if we have fought through them in this bright, good way, and led the children on softly. There were homes in this country fifty, sixty, seventy years ago bare of all things save this one secret—they are the dearest places on the earth to-day in memory of men and women who have everything now the heart can desire. And when we have done this, what better can we do than put the whole wealth of our endeavor in trust into the hands of God.

"Thou Art My Light."

A touching incident was narrated by Dr. R. F. Horton on the second Sunday after his return from months of treatment by a celebrated German oculist.

He was waiting in the oculist's consulting room, not knowing whether or not the remainder of his life was to be passed in darkness, when he put his hand into his pocket and drew out his little Bible—not to read it, but to see if he could. As he opened it his eyes fell on the text:

"For Thou are my lamp, O Lord: and the Lord will lighten my darkness."

"I had not been aware of the very existence of this text," he said, "and I do not know who but an angel could have led me to it; but I felt that, whether I received my sight or not, those words were enough for me, and from that time I seemed to know that I should continue to proclaim the words of this blessed Book."

Duty Above Life.

Life is a matter of very small account to any one in comparison with duty-doing, whether a man realizes this truth or not. Whatever is worth living for is worth dying for, if dying be an incident to its pursuing. When the Roman General, Pompey, was warned against the danger of his returning from Egypt to Italy, to meet a new trouble in his own land, his heroic answer was: "It is a small matter that I should move forward and die. It is too great a matter that I should take one step backward and live." Life is never well lived when it is held dearer than duty. He who would tell a lie in order to live is willing to pay a great deal larger price for his life than that life is worth to himself—or to others.—H. C. Trumbull.

School Children's Eyes.

An examination of 7,166 school children in New York in 1904 brought out the fact that 1,272, or 17 per cent., were suffering from defective eyesight of the worst kinds. If to this figure be added those suffering from less manifest defects, the percentage of defects interfering with study was 33 1-3. Eye strain has had reflex effects on the general health and often exists when not suspected by the hurried oculist. It is for school boards to consider whether the same tasks should be imposed on all pupils; whether pupils having defective vision, likely to prejudice health, should study as many ologies as those who have perfectly sound eyes; whether, in fact, at least one-half of the so-called studies should not be abolished.

Automobile Artillery.

The Portugese have adopted automobile traction for a new battery of four quick-firing howitzers of the Schneider Canet system of 150 millimeters. They were made at the Creusot works, France, and the motor is designed to draw all the four one behind the other, a load, that is to say, of about fourteen tons, at a speed of at least five and a half kilometers an hour for all slopes. The automobile besides carries five tons of munitions, etc., and the artillerymen, except four, who will sit on the guns. The motor will also draw the guns by cable up hills of a gradient of 12 per cent., after the practice in recent English maneuvers.

Begging in London.

It is calculated that 4,000 persons make a living in London by begging and that their average income amounts to about 30 shillings a week, or over $1,500,000 a year. Last year 1,925 persons were arrested for begging in the streets, of whom more than 1,500 were sentenced to terms of imprisonment varying from one week to three months. Many of these objects of charity were found in possession of sums of money and even of bank books showing very handsome deposits.

Congressmen as Farmers.

Congressman Hull, of Iowa, and Congressman Wadsworth, of New York, jointly own a fine farm in Virginia a short distance down the river from Mount Vernon. Former Interstate Commerce Commissioner Yeomans, also of Iowa, was interested in the agricultural venture, but recently he has withdrawn, leaving his two partners to carry on the business. They have a comfortable residence fitted up there with electric lights and other fixings unknown to the ordinary farmer.

South Sea Wireless Telegraph.

The International Telegraph Construction Company has submitted a scheme to the postmaster general of Australia for the erection of wireless telegraph stations linking New Zealand and Australia direct, and also via Tasmania or Lord Howe and Norfolk Islands, and establishing communication between Queensland and Port Moresby and Samaria, in Papua, and also between Samari and Hebertshohe, in German Papua, joining the cable routes to the east at Yap Island.

Madrid Sunday Law Repealed.

The first bull fight in Madrid after the repeal of the Sunday law was witnessed by 20,000 persons, and 80,000 more waited outside the ring to get prompt news of the result.

Statisticians find that something like 2,000 vessels of all sorts disappear in the sea every year, never to be heard from again, taking with them 12,000 human beings and involving a money loss of $100,000,000.

Ever Tried Coffee This Way?

It is a well-known fact that even the best of housekeepers cannot make really good coffee without having the proper materials.

They will NEVER make it with coffee of doubtful origin, adulterated, queerly blended, and possibly dirty coffee that has, perhaps, been mixed up with all kinds of other things on the counter.

But let them take a package of LION COFFEE—the purest and cleanest—and the brand universally used throughout the United States for over twenty-five years. Millions drink it daily, and get the best results if it is made in the following way:

Try it once and you will never want to try any other brand of coffee.

HOW TO MAKE GOOD COFFEE.

Use LION COFFEE, because to get best results you must use the best coffee.

Grind you LION COFFEE rather fine. Use a "tablespoonful to each cup, and one extra for the pot." First mix it with a little cold water, enough to make a thick paste, and add white of an egg (if egg is to be used as a settler), then follow one of the following rules:

1st—With boiling water—Add boiling water, and let it boil three minutes only. Add a little cold water and set aside five minutes to settle. Serve promptly.

2d—With cold water—Add your cold water to the paste and bring it to a boil. Then set aside, add a little cold water, and in five minutes it's ready to serve.

THREE DON'TS.

Don't boil it too long.

Don't let it stand more than ten minutes before serving.

Don't use water that has been boiled before.

TWO WAYS TO SETTLE COFFEE.

1st—With eggs—Use part of the white of an egg, mixing it with the ground LION COFFEE before boiling.

2d—With cold water instead of eggs. After boiling add a dash of cold water and set aside for eight or ten minutes, then serve through a strainer.

Long Distance Telegraphy.

There is now direct telegraphic communication between Liverpool and Teheran, in Persia. The stretch of line in question is by far the longest in the world to be worked by single transmission, 4,000 miles of space being covered by a single operation of direct automatic Wheatstone working.

ADDS TO SPLENDOR

MEN OF BUSINESS RECOGNIZE ADVANTAGES OF ACETYLENE.

Famous Summer Hotel, the Grand Union of Saratoga, Has Installed This Best of All Artificial Lights—Hence Increased Comfort and Health.

Saratoga, June 27.—The very name, "Saratoga," brings to every mind health-giving springs, unsurpassed hotels and beautiful drives. It has been for many years the Mecca for all who admire nature, enjoy good living, and are searching for health, or are simply taking a vacation.

The Grand Union, the largest summer hotel in the United States, set among green trees with its long wings enclosing a court with fountains and flowers, grass and trees, music and light, is throughout the season thronged with guests. With the progressive spirit always shown by its management, the Grand Union has again added to its attractiveness by introducing acetylene gas to make still more brilliant the evening hours. The genial proprietors believe in furnishing their guests with the best of everything, and now, after investigating and finding that Artificial Sunlight can be had, they have installed a complete acetylene gas plant to produce it, and have connected upwards of six thousand Acetylene burners in and about the plant.

Like many discoveries of recent years, which are coming into popular favor, acetylene, one of the most recent, is very simply produced. It is adapted for use wherever artificial light is needed and the necessary apparatus can be understood and operated by any one.

The generator in which Acetylene is produced by the automatic contact of carbide and water might be termed a gas plant, as it performs all of the functions of a city gas plant. The acetylene generator can be purchased for a few dollars and in any size, from one adapted to furnish acetylene to ten or a dozen burners for a cottage, up to the large but still simple machine such as is now furnishing Acetylene for six thousand burners in the Grand Union.

Outside of large cities the use of Acetylene is quite common. The owner of the country home now demands running water, gas and other conveniences which a few years ago were considered as luxuries, and acetylene gas has met his requirements, and gives him a better and cheaper light than is ordinarily furnished in cities.

It is well known that rooms lighted with Acetylene are more comfortable, because cooler, and more healthful because the air is not vitiated.

"Sea Gypsies."

In the archipelago of Mergui, off the coast of lower Burma, Asia, live the "sea gypsies." Instead of carts they own covered boats, in which with their families, dogs, cats, chickens and pets they float on the sea and wander from land to island. By day they fish or harpoon turtle or dive for oysters; but every night they put back to the shore. If the weather is bad at sea, they land their dogs and then poach, catching porcupines, squirrels, armadillos, hog, deer and the like, of which they make savory stews, as American gypsies do.

World's Richest Woman.

Signora Cousino, of South America, is said to be the richest woman in the world. Her silver, copper and coal mines yield her $185,000 a month. Receipts from her stock farm are more than those from the mines, and she owns a large interest in a fleet of steamships.

Palma "Remembers the Maine."

From the treaty of friendship and commerce signed between Great Britain and Cuba, the most favored nation clause has been expunged. President Palma being unwilling to grant Great Britain advantages in Cuban trade similar to those enjoyed by the United States.

Municipal Poultry Farm.

The Mundesley (England) parish council, which struck out a new line in municipalization by starting a poultry farm, has realized profits on the first year's work which are equal to a reduction in the parish taxes of 1.20c on the dollar.

Women Students in Germany.

The number of women students at all German universities is rapidly increasing. At Bonn the female students have organized their own Society Hilaritas, which has been a success since the day it was started.

Zola's Effects.

Five thousand bottles of wine, two milch cows and thirty-seven guinea pigs are among the household effects of the late Emile Zola advertised for public sale in Paris.

A time piece and a pair of candelabra have been stolen from a bedroom at Fontainebleau castle, which was sometimes occupied by the Emperor Napoleon.

Receipts of Paris theaters and music halls, taxed by the municipality for the poor, last year amounted to $8,005,100. The tax is 10 per cent.

Russia has eighty-six general holidays in a year.

Diamonds Falling From the Sky.

The Diablo meteorite contains small diamonds in fissures of the metal connected by cracks to the nucleus of sulphide of iron. It seemed likely, then, that sulphur has displaced the carbon from carbide of iron. The meteorite also contains phosphorus and silicum, which might intervene in the separation of carbon. By melting Swedish iron in an electric crucible and adding sulphide of iron, then plunging the crucible into cold water, Moissan obtained little diamonds. The cold water penetrating the carbon crucible cooled the iron towards its heart, where the liquid carbon solidified in the form of diamonds.

Diamonds obtained by adding sulphide of iron are like those made without it, but there are more of them. Diamonds made by addition of silicum are more irregular in form. The addition of phosphate of iron gave no diamonds. M. Moissan concludes that carbon, at ordinary pressure submitted to a high temperature, vaporizes and yields graphite, whereas carbon liquified under a high pressure yields diamonds.

Treason Against Wagner.

Richard Wagner, the composer, was an ardent republican in 1849. In the archives of Dresden there has just been unearthed a document setting forth a case of high treason against the musician. He was accused of having written to a friend a letter proposing to turn Saxony into a republic. "But whom shall we make president?" he asked. "I see nobody competent for the office except our present sovereign, Frederick Augustus II." Frederick Augustus does not seem to have appreciated the humor of the suggestion that he should doff the crown and content himself with the dignity of a republican president. For this flash of unconscious fun, Wagner had to bolt to Switzerland.

A Malay Custom.

You can scarcely ever get your money from a Malay on Friday, because they believe that if they pay their creditors on a Friday they will be overtaken by penury. Malays never shave or cut their nails on Saturday or Tuesday, because these are unlucky days, and if they do part with the hair or nails on these days they believe that they will be always in trouble or will die quickly.

The Oldest Brick Yard.

It is believed that a brickyard at Nivaagaard, Denmark, which began operation in 1701 for the purpose of manufacturing brick and terra cotta to be used in building a castle for Queen Louise is the oldest one in existence.

The German emperor is fond of collecting neckties and scarfs of all ages and of all countries, and is said to have no fewer than 18,000.

Truths that Strike Home

Your grocer is honest and—if he cares to do so—can tell you that he knows very little about the bulk coffee he sells you. How can he know, where it originally came from, how it was blended—or with what—or when roasted? If you buy your coffee loose by the pound, how can you expect purity and uniform quality?

LION COFFEE, the LEADER OF ALL PACKAGE COFFEES, is of necessity uniform in quality, strength and flavor. For OVER A QUARTER OF A CENTURY, LION COFFEE has been the standard coffee in millions of homes.

LION COFFEE is carefully packed at our factories, and until opened in your home, has no chance of being adulterated, or of coming in contact with dust, dirt, germs, or unclean hands.

In each package of LION COFFEE you get one full pound of Pure Coffee. Insist upon getting the genuine. (Lion head on every package.)

Quality vs. Quantity.

Hard muscles and strong body do not depend on the quantity of food you eat, but on its perfect digestion and proper assimilation. When you take Kodol Dyspepsia Cure your system gets all the nourishment out of all the food you eat. It digests what you eat regardless of the condition of the stomach and conveys the nutrient properties to the blood and tissues. This builds up and strengthens the entire system. Kodol cures Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Belching, Sour Stomach, Weak Heart, etc. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure for what is sometimes called America's national disease—Dyspepsia—is destined to eventually work a wonderful and lasting benefit to sufferers from this distressing and mind harassing condition. Sold by Upchurch Drug co.

The Baldheaded Eagle.

The staid, dignified and homely baldheaded eagle, the glorious emblem of the American republic, mates but once and lives with his one mate until he or she dies. If left a widower—even a young widower—the baldheaded eagle never mates again. He remains alone and disconsolate in the nest on the rocky crag or in the branches of a tall pine that formed his domicile while his mate was alive. No other female eagle can tempt him to forsake his disconsolate life.

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY
REVIEW OF REVIEWS

The more Magazines there are, the more Indispensable is The Review of Reviews

"Indispensable." "The one magazine I feel I must take." "The world under a field-glass." "An education in public affairs and current literature,"—these are some of the phrases one hears from noted people who read the Review of Reviews. The more magazines there are, the more necessary is the Review of Reviews, because it brings together the best that is in all the most important monthlies of the world. Such is the flood of periodical literature that nowadays people say that the only way to keep up with it is to read the Review of Reviews. Entirely over and above this reviewing section, it has more original matter and illustrations than most magazines, and the most timely and important articles printed in any monthly.

Probably the most useful section of all is Dr. Albert Shaw's illustrated "Progress of the World," where public events and issues are authoritatively and lucidly explained in every issue. Many a subscriber writes, "This department alone is worth more than the price of the magazine." The unique cartoon department, depicting current history in caricature, is another favorite. The Review of Reviews covers five continents, and yet is American, first and foremost.

Men in public life, the members of Congress, professional men, and the great captains of industry who must keep "up with the times," intelligent men and women all over America, have decided that it is "indispensable."

Cuban Diarrhoea.

U. S. Soldiers who served in Cuba during the Spanish war know what this disease is, and that ordinary remedies have little more effect than so much water. Cuban diarrhoea is almost as severe and dangerous as a mild attack of cholera. There is one remedy, however, that can always be depended upon as will be seen by the following certificate from Mrs. Minnie Jacobs of Houston, Texas: "I hereby certify that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy cured my husband of a severe attack of Cuban diarrhoea, which he brought home from Cuba. We had several doctors but they did him no good. One bottle of this remedy cured him, as our neighbors will testify. I thank God for so valuable a medicine." TO THE PEOPLE OF CHILTON COUNTY.

When I returned to Clanton last January, it was my purpose to erect additional buildings and resume permanently the University School work here in fitting boys and girls for University, and for the business affairs of life. It would have required about $3000 to carry out my plan. This cash I did not have, so decided to sell the north third of my lot, which included the present building for $2000, and with this and what cash I had erect the necessary buildings on the south front of the lot. Pending this deal, the Talladega Fertilizer Co. offered to buy the whole lot, and I sold, still intending to locate elsewhere in Clanton. When I came to investigate the prices of real estate here, while the prices were reasonable enough for small buildings in small lots, it was entirely out of reach for a large building on a large lot of 4 or 5 acres. As to the support of the school, while not intending to exclude any worthy boy or girl of Clanton, it was my purpose, by getting boarding pupils, to make my school wholly independent of Clanton. This I had, and still have no doubt of my ability to do. While it must be confessed that there are several objections to Clanton as a suitable location for such a school as I proposed, and had previously maintained here for eight years, none will deny to it health, pure air, the best of freestone water, and beautiful forest oaks.

Returning early in January when all had made their school arrangements for the year, I did not expect, and had no right to expect any one, however ardent and partial his preference for me, to patronize the school. However, upon the solicitation of friends, the school was opened Jan. 11 with a number limit of 40 pupils. This limit, without solicitation on my part, was exceeded, as we enrolled 46, our patrons being, as all know, among the best citizens of the town. For this renewal of preference for me, personally and professionally, I am sincerely thankful.

As to the eight and one-half years' work of the University School during its period of activity at Clanton, I need not speak. Appreciative patrons and pupils will take care of that side of the question.

Finally, I beg to reassure my friends of Chilton county, especially my country friends who bore the additional burden of paying board in order to patronize my school I shall never cease to remember and appreciate your generous approval of my work.

E. Y. McMORRIES.

Editor Banner: This is the first time I have asked for space in the dear old Banner, so I will come this time. I love to read the Man on the Corner with the other good letters and the good things Bro. Gulledge has said. Some speak of stock law; I think we have law enough if it was executed, though as long as we have some to plead against law and order, to uphold drunkenness and the disturbing of public worship, and try to lower the standard of the ministry by comparing the preaching of the Gospel to a beast bellowing, it shows a very low calling. And it speaks no better for the man who will blame the preacher and uphold the drunkard, they are no better than the law breaker. I am sorry for people of this kind. Best wishes to Editor and office boys.

Your friend and brother,
W. S. COX.

The Children's Day came and went and was spent in a most enjoyable manner by all. The recitations were very good, and at 11 o'clock Rev. J. R. Caldwell preached a most excellent and instructive sermon. After which a bounteous dinner was spread, and we can tell the same true story, plenty for all there and plenty to spare, for which we thank the good people of this and surrounding community.

At 2 p.m. the District No. 6 Sunday School Association, composed of Beats 7 and 8, were called to order by our pastor, Rev. Robert Jones, and by motion of Hon. T. U. Crumpton the following officers were elected for the organization: H. J. Groom, President; Geo. Fox, Vice-President; A. B. Deason, Secretary and Treasurer. We hope all the Sunday schools in the district will take a special interest and help carry on the work to a grand success. We were glad to have our pastor, Rev. T. J. Deason, with us and hope he will visit us again in the near future.

Yours for success,
DISTRICT SECRETARY.

THE BANNER.

Published Weekly

CLANTON, ALA.

Why not in every home a quarrelling room, set apart for those to go to who are ill-natured, and a severe penance demanded from each and every one found "growling" outside of it? suggests Good Housekeeping.

Now that an American clothing dealer has called his establishment a "suititorium," we tremble at the suggested possibilities. The next thing in order is a "suititorium" with a hat and capiform appendix.

Three Englishman and one Frenchman attempted to cross the Channel in balloons, but only the Frenchman succeeded. We congratulate the Frenchman on his British pluck and perseverance, says London Punch.

The Swiss Government having decided to present every school child with a copy of Wilheln Tell, we humbly suggest that they include with each copy one bow and arrow, one indestructible apple, and one pair of goggles.

Half-hearted farming is always more or less unsuccessful, says the Massachusetts Ploughman. Push and enthusiasm bring dollars and heaps of enjoyment besides. How to get enthusiasm? Why, talk with those who have it, or read what they write. It's catching.

Th Iowa State Board of Health has issued an order that all physicians shall henceforth be clean shaven, states the Boston Transcript. It is maintained that disease germs are often whisked in the sickroom by means of the doctor's whiskers. By the same token women physicians should be required to wear trousers.

William Zeigler failed in the one great and commendable ambition of his later years—"to plant the Stars and Stripes on the North Pole if it costs a million to do it"—but it was through no fault of his own, declares the New York Tribune. The millioa was ready, but the man to carry the flag there could not be found.

"See all these men sitting around here, and, just think of it, they are paid!" was the remark of one of a bevy of school girls, personally conducted through the State House, as she caught sight of the senators in their reading room, according to the Springfield Republican. This higher education is making our young women very discerning.

Somebody asks our market editor what crop will pay best to plant this year, says the Massachusetts Ploughman. He replies: "Plant the crops you know most about and stick to them. Don't change for the reason that same crop sold very high or very low last year. But regulate the quantity and proportion of crops somewhat by the conditions you expect. Read all the news you can find bearing on the crop situation and size it all up at planting. When in doubt, plant more corn, which is generally a safe crop, and there is never too much of it on the farm."

Governor Hoch, of Kansas, in Leslie's Monthly says: "The loss of life in this country in railroad accidents is alarming and horrifying. It is a misnomer to call much of this human slaughter the result of accidents, and it is often very unjust to charge it to carelessness of employes, as is generally done. The fact is, railroad employes are generally overworked in this country, and the wonder is, not that so many accidents occur, but that more do not occur. Labor laws should be more generous to railroad employes and more vigorously enforced. But among the reforms for the protection of the traveling public perhaps no one thing is more important than the general adoption of the block system. If this system were in operation on all the lines of railroad in this country, the mortality from railroad wrecks would be immensely decreased. Of course, the compulsory adoption of this system involves a large expenditure of money, but when human life is involved, monetary conditions should have but little weight, and certainly should not control."

God the Comforter.

The only final comfort is God, and He relieved the soul always in its suffering, not from its suffering—nay, He relieves the soul by its suffering, by the new knowledge and possession of Himself which could only come through that atmosphere of pain.—Phillips Brooks.

GENERAL STATE NEWS.

Current News Garnered as It Falls From the Plant of Report.

Clerk Bound Over.

Birmingham, Ala.—S. F. Bissett, the clerk at the general delivery window of the postoffice, who was arrested Tuesday on a charge of taking money from the mails, was Thursday bound over by Commissioner Alex C. Birch to await the action of the grand jury. He made the required bond of $1,500.

Assistant United States Attorney Steele was present at the hearing and argued against Bissett, who was defended by A. L. Drennen. Postoffice Inspector R. E. Barry and W. E. Griffith, a clerk in the postoffice, testified as to the sending of the decoy letter.

Inspector Barry said that Bissett had been suspected of taking money from the mail, and to confirm this suspicion he and Mr. Griffith addressed a letter to "Mrs. Mary Thompson, Birmingham, Ala.," containing three $1 bills. The numbers of the bills were taken and were later identified by the inspector as the ones taken from Bissett. The letter containing the money was postmarked Atlanta, Ga., and was put in the general delivery window early Tuesday afternoon. It was discovered later that the letter was missing, and Bissett was arrested in front of the store of the Rankin-Tuck Paint Company on Second avenue.

Clerk W. E. Griffith corroborated the testimony of Inspector Barry, and added that Bissett approached him after the occurrence and requested that he give him any assistance he could.

Attempted Criminal Assault.

Bessemer, Ala.—A dark yellow negro with a thin mustache, height about five feet six inches, weight 140 pounds wearing black slouch hat, dark coat and pants, a white shirt and canvas shoes attempted a brutal assault upon Myrtle Cox, the 12-year-old daughter of W. Cox, near Woodward Friday morning at 9 o'clock. The little girl was en route from Brighton to her home when the negro approached her, hitting her over the head with a pistol and chocking her almost into insensibility. The mother of the girl responded to her cries and frightened the negro away. The attempted assault took place near the point where the Woodward railway crosses the Louisville and Nashville.

In a few minutes the whole neighborhood was alarmed and in forty minutes a large posse had collected and the bloodhounds, which had been procured, were placed on the trail of the negro. They at once took up the scent, but after following it to a pool of water a few yards away, lost it and all effort to recover the trail proved fruitless. The negro was headed in the direction of the negro quarters near the furnaces of the Woodward Company.

Conductor Killed.

Selma, Ala.—Information reached the city Friday of the killing near Curls of Conductor A. H. McEachin, of the Southern railway, on duty on a logging road between that place and Bellamey, where is located the Allison Lumber Company. The place of the killing is about four miles from Coatopa. The remains of Mr. McEachin passed through Selma en route for Anniston via Birmingham. McEachin was greatly liked by the men on the road, and his death was learned with great sorrow. A delegation of railroad conductors from Selma was appointed to accompany the remains to their resting place at Anniston.

Three Are Drowned.

Scottsboro, Ala.—While attempting to cross Crow creek, near this place, that was badly swollen from the continuous rains, Philip Hill, Henry Martin and a little daughter of Martin, aged 10 years, were drowned, also two mules that were hitched to the wagon and the horse Hill was driving. The creek is spanned by a bridge and the water was running over the bridge, but these parties undertook to drive across anyway, and drove off the side into the deep water. One girl was rescued by Tom Parton, who swam and brought her out. The bodies of the two men and little girl have not been recovered.

Lived in Three States.

Wetumpka, Ala.—Mrs. Betsy Harvel aged 95, is dead near here. Mrs. Harvel had the unusual distinction of having lived in Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi, though she resided all her life on the same farm, the land having been at different times located in the three states namec.

Heavy Liabilities.

Birmingham, Ala.—H. W. Bernheim filed papers of voluntary bankruptcy in the office of the clerk of the federal court Saturday. He places his liabilities at $60,186.10, with no assets.

Will Discontinue Schools.

Huntsville, Ala.—The Madison county school board has decided that only one school will be maintained in each of the school districts of the county. In districts that had two schools the trustees are required to decide upon one and discontinue the other, and the board expresses the opinion that this measure will give the schools the full benefit of the appropriations. When possible, the district schools will have more than one teacher.

Safe Robbers Successful.

Benton, Ala.—Thursday night occurred the robbery of the safe of the mercantile firm of Carlisle & Co., successors to E. E. Curtis. The robbery was not discovered until the store was opened Friday morning, when the door of the safe was found across the store from the safe itself, and every indication presented the appearance of expert safe blowers. There was about $75 or $100 in the safe, which was secured by the burglars, but they overlooked a much larger sum in their anxiety that they might have discovered.

Ashville, Ala.—Mr. Oscar Clark and Miss Ester Nunnally, of Ashville, were married Sunday afternoon.

Though married in fun they are now wondering in all seriousness how they are to become single again, since the marriage was legal in every respect, being performed by an ordained minister with marriage license filled out and properly signed.

It seems the young people had been discussing matrimony in a rather disinterested way until it was suggested they have a mock marriage.

Mr. Clark asked the young lady if she would not embark with him on life's matrimonial sea, to which she consented, and together they went in search of the judge, and having secured license they further proceeded to find the minister and in the shadow of the church they stood hand in hand, and without questions or ceremony they were pronounced man and wife.

Tried to Wreck Train.

Opelika, Ala.—An attempt was made Friday night by unknown parties to wreck the Central of Georgia train operating between here and Americus, Ga. Crossties had been placed on the track about eight miles from the city, but owing to a steep grade near the train was necessarily slowed up at that place, and, as the ties had not been securely placed, they were pushed off the track by the engine.

Injunction Dissolved.

Lafayette, Ala.—Acting Chancellor Oscar Lewis, of Tuskegee, rendered a decision late Thursday night in the injunction proceeding to prevent the Lafayette railway from dismantling its tracks, dissolving the injunction, which virtually means that the work of tearing up the track can proceed.

Personal Encounter.

Birmingham, Ala.—L. W. Johns and E. Erswell, two well-known citizens of Birmingham, had a personal difficulty Thursday afternoon on Third avenue, between Twentieth and Twenty-first streets, in which both men were more or less injured. Mr. Erswell is said to be severely bruised and cut about the face, while Mr. Johns suffered several slight bruises.

Another Furnace for Tuscaloosa.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—The old Hardy Clements homestead near the station of Vance, on the Alabama Great Southern railroad, has been sold by Mrs. M P. Marloe to the Big Sandy Iron Company, a very wealthy company composed of northern financiers. The price paid for the land was $60,000. It is said that this is one of the best pieces of iron land in this section, and that a very large and up-to-date furnace will be built at some point between Vance and the Warrior river some time within the near future, W. P. Pinkard, who represented the company, has returned to Birmingham. The coming of this, another furnace, is but the beginning of Tuscaloosa's wonderful growth.

Preparing for Lock Opening.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—The lock celebration on the Fourth of July continues to be the all-absorbing topic here. The committee has arranged for a splendid barbecue at Riverview, which will be free to every one. The celebration will take place at Lock 13, ten miles north of this place. The boats are to transfer all those who will attend without charge. They will be gaily decorated with bunting and national flags and will seat 1,200 people.

Dan Card Hanged.

Clayton, Ala.—Dan Card, the negro who killed Mr. Robert Arrington near Solomon's Mill, this county, was hanged here Friday. The execution took place in the jail, and although an immense concourse of people filled the jail yard and blocked the street in front of the jail, everything passed off in a quiet and orderly manner.

At 10:50 o'clock Card was placed beside the trap and prayer was offered by R. T. Schell, pastor of the negro Baptist church. At a signal he then took his stand on the trap, which fell at 11 o'clock exactly, and in ten minutes he was pronounced dead.

Saw Mill Man Injured.

Gadsden, Ala.—J. D. York, who runs the lath saw at the saw mill of the Kyle Lumber Company, was very badly hurt Friday by a slab being caught in the machinery and thrown forward with considerable force, striking him on the cheek and also on the collar bone. While no bones were broken he was badly bruised up and it will be several weeks before he is able to be out at his post again.

Terminal Company Incorporation.

Montgomery, Ala.—To build and operate railroad terminal facilities the Birmingham Terminal Company has been organized and a certificate of its incorporation filed with the secretary of state.

A Postmaster Held to Bail.

Birmingham, Ala.—Postmaster W. C. Courson, of Davis, St. Clair county, was given a preliminary hearing Friday before United States Commissioner Alex C. Birch in this city, to answer a charge against him for retailing whiskey without a license at Davis. His Daughter Missing.

Birmingham, Ala.—W. M. Whaley, a respected farmer living in the western portion of Jefferson county between Coalburg and Palos, reported to the chief of police in Birmingham Friday that his 13-year-old daughter, Gene, was missing from home. He stated that the girl attended a school taught by Prof. Robert McPeters, aged 23, and he, too, is reported missing. He fears an elopement, he said.

Killed by Train.

Troy, Ala.—Snow Middlebrooks, of Ansley, was run over and instantly killed by the northbound Atlantic Coast Line passenger train No. 39 about 5 o'clock Friday afternoon. Middlebrooks was walking up the track in the South Three Notch freight yards and did not hear the train, being a deaf mute. He was a thrifty farmer of Ansley beat and had come to town with his sister for the purpose of selling some cotton. He leaves a wife and one small child.

A Cutting Scrap.

Birmingham, Ala.—M. J. Land, foreman of a switching crew on the Seaboard Air Line railroad, and J. L. Morgan, a telegraph operator for the Louisville and Nashville railway, stationed at Fifth avenue and Thirtieth street, became engaged in a quarrel Friday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the latter's office, and both were more or less seriously cut with pocket knives.

Land was severely cut about the face and body, and it is feared that his injuries may prove fatal. Morgan was cut on the arm and hand, and is not in a serious condition.

Shoots Himself Accidentally.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—News has been received here that Dave Ward, 14 years of age, accidently shot and killed himself Thursday while out hunting on the Winn place, several miles south of this city. The boy was engaged in dismounting when the trigger was caught in a brier. The load took effect under his arm and death was the immediate result.

Injured By Machinery.

Gadsden, Ala.—J. D. York, who runs the lath saw at the Kyle Lumber Company mills, was badly injured by being thrown forward after catching in the machinery and having his head and shoulder hurt.

Father Was Dismayed.

Girard, Ala.—Nettie Perry, living at Brickyard, Ala., has given birth to triplets. When the three bouncing girls appeared the father, dismayed at the extent of his blessing, disappeared, and at last reports has not returned home.

Guin, Ala.—Guin, the progressive little city of Marion county, is to have a bank.

SEC'Y. HAY IS DEAD.

After a Short Illness, he passes Away at his Summer Home.

WAS SICK ONLY A SHORT TIME.

Slept Peacefully Until Only a Very Short Time Before the Fatal Summons Came.

Newbury, N. H.—John Hay, secretary of state, died Saturday at his summer home, "The Fells," on the shore of Lake Sunapee. The hour of his passing was 12:25 o'clock that morning. The last moments of the statesman were peaceful and the end came almost without a struggle.

The suddenness of it all was staggering. At the hour of 12 all was quiet. In another moment nurses and physicians found themselves summoned to find their distinguished patient dead. There had been a collapse. Twenty-five minutes later all was over. So swiftly had the end come that the dying man passed away unattended by any of the members of his family save his wife. The others a son and a daughter, were summoned, but they reached the beside only to find him dead. Friday was the most comfortable day since his illness began a week ago. He was to sit up Saturday. The patient had bidden his wife and physicians good night at 10 o'clock Friday night. An hour later he was sleeping quietly. Almost at the stroke of 12 the secretary was seized with a turn. He called for the family and a nurse responded.

Household Aroused.

The sick man was breathing with great difficulty. Dr. Scudder was speedily summoned and it required but a glance for him to determine that the end was but minutes away. The household was aroused. The wife reached her husband as he was breathing his last. The son, Clarence E. Hay, and the daughter, Mrs. James A. Wadsworth, of Genesee, N. Y., hurried into the sick room, but they were too late.

Death was caused by pulmonary embolysm, according to Dr. Scudder. The patient did not suffer greatly in his last moments. Aside from great difficulty in breathing there was no struggle. Stimulants were ineffective. The secretary lapsed into unconsciousness and seemed to fall asleep at last.

Bulletin Issued.

The consternation of the household was complete. After two hours the physician was driven to the village, where half a dozen telegrams were dispatched. The first went to President Roosevelt at Oyster Bay. The second was addressed to the state department at Washington. Others were sent to friends of the family.

The bulletin announcing the death read as follows:

"Secretary of State John Hay died at 12:25 this morning. The signs immediately preceding his death were those of pulmonary embolysm. Mr. Hay's condition during all of Friday had been entirely satisfactory.

(Signed.)

"CHARLES L. SCUDDER, M. D.

"FRED'K T. MURPHY, M. D."

Grew Ill in the Spring.

The illness which so weakened Mr. Hay's physical powers as to bring about death made itself noticeable about last March. Tired and worn from the strain of overwork, he was ordered by his physicians to make a trip abroad in order to obtain special treatment and a complete rest.

Last Saturday evening he arrived at his summer home here, accompanied by his son, Clarence. Mrs. Hay had preceded him.

Contracted Slight Cold.

The journey fatigued the secretary, however, and furthermore while traveling he contracted a slight cold. When Mr. Hay suddenly collapsed on the afternoon of the following day, his wife and son became greatly alarmed.

At first an operation was determined upon, but with the administration of powerful medicines some relief came and it was soon found that an operation could be avoided. By Monday the doctors were able to announce that Mr. Hay's condition was not at all serious, and that with a few days' absolute rest he would undoubtedly again take up outdoor life. It was the ruling of the physicians, however, that the secretary should remain in bed for a period of a few days, in order to avoid all chances of augmenting the cold.

Steadily Improving.

Dr. Scudder returned to Boston Monday evening, leaving Dr. Murphy in charge of the patient.

The next day Secretary Hay was not so well. A nurse was summoned from Boston and Dr. Scudder returned. However, the secretary's illness was not deemed so severe as to call for the presence of members of his family.

Peacefully Asleep.

There was nothing, Dr. Scudder declared, to cause anxiety when he ed the bedside, and after bidd wife and doctors a cheerfu night, the secretary fell into troubled and restful sleep. Th watching by his beside felt that the patient was on the to recovery. At midnight and ment of time this was all Mr. Hay awoke with breathing and quick. QUEER TERMS OF SAILORS.

Language of the Sea Contains Many Familiar Words.

The timeworn growl of the disgruntled bluejacket, "Why did I ever sell my farm and go to sea?" shows the trend of the sailor's mind toward the peaceful occupation of his rustic brother, and may account for applying terms agricultural to things nautical.

The casual visitor to a warship is always mystified by seeing what appears to be a bale of hay in the fore hold, and his curiosity is not abated when told that it goes to feed the "jackasses," kept, appropriately, in the "manger." His shrunked credulity resumes normal dimensions when it is explained that "jackasses" are canvas bags filled with oakum, which are forced into the hawse pipes to prevent water from entering at sea.

Neither is a "Flemish horse" a rare breed of equine, nor a "bridle port" a place for hitching him; the former is a footrope for men to stand upon when furling sail, and the latter is an air port in the bows through which towing hawsers used to be led. The "saddle" of the bowsprit completes the riding outfit of the ship.

The menagerie of a man-o'-war contains a "cat" and "fish," both of which are used to "weigh" the anchor; "catheads," where the lookout of sailing ships stands his watch; "wildcats," which, with "whelps," hold the chain on the capstan, and the "bees of the bowsprit." On some days it is possible to find a "catspaw"—a sudden puff of wind—and a landlubber can easily "catch a crab" in pulling a boat; indeed, it is hard to let one go without unshipping the oar.

"Dog watches" are of nightly occurrence between 4 and 8 o'clock, when the usual four-hour watch is split into two parts. The dog watches are supposed to get their name from the fact that they are "cur-tailed," and not because the dog star, Sirius, keeps those hours.

When the gunner orders his mates to "clean the dashpot," he is not using polite profanity, but directing the cleaning of a part of the gun recoil cylinder. The "plow" of a Gatling gun may assist in turning the "sod" for the enemy, but not in a literal sense. Nor do the "telltales" of the engine room give it away; instead they peacefully record the revolutions of the screws.

The propellers are usually on a "strut," but it is not the vulgar parlance for saying they are angry; the strut is the steel arm that holds them in position. Ship's masts, like men, have "partners," which though wooden, strengthen them and make them firm. These are "payed" with pitch. Awnings have "backbones," "strongbacks," a "shark's mouth," "dogs ears" and "earrings."

The "trimming tanks" are huge compartments for holding sea water which may be let in to change the trim or inclination of the ship, due to the fact that the coal may have been used from only one side, giving the ship a "list."

A queer commodity in the engineers' storeroom is "loofa," a kind of Japanese sea cucumber, used for a filter in the boilers. Ground glass is also carried to grind valve seats and bearings. The wardroom "country" is the space around officers' quarters. The "hammock nettings" are no more an affair of thread mesh than is the "main sheet" a part of the sail; the former being stowage space for the crew's hammocks when not in use, and the latter a rope made fast to a clew, or corner of the sail. Even anchors have "shanks," "rings," "crowns," "arms" and "flukes."—Detroit Tribune.

Herodotus on Mosquitoes.

The discovery of Sir H. Arthur Blake that the transmission of malaria is recognized in Sanskrit literature recalls the following passage in Herodotus: "The contrivances which they use against gnats, wherewith the country swarms, are the following: "In the parts of Egypt above the marshes the inhabitants pass the night upon lofty towers, which are of great service, as the gnats are unable to fly to any height on account of the winds. In the marsh country, where there are no towers, each man possesses a net instead. By day it serves him to catch fish, while at night he spreads it over his bed in which he is to rest, and creeping in, goes to sleep underneath. The gnats, which if he rolls himself up in his dress or in a piece of muslin, are sure to bite through the covering, do not so much as attempt to pass the net." (Rawlinson's Herodutus, Vol. II., page 154.)—Lancet.

The English Servant.

The English servant requires to be studied. The world's other servants are mere amateurs, the English servant has a trade. As an American I proceeded to treat mine a l' Americaine, and I made my first blunder. A sensible American is, if not friends with her servants, at least friendly. The English woman, if she is sensible, presents to her servants a surface of perfect indifference, and then she has peace, for the English servant despises a considerate and kindly mistress as not knowing her place. The most difficult thing for a stranger to learn is that impalpable line between the different servants' duties. If one does not enumerate what one expects of them when they are hired, afterward it is too late. They have, however, a rough sense of honor, and they generally do what they agree to.—Harper's Bazar.

Pretty Custom of Japanese.

At the birth of a Japanese baby a tree is planted, which must remain untouched until the marriage day of the child. Then the tree is cut down and a skilled cabinet maker transforms the wood into furniture, which is considered by the young couple as the most beautiful of all the ornaments of the house.

ARE TO HAVE PEACE.

The President Notified of the Selection of the Plenipotentiaries.

ENVOYS HAVE FULL POWER.

Each Nation Notified Who the Plenipotentiaries Are and Expressed Their Approval.

Oyster Bay—Official announcement was made by President Roosevelt today of the names of the Russian and Japanese envoys to the Washington peace conference. The character and ability of the men selected by both belligerents is an earnest of the desire their respective governments to conclude, if possible, the tragedy being enacted in the far east. The plenipotentiaries are:

Russian — Ambassador Muravieff, formerly minister of justice and now ambassador to Italy, and Baron Rosen recently appointed as ambassador to the United States to succeed Count Cassini.

Japanese—Baron Komura, minister of foreign affairs, and Kogoro Takahira, minister to the United States.

President Formally Notified.

A day or two ago the Russian and Japanese governments formally communicated to President Roosevelt the names of the plenipotentiaries they respectively had selected. Acting as an intermediary, the president communicated the names of the Japanese envoys to the St. Petersburg government and those of the Russian representatives to the government at Tokio. Having received from both governments assurances that they were satisfactory, the president according to his agreement with the belligerents authorized the public announcement of the envoys. Some delay was occasioned in the selection of the plenipotentiaries by the instance of the Japanese that the envoys of both governments be clothed with full power to conclude peace and negotiate a peace treaty.

Envoys Must Have Full Power.

The Japanese government indicated pointedly that the emperor would not permit his envoys to enter upon a tentative conference in which the Japanese were to define terms and then let Russia decide whether the conference should proceed to further deliberations. The Japanese government insisted that the plenipotentiaries should have conferred upon them treaty making powers and that the negotiations should be entered upon in a spirit of perfect sincerity. Such, too, was the position taken by President Roosevelt. He maintained that only by clothing the envoys with ample authority to act for their respective governments could a lasting peace be achieved. He strongly urged the St. Petersburg government to accede to what was regarded as a reasonable proposition of Japan. That he was successful in his presentation of the matter to the Russian emperor is indicated clearly in the statement which he issued today.

Preliminary Negotiations Closed.

The President's announcement practically closes the preliminary negotiations for peace. Minor details remain yet to be arranged, but the conference now seems to be assured. While no absolute date for the meeting of the envoys has been fixed, it has been determined that the first session will be held in Washington about the first of August.

Baron Rosen already is en route to the United States, his coming being to succeed Count Cassini as the Russian ambassador to this country. It is probable that Ambassador Muravieff will start for the United States, accompanied by a considerable staff of secretaries, clerks and interpreters. The Japanese contingent of officials and attaches, it is expected, will leave Japan in time to reach Washington by the first of August.

No Place Yet Decided On.

No decision has yet been reached as to the place of holding the sessions of the conference. For the purpose of organization and to determine upon plans for the future, the plenipotentiaries will meet in Washington, but it is regarded as highly probable that at an early date thereafter they will adjourn to hold the business sessions of the conference in some city on the north Atlantic seaboard. In this connection the word "here" in the official statement issued today is likely to be misunderstood. It means merely "in this country."

The sessions of the conference will not, of course, be held in Oyster Bay, although the representatives of both powers will probably go to Oyster Bay to pay their respects to the president. This trip to the president's home probably will be made in two warships, the Mayflower and the Dolphin being under consideration for the mission.

We are having a mighty good Sunday school and the people are taking a deep interest in it. We had an excellent talk by Rev. J. I. Hand on the following subject: "What is the Sunday school and what has it done for our country and children?" The subject was pointed, lengthy and telling. The people seemed to enjoy the talk much. We heartily invite everybody to visit our school and would be glad to have good talkers to talk on any subject.

Crops are looking very well considering the season; people are cleaning up with their crops mighty fast. We are needing rain badly.

Well, Mr Editor, we would be mighty glad if you would come down and eat watermelons and see the crops.

Your friend and subscriber,
W. O. Rich, Supt.

One Dollar Saved Represents Ten Dollars Earned

The average man does not save to exceed ten per cent of his earnings. He must spend nine dollars in living expenses for every dollar saved. That being the case he cannot be too careful about unnecessary expenses. Very often a few cents properly invested, like buying seeds for his garden, will save several dollars outlay later on. It is the same in buying Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It costs but a few cents, and a bottle of it in the house often saves a doctor's bill of several dollars. Mulberry.

Quarterback—Please allow me space in the dear old Banner to say a word about our all-day base ball picnic the 7th of July, seven miles south of Clanton, at Mr. John Burkhalter's. We are going to try to have several ball teams there and play all day. We have already challenged the F. G. team and aim to get Clanton team to come down. These are the fastest amateur teams I know of, and I believe they will play an interesting game. We cordially invite everyone to come out and bring your baskets and spend the joyful day with us.

Best wishes to the Banner.
Blue Darter Captain.

You don't like those gray hairs, do you? And your husband certainly doesn't like them. Then why not try a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor? It restores color to gray hair every time, all the deep, rich color of early life. And it cures dandruff also.

"I certainly believe that Ayer's Hair Vigor is a splendid preparation for the hair and scalp, for I have used it more or less for six years. I can cheerfully recommend it to anyone in need of such a preparation."—MRS. KATE HOYT, Minneapolis, Minn.

The pills that act as a tonic, and not as a drastic purge, are DeWitt's Little Early Risers. They cure headache, Constipation, Biliousness, etc. Early Risers are small, easy to take and easy to act—a safe pill. Mack Hamilton, hotel clerk at Valley City, N. D., says: "Two bottles of these Famous Little Pills cured me of chronic constipation." Good for either children or adults. W. H. Howell, Houston, Tex., says: "For years I have used Little Early Riser Pills in my family. No better pill can be used for constipation, sick headache, etc., than these famous pills. Despite existence of [illegible] Verbena correspondence, we think that items, apparently trivial, are often of interest to a class of readers that like to know the whereabouts of friends without special correspondence.

Our popular milliner, Mrs. Wi-hart, visited Birmingham relations last week.

Mrs. Stanley is welcomed home from a few months' visit in Wetumpka.

Miss Kirkeby is visiting in Chicago

Miss Malmgren is spending her vacation with Thorsby friends and she has many.

Mr. Sam Thorson and family returned to spend the Fourth in Thorsby.

Miss Goodwin is the guest of her sister, Mrs. S. E. Norton.

Mr. and Mrs. Simpson of Birmingham visited their sisters last week.

Mr. M. E. Barrett is visiting in Iowa.

Rev. Clarke preached both morning and evening at the college last Sunday.

Rev. Helland held English services at Norwegian church Sunday evening

Rev. Nautalius and family are occupying the dormitory.

Prof. Ruffin has joined his family in Tennessee.

Merchant Hornsby is to be congratulated upon the arrival of Mrs. H. and her interesting family.

Mr and Mrs. Regan removed to the Hovey house July 1.

"If you would rule the world quietly you must keep it amused." Accordingly Thorsby celebrated the Fourth with picnics, games and a barbecue. And it is courtesy to forget that "the man who eats beef becomes in time bovine." And quote: "The vegetarian might easily become poor potatoes."

Popular Springs.

We are having a mighty good Sunday school and the people are taking a keen interest in it. We had an excellent talk by Rev. J. I. [illegible] on the following subject: "What is the Sunday school and what has it done for our country and children?" The subject was pointed, lengthy and [illegible]. The people seemed to enjoy the talk much. We heartily invite everybody to visit our school and would be glad to have good talkers to talk on any subject.

Crops are looking very well considering the season; people are cleaning up with their crops mighty fast. We are needing rain badly.

Well, Mr Editor, we would be mighty glad if you would come down and eat watermelons and see the crops.

One Dollar Saved Represents Ten Dollars Earned

The average man does not save to exceed ten per cent of his earnings. He must spend nine dollars in living expenses for every dollar saved. That being the case he cannot be too careful about unnecessary expenses. Very often a few cents properly invested, like buying seeds for his garden, will save several dollars outlay later on. It is the same in buying Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It costs but a few cents, and a bottle of it in the house often saves a doctor's bill of several dollars. For sale by Upchurch Drug co., Clanton, A. Horn, Thorsby.

Women Obtain Mrs. Pinkham's Advice and Help.

She Has Guided Thousands to Health—How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Cured Mrs. Fred Seydel.

Mrs. F. Seydel

It is a great satisfaction for a woman to feel that she can write to another telling her the most private and confidential details about her illness, and know that her letter will be seen by a woman only, a woman full of sympathy for her sick sisters, and above all, a woman who has had more experience in treating female ills than any living person.

Over one hundred thousand cases of female diseases come before Mrs. Pinkham every year, some personally, others by mail, and this has been going on for twenty years, day after day.

Surely women are wise in seeking advice from a woman of such experience, especially when it is absolutely free.

Mrs. Pinkham never violates the confidence of women, and every testimonial letter published is done so with the written consent or request of the writer, in order that other sick women may be benefited as they have been.

Mrs. Fred Seydel, of 413 North 54th Street, West Philadelphia, Pa., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"Over a year ago I wrote you a letter asking advice, as I had female ills and could not carry a child to maturity. I received your kind letter of instructions and followed your advice. I am not only a well woman in consequence, but have a beautiful baby girl. I wish every suffering woman in the land would write you for advice, as you have done so much for me."

Just as surely as Mrs. Seydel was cured, will Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cure every woman suffering from any form of female ills.

No other medicine in all the world has such a record of cures of female troubles as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Therefore no prudent woman will accept any substitute which a druggist may offer.

If you are sick, write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for special advice. It is free and always helpful.

CONSUMPTION

Why?

Why, when buying a book, are we influenced by the author's name? Why by an artist's if we purchase a picture?

Why do wise buyers insist upon having a reliable name on nearly everything they purchase?

It is because the name attached is the safeguard of the buyer—a protection against the palming off of inferior articles.

This "name guarantee" we all look for in the most important things we buy, and what can be more important than our food?

Everybody knows that all intelligent housekeepers are very particular about the buying of things to eat and drink, and nobody realizes it more than the up-to-date grocer, who caters to the wants of his customers.

For instance, every real grocer knows the reason for the universal popularity of LION COFFEE, the leader of all package coffees. He knows that its uniform purity and high quality have made it welcome in millions of American homes for over a quarter of a century.

Realizing this he cannot but hand it out cheerfully when asked for it. He knows that the people accept the package as a guarantee of the contents.

Yet there may be a few grocers left who do not recognize that the buyer—not the seller—has the right of choice, and they may want to sell their loose coffee (who knows what it is, or where it came from?) instead of LION COFFEE, which the customer asks for, and the merits of which both know.

In such cases the wisest advice is: "Change your dealer."

"For two years my neck was covered with sores, the humor spreading to my hair, which fell out, leaving an unsightly bald spot, and the soreness, inflammation and merciless itching made me wild. Friends advised Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and after a few applications the torment subsided, to my great joy. The sores soon disappeared, and my hair grew again, as thick and healthy as ever. I shall always recommend Cuticura. (Signed) H. J. Spalding, 104 W. 104th St., N. Y. City."

PACKERS INDICTED

Seventeen of the Big Companies Indicted—Statement of Miller, Their Counsel.

PROMINENT MEN TO ANSWER.

Violation of Anti-Trust Law and Illegal Rebating to Railroads is Charged.

Chicago, Ill.—After an investigation which has lasted something over three months and during which more than 100 witnesses were examined, the federal grand jury Saturday afternoon handed down its report. Seventeen men prominent in the packing industries of the country were indicted for violation of the Sherman anti-trust law and four officials of the Schwarzschild & Sulzberger Company were indicted for alleged illegal rebating to the railroads. Besides these individual indictments bills were voted against five corporations—Armour & Co., Swife & Co., Nelson Morris & Co., Cudahy Packing Company and the Fairbanks Canning Company.

The men indicted for alleged conspiracy in restraint of trade, which constitutes violation of the Sherman act, are: J. Ogden Armour, Charles Armour, of Armour & Co.; Arthur Meeker, general manager for Armour & Co.; T. J. Connor, a director of Armour & Co.; P. A. Valentine, treasurer of Armour & Co.; Samuel McRoberts, assistant treasurer of Armour & Co.; Louis F. Swift, president of Swift & Co.; Charles Swift, of Swift & Co.; Lawrence A. Kaston, treasurer of Swift & Co.; Arthur F. Evans, attorney for Swift & Co.; R. C. McManus, attorney for Swife & Co.; Edward Cudahy, of Cudahy & Co.; D. C. Hartwell, secretary of Swift & Co.; Edward F. Swift, vice-president of Swift & Co.; Edward Morris, secretary of Nelson Morris & Co., and Ira W. Morris, of Nelson Morris & Co.

The four employes of Schwarzschild & Sulzberger Company who were indicted for alleged rebating with the railroads are all connected with the traffic department of the corporation. Their names are Samuel Weil, B. S. Cusey, C. E. Todd, V. D. Shipworth.

Indictments Indentical.

The indictments voted for alleged violation of the anti-trust law were identical in each instance. The indictments contained each eight counts, which were spread over sixty-three typewritten pages.

The first and second counts in the indictments pertained only to beef sold in domestic trade.

The ninth and tenth counts relate to beef sold in foreign trade. The third count charges a conspiracy in restraint of trade and commerce among the states, and with foreign nations in fresh, dried, smoked, cured, canned and pickled meats and in certain bi-products of the packing industry, viz: Sausage casings, sausage containers, oleo stock, stearine and oils and also in butter, eggs and poultry.

Third indictment—The supply of commodities was to be curtailed and restrained whenever necessary to maintain the prices so fixed.

Fourth—The United States was divided up into territories between the defendants and each was to keep its own territory without interference by the others.

Fifth—There was a division as to the volume of trade allowed to each defendant in a given market; if one packer sold more than his percentage during a given week he was obliged to pay an "ante" of so much per hundredweight, according to the territory in which the matter occurred, into a pool to cover the excess of sales, and this fund was divided among the packers who fell short in their sales.

Sixth—Certain corporations, namely, the Aetna Trading Company and the Oppenheimer Manufacturing Company were to be appointed exclusive agents of the defendants to handle the sausage casings and containers, and those companies were to make arrangements with the several concerns which had been handling such merchandise in the markets of the world for working in harmony and controlling the output and price of the merchandise. This scheme involved the destruction or "tanking" of large quantities of casings whenever the supply was too great.

Miller's Statement.

Attorney John S. Miller, counsel for the packing firms, gave out the following statement:

"I ask for the packers who have been indicted the withholding of judgment until their side of this matter can be properly presented and known. I think the investigation on which these indictments are based was instituted and carried on with the previous conviction that the accused were guilty and the thing to accomplish was to get the evidence. The packers have been prejudiced and condemned by being called a beef trust, by continued and repeated charges without proofs and by gross falsehood and misrepresentation. The Garfield report accurately stated the facts in respect to the packing business, but its results, which were truthful and accurate, did not agree with the exaggerated and false charges that have been made.

"The packers are not violators of the Sherman act. They have endeavored to comply with the law in the best of faith, and in my opinion they have done so."

Charged With Forgery.

Birmingham, Ala.—James Wright, white, is under arrest charged with forgery. Friends of his presented a bond to the sheriff's office and suspicion was aroused that the signatures on the bond were not exactly correct. It was ascertained, according to information given out, that the names on the bond were not signed by the parties supposed to have signed them, and an additional charge of forgery has been preferred against Wright.

Woman Found Unconscious.

Birmingham, Ala.—Mrs. James Morgan was found lying in the street in front of her home on First avenue near the Avondale cotton mill Sunday morning shortly after midnight in an unconscious condition. She was carried to St. Vincent's hospital, where she was still unconscious at a late hour Sunday night. Her condition is said to be critical.

James Morgan, her husband; Francis Morgan, her mother-in-law, and Lula Morgan, her daughterin-law, were arrested by George W. Robinett, special officer for the Avondale Cotton Mill company, soon after the injured woman was found and were locker in the Birmingham city jail on charges of assault with intent to murder. When arrested they were all in the house asleep. The officer and others who accompanied him had considerable difficulty in arousing Morgan and his household. They had to break into the house.

The theory of the officer is that Mrs. Morgan was thrown from the second floor window during a quarrel. Morgan claims that she fell from the window.

Morgan and his family live in rooms on the second floor of Daniel's old brick building just across from the Avondale cotton mill on First avenue. They recently removed from Birmingham.

James Morgan is fifty-two years of age, his mother is seventy-four, his daughter-in-law is forty-eight and his wife is about fifty.

Working a Swindle.

Glasgow, Ky.—For several days past parties from all over the county have been coming to town saying that they have been victimized by two alleged agents of a sewing machine company, whose names were variously given as Brown, Kirby, Gibson and Jones. They began operations here about the first of April, and since have most thoroughly canvassed the county and placed several machines. In most instances they sold the machine for $65 and took an old machine and a note for $65, less the price agreed upon for the old machine.

About ten days ago the four local banks received the notes—about thirty to each bank—for collection, and notified the payers that they were due July 1. Nearly every day this week the banks have been visited by the people who signed the notes, and in nearly every instance they say that they were told they could make payments of 25 cents a week, a dollar a month or any other way that suited them best, as the notes would not be due for five years.

A number of the victims have employed attorneys to enjoin the banks from collecting the notes and will fight the matter to the bitter end.

John David Privett Dies.

Anniston, Ala.—John David Privett, one of Calhoun county's oldest and most highly respected citizens, died at the family residence at Oxford Saturday after an illness of over a year, aged 65 years. Although expected for several days past his death came as a shock to the many relatives and friends, by whom he was so tenderly loved. Mr. Privett was a Confederate soldier, a member of the Fifty-first Alabama, Joe Wheeler's original cavalry company, and a consistent member of the Methodist church. He leaves a wife and eight children.

Best Type of Warship.

Berlin.—The German Naval League, in a regular news bulletin, says the lesson of the battle of the Sea of Japan is that the best type of warships is the battleship and the largest displacement equipped with the heaviest possible guns and armor. The League notes that the Japanese torpedo boats attacked after the Russian fleet had been weakened.

A writer in Die Grenzboten, which contains official communications, analyzes the German navy as follows:

Of thirty-eight battleships on paper, including those laid down or authorized by the naval programme, thirteen are called "old boxes," scarcely fit for harbor defense. No. 38 has not yet been begun. Of the remainder only ten approach the modern battleships of other powers in size and gun power. The task before the government is defined to be to replace the antiquated ships with modern vessels.

A DISASTROUS FIRE

Occurred Early Monday Morning Causing a Heavy Loss, A Four Story Building.

ONE FIREMAN WAS KILLED.

Birmingham Paper Company Destroyed and Collins & Co.'s Grocery Partially Burned.

Birmingham, Ala.—Fire which started Monday morning at 2 o'clock completely destroyed the four-story building at 2105 and 2107 Morris avenue occupied by the Birmingham Paper company and Johnson & Parks, merchandise brokers, and partially destroyed the four-story building at 2101 and 2103 Morris avenue, occupied by Collins & Co., wholesale grocers.

Fireman Gip B. Spruell, of station No. 1, was killed by a falling wall at 3 o'clock, and Fireman Ed Huffman was seriously and fatally injured at the same time. Fireman Standfield had his leg badly bruised and Chief Mullin received a severe cut in the right shoulder from falling glass.

The total fire loss amounts to about $140,000, and the insurance is about 80 per cent of the loss. The values and insurance is approximately as follows:

Birmingham Paper company, stock $30,000, insurance $23,000; building $25,000, insurance $18,000. Collins & Co., $75,000, insurance $65,000; building, $25,000, insurance $10,000.

The loss on the Birmingham Paper company stock and building is total. Collins & Co.'s stock was damaged about $10,000 by fire and water ruined practically the rest of the stock. The damage to the building is about $75,000.

The origin of the fire is unknown. It was discovered just at 2 o'clock and the alarm was sounded from box 32. By the time the fire department reached the scene the entire building occupied by the Birmingham Paper company was wrapped in flames and they were shooting a hundred feet in the air.

By 2:30 o'clock a portion of the front wall of the paper company building fell in and Fireman Standfield was injured by the brick. He was carried to headquarters, where he was given medical attention. His injuries are not serious.

The fire spread to the building occupied by the Tyler Grocery company at 2107 and 2109 Morris avenue, and a part of the fourth story was damaged, but not to any considerable extent. A portion of the stock, estimated at about $100,000, was damaged by smoke and water.

The fourth story of the front wall of the paper company building fell in at 3 o'clock and Fireman Spruell received injuries from which he died in a few minutes, and Fireman Huffman was fatally injured, but still alive at 5 o'clock. The two firemen were directing an engine stream near the western side wall of the building, but the hose prevented their escape and they were caught under the wall. A dozen other firemen who were working near them escaped by a miracle.

It was several minutes before it was discovered that Huffman and Spruell were caught under the bricks, but willing hands soon rescued them. Spruell's head and chest were badly bruised and crushed by the brick. He was carried to the office of Drs. Dozier, on First avenue, where he died in a few minutes. The body was removed to the undertaking establishment of Lige Loy.

Huffman's head was badly cut and bruised by the brick, and his body was also bruised. A gash about four inches long and an inch deep was made across his cheek just under his eye, and he has a severe bruise on the back of the head. He was taken to the Hillman hospital, where City Physician Whelan operated on him.

When the front wall fell it spread the flames to the fourth story of the building occupied by Collins & Co., on the corner of Morris avenue and Twenty-first street. The water tower and the aerial track were used on the front end of the building, and several streams of water were turned on the building from the rear, while two or three were placed on the Twenty-first street bridge. The building was effectually flooded and the flames were checked before they reached the third floor.

Rural Carriers Appointed.

Washington, D. C.—Rural route No. 6 ordered established September 1, at Clinton, Chilton county, serving 453 people and 108 houses.

Rural carriers appointed: Calera, route 1, John R. Crouson, carrier; J. T. Pilgren, substitute; Fayette, route 2, Gather Vandiver, carrier; no substitute; route 3, Joe E. Caine, carrier, Arthur Gentry, substitute.

Twelve More Killed.

Warsaw.—Twelve workmen were killed and thirteen wounded by troops at Breziny, in the government of Petrokoff, Friday night. The workmen were marching in procession and carrying red flags, when they were stopped by a force of infantry, who fired volleys into the crowd and dispersed it. The wounded were taken to hospitals.

Eight thousand cotton mill employes at Zawiercie, in the government of Petrokoff, have gone on strike.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR JULY 9.

Subject: Hezekiah's Prayer, Isa. xxxviii., 1-8—Golden Text, Psa. xlvi., 1—Memory Verses, 4-6—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

I. Isaiah warns Hezekiah of approaching death (v. 1). "In those days." This may only mean in the days of Hezekiah. That this was in the fourteenth year of his reign is evident when we consider that fifteen years were added to his life (v. 5), and yet he only reigned twenty-nine years (2 Kings 18: 2). It must have been before the invasion by Sennacherib from the fact that God promised to deliver them out of the hand of the King of Assyria and to defend Jerusalem. "Sick unto death." Sick of a malady which, in the natural course of things, would have proved fatal. From 2 Kings 20: 7 we learn that the disease was probably a carbuncle. God sends illness upon the good, not in punishment for sins past, but as a trial of their faith and patience (Rom. 5: 3). "Isaiah." Isaiah's character stands before us as one of almost superhuman elevation. "Came unto him." There is no species of cruelty greater than to suffer a friend to lie on a dying bed under a delusion. And there is evidently no danger to be apprehended from communicating to the sick their true condition. It should be done tenderly and with affection, but it should be done faithfully. "Set thine house in order." Arrange your affairs so that they will go on without you; referring to his family, his plans, his successor and his kingdom. "Thou shalt die." Death was the natural result of his sickness.

II. Hezekiah prays in great distress (vs. 2, 3).

2. "Face toward the wall." He turned away from those who were present so that he might pray more freely and collectedly. 3. "Remember now." The old covenant promised temporal prosperity, including length of days, to the righteous. "Walked." Life is a journey; God's people walk with Him (Gen. 5: 24; 1 Kings 9: 4). "A perfect heart." Literally, "with a whole heart," one absolutely devoted to Jehovah. The king pleads his uprightness and holy conduct before God. He could not have done this, in the face of death, had he not felt in his heart the truthfulness of his statements. His influence had been wholly on the side of true religion; he had not forsaken the ways of the Lord. "Wept sore." Literally, "with a great weeping." The great sorrow of Hezekiah at the approach of death was only natural. The desire to live one's full term of years is right. Hezekiah felt that his work was unfinished.

III. God's promises to Hezekiah (vs. 4-6). 4. "Then came," etc. God spake to Isaiah immediately (2 Kings 20:4).

5. "God of David thy father." God remembers the covenant with the father to the children (Exod. 20-5). "Heard thy prayer." God still hears prayer. It is His will that we pray (Matt. 7: 7-11; John 15: 7). Why then are there so many unanswered petitions? Because there is so much aimless praying (James 4: 3). "Seen thy tears." Affectionate prayers are especially pleasing to God. Cold, lifeless prayers are not answered. David refers to his tears (Psa. 56: 8) as though God bottled them and kept an exact account of them in His "book." "Add unto thy days." In Kings the promise is, "I will heal thee; on the third day thou shalt go up unto the house of the Lord." The Lord still heals people, sometimes by directing the sufferer to the proper remedy and sometimes without the use of a remedy. In this case (see 2 Kings 20: 7) the Lord told Hezekiah to make a poultice of figs and put it on the boil, or carbuncle. "Fifteen years." Hezekiah is the only man who was ever informed of the term of his life. God in mercy has hidden the time of our death from our eyes. We should be always ready and should work as though each day was our last. 6. "Will deliver." The Assyrians were a powerful enemy and were constantly to be feared.

IV. The sign given Hezekiah (vs. 7, 8). 7. "A sign." Hezekiah asked for a sign (2 Kings 20: 8). Asking for a sign is a pious or a wicked act according to the spirit in which it is done. Hezekiah is given his choice of two signs, and he chose what appeared to him to be the more difficult.

8. "Shadow of the degrees." "The shadow on the steps." R. V. Many opinions are held with regard to this miracle. The older commentators believed that the earth's motion was actually reversed around its axis. It has been urged with a good deal of force that the true cause of the phenomenon was a solar eclipse, in which the moon obscured the upper limb of the sun, which would have the effect of lengthening all shadows and thus causing the appearance of going backward on the dial of the stairs. But the opinion generally held at present is that it was a miraculous use of the laws of refraction. "Dial of Ahaz." "Steps of Ahaz." R. V., margin. The dial which Ahaz set up, and which he probably obtained from Babylon, for he appears to have been fond of foreign objects of art (2 Kings 16: 10). The Assyrians were the first to divide the day into twenty-four hours. Herodotus states that the Greeks obtained their knowledge of the dial and the division of the day into twelve parts from the Babylonians, who were in constant intercourse with the Assyrians. "Returned ten steps" (R. V.) We must suppose that the "steps," whatever they were, could be seen from the sick chamber of Hezekiah, to whose mind the sign was significant. The retreating shadow meant added years to his life. What kind of apparatus is denoted by the "steps of Ahaz" we have no means of determining.

Company Will Explore Cave.

Tuscumbia, Ala.—The management of the Sheffield Company will begin the work of opening the cave in their park at an early date. It will be recalled that some time since while excavating for telephone poles the workmen discovered this cave, and a number of rare relics were found. The cave is supposed to have been a rendezvous for the soldiers during the civil war.

Profits of the Packers.

There has been a great deal of disappointment because the Garfield report shows that the profits of the packing industry only amount to about two per cent. on the volume of business transacted. There is no doubt, however, that the report is correct.

The census reports compiled by the Government in 1900, before the agitation regarding the "beef trust" began, throw considerable light on this question. It appears from the census that the packing industry is conducted on a smaller margin of gross profit than any other industry in America. The gross margin of profit of 871 flour and grist mills in Illinois, in the census year, was nearly seven per cent. on the volume of business. The gross margin of fifty-one wholesale slaughtering and meat packing establishments in Illinois was only about one-third as large, or a little more than two per cent. on the volume of business.

The millers have not been accused of being in a "trust," and combinations would seem impossible in a business where there are several thousand mills in the United States competing actively for the flour trade, but it appears that the gross profits of the millers are larger than the gross profits of the packers. It may turn out that the agitation regarding the packing industry will show the same result as the devil found in shearing the pig: "All squeal and no wool."

An Odd Australian Will.

The will of an Australian detective provided an unusual way for dividing his property among his six children. His estate, about $35,000, consisted mostly of realty. He ordered that six envelopes should be placed in a box, each child to draw one and have the portion of the property described on the paper inside the envelope.

The abiding popularity of Dickens is attested by the fact that more than 200,000 copies of his various books were sold in England alone during December last.

LASTING RELIEF.

J. W. Walls, Superintendent of Streets, of Lebanon, Ky., says:

"My nightly rest was broken, owing to irregular action of the kidneys. I was suffering intensely from severe pains in the small of my back and through the kidneys and annoyed by painful passages of abnormal secretions. No amount of doctoring relieved this condition. I took Doan's Kidney Pills and experienced quick and lasting relief. Doan's Kidney Pills will prove a blessing to all sufferers from kidney disorders who will give them a fair trial."

Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., proprietors. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents per box.

A Cruel Experiment.

Miss Estelle Reel, the general superintendent of the Government's Indian schools, was talking about cruelty.

"Cruelty," she said, "is the lack of imagination. It isn't true that only savages are cruel. All people without developed minds—minds capable of sympathy—are cruel. Children, till they have learned to think, are cruel invariably."

Miss Reel smiled.

"Let me tell you about a little boy," she said. "To this little boy there were given two images of plaster, coated on the outside with pink sugar. He wanted to eat the images, but he was warned on no account to do so.

"'They are poison,' he was told. 'If you eat them it will kill you.'

"However, the little boy was dubious. He had been cheated before this by grown-up people. Day after day he asked if he might not eat the images. Finally he had a young friend, Richard Howe, to spend the day with him, and that night it was discovered that one of the images had disappeared.

"His mother, nearly frantic, rushed to him.

"'Harold,' she said, 'where is that pink image?'

"Harold frowned as he answered defiantly:

"'I gave it to Richard Howe, and if he's alive to-morrow I'm going to eat the other one.'"—Buffalo Enquirer.

Moses a Believer in Camping.

Moses made it a law that his people should spend a few days of each year camped out as their fathers had done in the wilderness. I think it would give excellent results if we also made it a national custom in America for everyone to spend a time each summer living in the primitive cabin and primitive ways of the pioneers of our race, says Ernest Thompson Seton, in Country Life in America.

Zola's Property Scattered.

Zola's villa at Mendon has at last formally passed to the Paris hospital authorities to become a convalescent home for nurses, and now all the effects he left in it are to be sold at auction and scattered. But the home will be preserved as a landmark and will continue to be the Mecca of the novelist's worshipers.

The exportation of ostriches from South Africa has practically been prohibited by an export tax of $487 each, intended to preserve to that country, as far as possible, the monopoly of the lucrative trade of ostrich farming.

Mt. Moriah.

Last Sunday was a notable day at Mt. Moriah M. E. church. Children's day was observed and a beautiful program was rendered to the delight of all present. The service was opened with song, and prayer by the pastor, Rev. J. T. Kelford. The pastor then set forth in a short address the purpose of the service. Then Bro. Patillo, from Montevallo, one of our superannuated preachers, gave the children a very impressive address on "What is a Boy Worth," after which Mr. J. C. Starkey, a local deacon, proceeded with the program, gotten up by himself, the faithful superintendent, J. E. Hedson, and other members of the Sunday-school. The service consisted principally of a number of appropriate songs and recitations, some of which were rendered by little tots who had to be lifted to a table in order that the congregation might see their bright faces and hear their childish prattle. The church was crowded beyond seating capacity, and it was hard to tell which was enjoyed the most, the children's service or the beautiful dinner spread by the ladies in the grove. But before the writter lays down his pen he must mention the closing exercise, which was the crowning feature of the service, a beautifully decorated gate was placed so as to close one of the isles of the church, and those who took part, marched down the open isle and crossed over to the closed one, singing as they marched, "Turned Away from the Beautiful Gate," and as they came up to the closed gate, they turned away from it with sad voices and faces, impressing all with the thought that there is a probability of our being turned away from the beautiful gate that opens into the City of God, and doubtless inspiring many to a more faithful service here, that at the close of life they may enter the gates of pearl.

BALL GAME

Clanton won two of the three games from Bay Minette and lost the third. The first game was won 14 to 2 and the second 6 to 3, while the third was captured by the visitors 9 to 5. The Bay minette team left Wednesday for Prattville, and are confident of winning two of the games there. The Clanton team also left Wednesday for Union Springs where they play a series.

Bent Her Double.

"I knew no one, for four weeks, when I was sick with typhoid and kidney trouble," writes Mrs. Annie Hunter, of Pittsburg, Pa., and when I got better, although I had one of the best doctors I could get, I was bent double, and had to rest my hands on my knees when I walked. From this terrible affliction I was rescued by Electric Bitters, which restored my health and strength, and now I can walk as straight as ever. They are simply wonderful." Guaranteed to cure stomach, liver and kidney disorders; at Upchurch Drug co.; price 50c.

REVIEW OF REVIEWS

The more Magazines there are, the more
Indispensable is The Review of Reviews

"Indispensable," "The one magazine I feel I must take," "The world under a field-glass," "An education in public affairs and current literature,"—these are some of the phrases one hears from noted people who read the Review of Reviews. The more magazines there are, the more necessary is the Review of Reviews, because it brings together the best that is in all the most important monthlies of the world. Such is the flood of periodical literature that nowadays people say that the only way to keep up with it is to read the Review of Reviews. Entirely over and above this reviewing section, it has more original matter and illustrations than most magazines, and the most timely and important articles printed in any monthly.

Probably the most useful section of all is Dr. Albert Shaw's illustrated "Progress of the World," where public events and issues are authoritatively and lucidly explained in every issue. Many a subscriber writes, "This department alone is worth more than the price of the magazine." The unique cartoon department, depicting current history in caricature, is another favorite. The Review of Reviews covers five continents, and yet is American, first and foremost.

Men in public life, the members of Congress, professional men, and the great captains of industry who must keep "up with the times," intelligent men and women all over America, have decided that it is "indispensable."

Raton, New Mex., June 7, 1905

Dear old Banner: Once again I beg for permission to add a few lines in your volumes.

Since last I wrote, have spent a few days on a ranch and would like to say a word on cattle raising, which you know is one of the chief occupations of this country. I have so often heard young men say they wanted to come west and become cow boys, and get rich raising cattle. Now let me say, boys, you can make as much money raising cattle, and just as good cow boys in Alabama as here, if you would only get to work and stick to it as the people do out here. You have good pastures, those which if tended to would soon equal any out here, and plenty of water, which the cattle raisers here find to be their greatest drawback. So I think if people in Alabama would only leave off that little cotton patch and try stock raising for awhile they would soon find themselves with a little extra money and not have to wait until they sold cotton, and run the risk of getting 4 or 5 cents for it. Now suppose some of you hustlers get a move on you and see if I am not telling the truth. And should any of my Chilton friends happen to the misfortune that my son did, and have to come west, and want to recuperate fast and enjoy the conveniences of home with the freedom of ranch life, plenty of pure Jersey milk, cream and butter, pure mountain spring water, which is as cold as ice water the year round, also a beautiful scenery, I would advise them to visit Alta Vista Ranch, six miles from Raton. You will find plenty of tuberculosis friends from all over the Union, especially Alabama, and a few from across the waters. My son only stayed on the ranch a few days, but he improved so fast that I think I will let him go back We spent the Fourth there, it was a very beautiful sunny day, but rather cool to me, the themometer registering about 42.

I would loved to have been with my friends at Clanton on that day, and wished them all a pleasant time, which I am sure they had.

We all missed Mr. Gulledge's letter in last issue, and truly hope he will not deprive us the pleasure of reading a good long one in the next, for if I have not seen a cotton bloom this year, I feel like I belong to the Association any way and am always glad to read Mr. Gulledge's interesting letters, so remember your old friend in New Mexico, and come again, Mr. Gulledge.

With best wishes to the Banner and friends in Chilton.

B. H. NELSON.

AN EXPLANATION.

Editor Banner—For the benefit of the people who are criticising me so much for making $1000 out of a $500 capital in the cattle business, I make this explanation:

Now, as Uncle Tom says, "That is a little too much pepper" I beg to say that I don't claim to have made $1000 out of $500 alone. Early last spring I went into the cattle business, and after investing $1,463, all the money that I had kept back for that purpose, and little later in the spring I saw my paster would carry a good many more cattle, so I went to Mr. F. A. Gulledge and borrowed $500, and in the fall when I paid him I told him, as I had others, that I had made $1000, which I consider an awful good profit from $1,963 after I had lost $172 out of my stock from Texas fever, and I also did not have the experience of buying and selling that I have now.

Now, I would just like to say here that there is not the slightest hard feeling or misunderstanding between me and Mr. Gulledge, I just write this to satisfy some others who are worrying over the matter, and if I needed money again or any other help or advice I would go to him again. I will say further that I have been dealing with Mr. Gulledge for 18 years and if there has ever been any discord

District 32.

Our school building is complete, well furnished and just painted by Mr. R. J. Lake, of Clanton, whom we consider a high-toned gentleman and a first class painter. Gladly recommend his work as being first class

The people of the district that are interested in the cause of education are working for the uplifting and betterment of the girls and boys of the district by preparing a means whereby all may utilize every golden opportunity of youth as it presents itself. The people interested have done a goot work, and urge adjoining districts to prepare good school buildings for the benefit of the children at home, and to upbuild the cause of education throughout our county and State. Now girls and boys, this is a busy age and the idler is being left in the background. We should work faithful to show our appreciation of the new school building. Work to be in the front ranks to battle with the great enemy, ignorance, that is so prevalent in our country. If we expect to gain the victory we must march to the front in this great battle for the right. Never be found in the rear. The means are affarded us, so everyone respond to the calls of duty and we shall be rewarded for our labors.

Minutes District S. S. Convention.

Sunday School convention of Beats 4 and 11 met with Cane Creek church second Sunday in July, 1905, at 10 a.m. Bro. Judson Strock was elected president and V. G. Gragg Sec. Devotional services were conducted by P. C. Weldon.

First subject, "How to create the school spirit" opened by V. G. Gragg, ably discussed by E. H. Parrish. "Punctuality and regularity in the Sunday school," a most appropriate and interesting paper by Miss Julia Parrish.

Judson Strock, in a very strong address showed the "Weak points in our Sunday schools." The convention then adjourned for dinner.

After pertaking of a bounteous repast, the work of the convention was resumed at 1:30 p.m. Prayer was offered by Bro. E. H. Parrish.

"Childhood—its possibilities and claims," was opened by E. L. Smith in a most interesting talk, followed by E. H. Parrish and J. Strock.

"The home department" was very entertainingly treated by Judson Strock, explaining what it is, its benefits and how it should be conducted. Enrollment of delegates was then made, after which the convention adjourned.

Shiloh.

July 4th, 1905, was a day of celebration the country over, but nowhere was it more earnestly celebrated and heartily enjoyed than at Shiloh school.

The teacher, Miss Howell, met and organized the school July 3d, expecting to make the 4th mean as much to the children as possible in so short a time, but was delightfully surprised to find that many of the patrons of the school and others had decided to spend the day at school. Delighted further to find that a large number of baskets had been brought. But more delighted when a crowded house waited for the exercises of the day.

The dinner was fitting for the 4th, and all ate together as one large family.

The audience in turn were delightfully surprised with the entertainment by the school. Many of the patrons expressed themselves as proud of the work their teacher had done in making it a day of enjoyment and profit to all. Besides the school exercises, were timely and interesting speeches made by Elder Deason and Dobbs, and Mr. Bice.

There were cold drinks and music in plenty, but it was again demonstrated that an all day affair can be a grand success without anything strong. The behavior was perfect.

Many more glad Fourth's for Shiloh.

Santa Fe Sends Money.

Topeka, Kans.—The Devlin miners in southern Kansas were paid Saturday with $50,000 borrowed by Cyrus Leland, one of the receivers of the Devlin estate. Money will be sent to Osage City next week to meet the pay roll there. This will be advanced by the Santa Fe railroad. Treasurer Edward Wilder announced that the Santa Fe was ready to advance the $50,000 for the southern Kansas miners, but Mr. Leland had already made arrangements to secure it.

The Santa Fe wants to keep all the mines open, as the road is dependent upon them for its coal supply. The receivers express themselves favorable to continuing the operation of the mines.

Swedish Feeling High.

Christiania.—The secretary of the Norwegian government office at Stockholm was preparing to decorate the building on the occasion of the entry in state to the city of Prince Gustavus Adolphus and his bride, permission having been given him to do so. This occasioned hostile criticism in the Swedish press, which declared that Sweden should not allow the flag of revolutionaries to welcome the princely couple.

To avoid hurting Swedish susceptibilities or causing an unpleasant demonstration the secretary was recalled and arrived at Christiania today. The Norwegian government's palace at Stockholm will therefore be empty tomorrow. The incidents are referred to here as evidence showing the excited state of Swedish feeling, as the Norwegian government wished merely to pay its respects to the former dynasty.

One Is Killed, Nine Injured.

Detroit, Mich.—Nine persons were injured, one of them fatally, Sunday evening at the corner of Fort and Hastings streets, when a Trumbull avenue car crashed into a wagon load of people returning from a drive about Belle Isle park.

Shops Burned at State Institution.

Talladega, Ala.—Shops of the State Deaf and Dumb institute burned at noon Sunday. The water supply was sufficient, but the mains were too small to save the building.

The value of the building and contents was probably $30,000. The principal of the school, J. Hal Johnson, is away. It is impossible to learn tonight whether the buildings were insured.

Murder in Bledsoe.

Crossville, Tenn.—W. L. Tollett brother of State Senator E. G. Tollett, was killed from ambush Saturday morning near Litton, about seventeen miles from here, while driving from Litton to his home at Pikeville. No particulars of the murder can be learned. The deceased was proprietor of a hotel at Pikeville, and a prominent democratic politician of Bledsoe county.

Impeachment Proceedings.

Knoxville, Tenn.—The impeachment proceedings against J. H. Schroeder and W. M. Hall, associate members of the workhouse and road commission, against whom charges were preferred by W. A. Park, chairman of that commission, are on in the county court. Two or three additional days will be required to complete the hearing.

Lightning Causes Big Fire.

Knoxville, Tenn.—Lightning struck the grocery store of O. E. Porter at Sweetwater, Tenn., a small town on the Southern railway, forty-two miles west of Knoxville, Sunday, and before the fire had been extinguished it had burned one block of business buildings on the main street of the town and had jumped across Third street and destroyed three stores in the second block. The total damage will be close to $60,000, with insurance of $25,000.

STATE HAPPENINGS

Of General and Local Interest as They Occur.

Rents New Engine.

Uniontown, Ala.—Mayor W. J. Vaidon has returned from Birmingham, where he went to purchase another engine for the water works.

It is understood, however, that he only rented one temporarily, until another one can reach here from New York, that being the only place one suitable for the purpose was obtainable. The temporary one has arrived and is now being put in place.

Revenue Raid.

Troy, Ala.—Deputy Collector W. F. Russell and Deputy Marshal, C. M. Cox returned to Troy Friday from a very successful raid in Henry county. They raided six illicit distilleries, most of them complete outfits, and all of them near Balkum and Brown's Croos Roads in Henry county, in a radius of about six miles. Four blind tigers were also raided in Henry County and tax and penalty collected. Calvin Starlin was brought to Troy before United States Commissioner Tutwiler, charged with operating one of the distilleries, and was bound over to await the action of the next federal grand jury under a $200 bond. Warrants were issued for the parties said to be operating the other distilleries. One of the distilleries was caught in full blast.

Killed on Island.

Athens, Ala.—The county comes forward with another killing, making the second in the county within the past two or three weeks. On Robinson's island in the Tennessee river last Sunday a man named Patterson shot and instantly killed a man named Davis. The island is remote from the county site and the news was delayed in reaching here.

The trouble seems to have grown out of a whipping said to have been administered to Patterson by Davis and a man named Robinson. It is said they held him and whipped him with switches, and turned him loose. He went off and armed himself and returned to the home of Davis and called for him and Mrs. Davis informed him that her husband was down on the island somewhere. He left with the information that where he found him she could come and get him. He had hardly gotten out of sight of the house when he met Davis and at once fired on him, killing him instantly. He made no effort to escape and has not been arrested. There is some question as to which county he is liable, as Limestone and Lawrence have both claimed this island for years, and first one and then the other gets the taxes. The island has long been the home of disturbance, and for years it was charged that many things dark and shady were frequently done there.

Dredge Can't Leave Port.

Mobile, Ala.—Recently a sixteen-hundred-ton dredge, the Galveston, arrived here from the Texas coast for repairs, preparatory to going across the ocean to German waters. The dredge has a German bottom, though flying the American flag. She was built at Bremen and registered in Germany. She came across with a German crew, but when she took contracts here had to change her flag. When she arrived here she had American engineers.

Two German stokers were employed here as assistant engineers and the engineers complained to the government officials here. This caused some kind of legal complications, which will have to be settled in Washington before the dredge can leave port.

Died from Wounds.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—John Leach, a 16-year-old boy, was accidentally shot in the hip by a companion named Henderson on the evening of the Fourth while out rabbit hunting, and died Friday morning from the wound. The two boys were sitting on an old log, it seems, when the dogs jumped a rabbit, when they both went in pursuit. In some way Henderson's gun went off, burying the contents in the hip of Leach. His companion carried him within a mile of his home when he became frightened, thinking he might be lodged in jail, and left him in the woods. He returned to his home, changed his clothes and went to church. The wounded boy crawled to within hearing distance of his home and was found by his mother. He told the story, which was denied by Henderson until Friday morning, when he found his friend was dying. No arrest has been made.

Bank at Clio.

Ozark, Ala.—The Clio Banking Co., Clio, Ala., was organized Friday with capital stock of $40,000.

Clearing Out Channel.

Sheffield, Ala.—The channel of the Tennessee river at Kingston, Tenn., is being cleared so that ore barges can pass through; a bar 700 feet long and 60 feet wide is the place being worked at present. In ten days the McPherson, the dredge boat now at that place, will return to the canal about seven or eight miles above here Captain Fletcher and a force of fifty men will be left in charge of that point on the river.

Against Water Company.

Anniston, Ala.—A decision of vital interest to nearly every citizen of the state as well as the city has been handed down by Judge Coleman, of the Anniston city court. The decision was in the case of the Anniston Water Supply company vs. Thomas E. Kilby, mayor, and the city council of Anniston. Not long since the Water Supply company petitioned the city to issue a permit for excavation on certain streets of the city for placing meters.

The council laid aside the petition in order that the permission of the owners of property adjoining could be secured in writing. The water company endeavored to mandamus the council, but Judge Coleman in his opinion decided by dismissing the mandamus. The case will probably not be appealed, as a similar case was reported a few days ago, the supreme court handing down a decision in the Birmingham Water Works case. The next step of the water company will be watched with interest.

Washington, D. C.—William L. Jones was appointed postmaster at Shawnee, Wilcox county, vice Francis Tate, resigned.

Enlarging Plant.

Ensley, Ala.—The Sheperd Lumber company is making a number of improvements on its plant in the northern part of the city. A number of new buildings are being erected and additional machinery is being installed.

The great building activity in progress in this city has made a strong demand for lumber.

Officer Eason Had Close Call.

Anniston, Ala.—Officer Seab Eason had a close call for his life Thursday. Jim Terrell, a negro whom he had arrested on a charge of giving whiskey to a minor, in an unguarded moment took his gun from him and shot him. The ball grazed his abdomen and struck his left arm. If Mr. Eason had not knocked the weapon from his side, the shot would have been fatal. As soon as the shot was fired the negro left for parts unknown, carrying the officer's gun with him. A searching party was organized, but the negro made good his escape, and the chase was abandoned. Mr. Eason's wounds were slight, and he was able to resume his duties Friday morning.

Cuts Off Water Supply.

Uniontown, Ala.—Quite a serious accident occurred about 2 o'clock at the electric plant, where is also located the machinery and pumping station of the water works. The air lift engine which pumps the water into the stand pipe broke half in two, the break, it is thought, being caused by the foundation not being solid, it having been used for a good many years. The town will be thrown without water for a day or two, when it is hoped everything will be in first-class shape

Well-Known Young Man Arrested.

Birmingham, Ala.—Frank E. Davidson, Jr., a well-known young man of this city, has been arrested by the secret service agents of the government on a charge of impersonating government officials. The defendant was arrested in Sumter county and brought to Birmingham and placed under $1,000 bond to appear before United States Commissioner Birch next Tuesday for preliminary hearing.

The warrant charges that Davidson secured goods and valuables in Gadsden by claiming to be a secret service officer. Davidson has a large acquaintance in Birmingham. Up to a few years ago he took big interest in military affairs here.

Lightning's Work.

Eufaula, Ala.—During a thunder storm which swept over the city Friday the home of C. P. Roberts, in the suburbs, was struck by lightning and one of the chimneys was shattered. Two of the inmates who were occupying a room upstairs were stunned and the house was set on fire, but owing to a heavy rain which was falling at the time but little damage was done and the flames were soon extinguished.

Pleasure Boat Fined.

Mobile, Ala.—The new bay steamer Pleasure Bay, owned locally, which arrived here Wednesday, is in trouble. She was fined $100 by Collector of Customs Tebbetts for failing to comply with a navigation law, in not entering for record within twenty-four hours.

Postmaster at Elmira.

Washington, D. C.—Jas. O. Glascock has been appointed postmaster at Elmira, Marion county, vice Frances M. Holly, resigned.

Executive Appointments.

Montgomery, Ala.—E. C. Coats, of Marengo county, was appointed tax commissioner for that county by Governor Jelks Friday.

Mobile, Ala.—In the People's Bank has been deposited a check to the credit of Mrs. C. T. Hearin, the amount of which is $100,000. The check was paid on a single policy on the late Charles T. Hearin by the Equitable Life Assurance Society.

TIPPED THE BROKERS.

Information Given out From Agricultural Department —Figures Juggled.

VAN RIPER GIVES HIM AWAY.

Changing Figures to Meet Demands of Clients.—Received Pay on Bogus Sales of Property.

Washington, D. C.—Secretary Wilson, of the department of agriculture, Saturday gave out a statement concerning the recent leakage in the cotton report, in which he charges that Edwin Holmes, assistant statistician, "juggled" the report, sending advance information to T. N. Van Riper, M. Haas and F. A. Peckham, all New York brokers. The report is based on the statements of secret service agents who have been at work on the case, in response to charges instituted by Robert Cheatham, of the Cotton Growers' Association.

After reviewing the charges Secretary Wilson gives a summary of the testimony adduced before secret service agents. Mr. Van Riper, the New York broker, under examination, said he became acquainted with Holmes in New York in August, 1904, through a "mutual friend." According to this testimony, Holmes told Van Riper he could get information concerning the government crop, principally through the report of the general agents, and the reports of the state agents. Van Riper said Holmes furnished him with information from time to time, for several months in advance of the publication of official figures, and that the information furnished by Holmes corresponded exactly with the figures afterward published as the official crop reports.

Acted as Go-Between.

Van Riper stated that a Mr. Haas of New York, acted as a go-between for Holmes and himself, and he was given to understand that Haas was securing information for a cotton broker of New York. The witness said that he met Haas at the Hotel Waldorf and was told by him that the report for June, 1905, would be 75 per cent. on condition, and 12 1-2 or 13 per cent. on acreage, which was bearish as they could make it, and that he was going to see a broker with whom he would have an interview, and wanted to see Van Riper after he saw the broker; that in about an hour Haas called on him and said that at the request of a broker he was going to Washington to see if they could not get the percentage a little higher, and the acreage a little smaller, to make the report more bearish. Van Riper testified that the official report was more bearish than the figures previously given him, and that he took this to mean that the effort to influence the report had succeeded.

Tipped Off by Letters.

The letters produced by Van Riper which he alleged were written by Holmes, were all signed with the initial "H." Most of these letters were for the purpose of making appointments with Van Riper, but the following note, dated August 20, 1904, shows the relationship between Holmes and Van Riper:

"If you had bought any of that stuff sell it out at once, and sell as much as you can in addition. We are going to show a very slight decline, and as this is totally unexpected, it will send things down like fury. Other parties will close out tomorrow, and sell on Thursday. Where is 'P?' Tear this up. It may go up a little before Friday, but probably not."

This letter was signed with the initial "S." Van Riper testified that all of the letters surrendered were from Holmes, and that their contents had reference to the cotton report. A large number of letters and telegrams signed with the initial "F." were sent from New York to Van Riper. Nearly all of these contained information concerning the cotton report, together with instructions to sell or buy on the market, according to the information furnished, and all of them closed with the admonition to destroy the letter.

The secret agents learned that "P" referred to in Holmes' letter was F. A. Peckham, of New York, and that the letters signed with the initial "F" were written by F. A. Peckham.

Interviews Had.

Mr. Peckham was interviewed in New York and stated that the only explanation he had to give concerning the letters was that he was trying to make some money on the cotton market, declining to say anything of his relations with Holmes, Haas or Van Riper.

Shortly after he was interviewed, it was learned that Peckham came to Washington and held a conversation with Holmes over the telephone, in which he inquired whether Holmes intended to resign his position, or whether he expected to be dismissed from the government service. Peckham was seen again by government agents, but would not discuss his relations with Holmes. Holmes was interviewed by secret service agents and considerable space in the report is given to his explanation. The first question asked him was as to his relations with Peckham and Van Riper. Holmes said they all had been on very intimate terms socially, and that when he had occasion to visit New York, which was frequent, his hotel bill had been paid by Van Riper or Peckham.

Holmes admitted that Peckham, Haas and himself were at one time associated in a business venture in which Holmes was to have an interest to the sum of $6,000, which he was to receive as a gift from the other members of the firm. Subsequently Haas transferred his interest in this firm to T. C. Van Riper, and Van Riper stated that the company was organized for the purpose of handling cotton. Holmes testified that this was true, but that he was not aware of the nature of the organization at the time he was given an interest in it, and then when he learned the intention of the company was to handle cotton, he withdrew from it.

Under further examination Holmes stated that he had sold to Van Riper about February 29, 1905, a three-fourths interest in some mining property in Idaho for $73,000, this amount having been paid to him by Van Riper in two installments in currency.

In this connection Van Riper stated that a contract had been made between Holmes and himself whereby Van Riper was supposed to have acquired a seven-eighths interest in some mining property, but that he had never seen the property, nor had he any idea as to its value or as to its exact location. Van Riper said that Holmes wished to have a contract signed which would show that Van Riper had paid to Holmes a large sum of money for the mining property, in order that Holmes might be able to account for the possession of so much money. Van Riper says he knows that Holmes received a very large amount for the signing of the contract, and he believes it was not for mining or other property.

Secretary Wilson says there seems to be every reason to believe from the reports of secret service agents that Holmes could have given approximately correct information anywhere from one to three days in advance of the publication of the official report. During nearly the entire cotton reporting season of 1903 Holmes was in charge of the bureau of statistics in the absence of Chief Statistician Hyde, who was in Europe. Since that time he has had access to the reports of the field agents, who furnish the data upon which the cotton reports are based The most important of these reports come from Field Agent B. C. White, and from the several state agents, to all of which Holmes has had access. It was found alterations had been made in the figures of Mr. White's report for October 31, 1903, and that these alterations appeared to be in Holmes' handwriting. Secretary Wilson says a large number of persons made statements of a general character, founded on rumor and incapable of verification, and for this reason they were not made a part of his report, which is intended to deal with facts only.

According to the new plan outlined by Secretary Wilson to govern the preparation of monthly reports of the bureau of statistics, the general special field agents and state agents will report on speculative crops directly to the secretary or acting secretary of agriculture. These reports will remain sealed in the custody of these officers until the day the official report is to be made, when the agents' reports will be opened, and the officia. report compiled under strict regulations.

Careful in the Future.

There never will be at any time in the possession of the bureau of statistics or in any one office of the department, except while the compilation of official report is being made, complete information of the correspondents in all of the cotton states. Texas and Georgia, two of the large cotton-producing states, will be separated from the group of reports from townships and counties. Hereafter there will be be three special field agents instead of one assigned to the work of collecting statistics for the cotton crop reports. These agents will have no communication with each other, and will report on different groups of states. Secretary Wilson's report closes as follows:

"There will be no more opportunity for advance information on reports of speculative crops.

"In the report from the secret service operative, Edwin S. Holmes, former associate statistician, is the only departmental employe implicated, and I have dismissed him from the service of the department."

HE GYPSY MOTH

w It Was Brought Here and the Damage It Did.

[illegible] greatest insect war [illegible] known was the battle waged against the gipsy caterpillar in the State of Massachusetts.

The whole trouble, which [illegible] years of labor and the expenditure of hundreds of thousands of dollars, arose from a handful of eggs [illegible] into some grass by an erring wind.

[illegible] thirty odd years ago, a certain [illegible] artist and naturalist, Leopold [illegible], lived in Medford, Mass. He [illegible] studying the habits of the native [illegible] and insects, and was carrying on [illegible] with silkworms. One day [illegible] received by post a cluster of the [illegible] of the gipsy moth from a friend [illegible] Europe, which he placed on a table [illegible] open window. A passing puff [illegible] blew the eggs into the grass [illegible].

[illegible] did not miss them, or re[illegible] them until a year later, he [illegible] a number of young gipsy [illegible] — hairy, gray creepers, [illegible] with red and blue. He at[illegible] to stamp the colony out of [illegible], but failed, the next season they were more numerous, he [illegible] warning of what had happened and advised the community to [illegible] the watch. His warning was [illegible] as the vaporing of a half-[illegible] of [illegible].

[illegible] left for Paris, and for some [illegible] nothing more was thought of the moth, though a few people noticed that near the old Trouvelot home [illegible] were plentiful, and that [illegible] some damage to foliage. From 1880 the parent colony was ex[illegible] its territory, and wherever it [illegible] trees were defoliated. The damage [illegible] placed to any account but the [illegible], generally to the charge of the [illegible] cankerworm, or to the tent [illegible].

[illegible] in 1889, a season arrived [illegible] the gipsy caterpillars and moths [illegible] greatly increased in numbers [illegible] their food supply gave out. [illegible] appeared in districts where [illegible] had never been known before, and [illegible] every green thing. Their [illegible] was checked on the south of [illegible] by salt marshes, but they began to spread east, west and north. [illegible] from tree to tree the hungry [illegible] swarmed over all the country side. [illegible] June of 1889 the plague had [illegible] so heavily on Medford that the town was black with caterpillars. All the houses were covered with [illegible]. People going into their houses [illegible] obliged first to sweep their door[illegible] clear. Brooms were commonly [illegible] outside the street doors for the [illegible] callers. On the pavements the [illegible] were so numerous that the [illegible] could slide on their crushed [illegible].

[illegible] caterpillars crowded one another [illegible] trees, and gathered in armies [illegible] ground and on the fences. They [illegible] the windows of houses, de[illegible] all flowering plants, and pene[illegible] to every corner, so that the people were afraid to go to bed. They [illegible] in showers from the trees, [illegible] the larvae, hanging from invisible [illegible], brushed the faces of those [illegible] passed beneath. In the heat of [illegible] summer nights, a sickening [illegible]. It began to look as though [illegible] must be abandoned.

[illegible] the summer the people [illegible] most of their spare time in fighting the pest. They attacked with fire, [illegible] and oil, but with little avail. [illegible] of bodies were removed, and [illegible] of caterpillars were killed in [illegible] by destruction of egg-clusters, [illegible] containing some 600 eggs. [illegible] the plague increased, and it [illegible] regarded as of fearful [illegible] to the entire nation.

[illegible] a specimen of the pest was [illegible] to the State Board of Agriculture, [illegible] was quickly identified as a [illegible] European scourge. A com[illegible] was appointed, public interest [illegible] aroused and an act appropriating [illegible] for the extermination of [illegible] moth was passed. A large [illegible] of men gradually increased until [illegible] 300 were employed, went about [illegible] country, [illegible] away infested [illegible], destroying eggs [illegible].

[illegible] began a war that was des[illegible] to rage fiercely for ten years, and [illegible] any other insect war of the [illegible] known.

[illegible] made by the State officials [illegible] 1890 showed that fifty square [illegible] of country were infested. An [illegible] campaign was planned for [illegible] year. $50,000 were appro[illegible], the whole of the country was [illegible] up into districts, and inspectors [illegible] of men were employed to [illegible] the plague in each district. But [illegible] all efforts the insects steadily [illegible], until they extended over [illegible] miles of territory.

[illegible] an attempt was made to de[illegible] the caterpillars by spraying them [illegible] arsenic, which is fatal to the can[illegible], the tent caterpillar and other [illegible]. It was found that the gipsy [illegible] rather enjoyed arsenic. [illegible] after method was tested to [illegible] quick means of exterminating [illegible], pupae, moths and eggs. [illegible] hopes were built on a moth-[illegible] scheme. The female moths [illegible], but the males are swift [illegible] wing, and it was found that [illegible] females attracted the males [illegible] distance of fully half a mile. [illegible] went about setting traps [illegible] the males, baited with females, [illegible] tens of thousands were thus [illegible] in a short time. But this had little effect upon the great numbers, so it was abandoned for more deadly methods.

The vitality of the gipsy caterpillar and its eggs proved to be extraordinary. Voracious as it is, the caterpillar can starve for weeks without injury; it will live for days in water, and can endure intense cold as well as intense heat. The eggs might lie covered with ice and snow in the forests, and yet would hatch in the spring, while they would take little harm from small fires that burned the twigs and leaves of the trees on which they were.

The most effective weapon was found to be the intense heat given off from the flame of vaporized kerosene. Agents armed with long hoses attached to barrels of kerosene, went into the woods, and directed jets upon all trees within reach, and in this and other ways millions of the gipsy kind were destroyed by each worker. In spite of the insufficient funds, causing pauses in the work, and the enormous difficulties that had to be overcome, the Board of Agriculture succeeded in preventing the plague spreading beyond the 220 square miles of infested country, and slowly but surely in each district, by a method of double, triple, and even quadruple checking, it was stamped out. Had it not been for these energetic steps, the appalling amount of damage that the gipsy moth might have done is almost beyond imagination. It was reckoned by the authorities that the increase of a single pair of gipsy moths, if unrestricted, would suffice to destroy the entire vegetation of the United States within eight years.—Pearson's Magazine.

HOW ICEBERGS ARE FORMED. IN GREENLAND

As the Glaciers Sweep Into the Sea "Calve" or Throw Off These unks.

Icebergs are the product of the Greenland glaciers and are formed by the thousand in the far northern fiords. As the glaciers sweep into the sea they "calve" or throw off mighty blocks, and these are what we know as icebergs. Some are of stupendous dimensions. Dr. Kane's Arctic expedition saw one two and a half miles long and two and a half miles wide aground in half a mile of water in Melville Bay. This, of course, broke up into small pieces in time, which sun and sea and tide molded into the beautiful and fantastic forms familiar to the Arctic voyager. As they drift south and the sun plays on their facade, it melts them into shimmering cascades which leap into the sea, while below the tide frets them into delicate traceries. Then the berg gets top-heavy, turns over and exhibits an absolutely new contour, and so the process continues until they disappear in the Gulf Stream. The Labrador current, which carries them on its bosom, extends from the Polar Sea to the south of Newfoundland, an oceanic river 2000 miles long and 100 wide, and generously bejeweled with these gorgeous creations; and, as an irreverent tourist remarked last summer, they represent enough cold storage to put the ice trust out of business and give every American citizen a refrigerator stock of his own.—McClure's Magazine.

Newspaper Anonymity.

In a recent speech delivered before the Newspaper Society in London, Winston Churchill, M. P., said that while newspaper machinery every day expanded, the men who did the work seemed to him to have sunk somewhat into the background in our great social hierarchy. It was not so in France. In many ways the press of France was inferior to ours, but there were powerful individual journalists in France as there were not in England—men who wielded a power in directing the course of the policy of their country much greater than that wielded by the average member of the Chamber of Deputies. It was a great pity that individual journalists had not the same influence at home. It was certainly not because we did not possess writers of equal capacity. He ventured to think that anonymity had a great deal to do with it. If more articles were signed, individual journalists would acquire a greater weight and authority in the politics of the country.

A Sea Telescope.

A recent invention, the hydroscope, enables a spectator at the sea's surface to view objects at the bottom of the sea. The inventor is an Italian, Cavaliere Guiseppe Pino. The machine is constructed of steel, and in shape is like a huge telescope. Pointed downward into coral caverns or sunken ships, instead of upward at the sun or the stars, its complex system of lenses, twelve in number, answers to the objective glass of a celestial telescope. By the internal mirrors they produce a clear picture of the sea bottom, the rays of light passing up the tube to a sort of camera-obscura house at the top, which floats above the surface, and is capable of holding four persons.

Georgia's Wheat Crop.

In spite of the many jokes that are made at the expense of the Georgia peach crop, that State produced more peaches than any of the Eastern States. It is said that there are over 7,000,000 trees that bear peaches in the State.

SCIENCE & MECHANICS

Bees are attracted to flowers by the bright colors. The experiments of Miss J. Wery, a Belgian naturalist, prove that perfume has much less attraction, and that honey has none at all.

Scopolamine, the new anaesthetic from a Japanese plant, is administered by hypodermic injection and induces a deep sleep for eight or nine hours. It is claimed to have absolutely no after effects.

If it is not truly a mountain it is at least a very respectable hill, situated near the International Railroad station at Durango, Mexico. It varies from 400 to 650 feet in height, is a mile long and about one-third of a mile wide. United States Consul LeRoy, at Durango, speaks of it as a "solid mass of iron ore." Geologically, it is described as a dike emerging from a rocky plain, which lies more than 6000 feet above sea level. Its existence has been known for 300 years.

A company has been organized at Wichita, Kan., for the purpose of exploiting the oilless bearing which have been invented by C. A. Latham, of that city. The experiments made with this invention seem to indicate that the arrangement is economical of power, and is operated wholly without the use of oil. The invention seems to be a compromise between the roller and ball bearings, the surfaces of the parts which come in contact with each other being grooved so that the grinding is very materially lessened.

Zapon, the new preservative of paper products of Dr. Schill, of Dresden, is a solution of nitrated cellulose in some inexpensive solvent, amyl acetate seeming to be best adapted for paper in sheets. When dipped in the solution or brushed with it, the paper absorbs the liquid, and on evaporation of the solvent becomes coated with a thin film, which resists rain, sweat and various fumes, as well as attacks of mold and bacteria and hard usage. The treated paper, unaltered in appearance, may still be written on with ink or pencil.

The London Mail of recent issue is responsible for the following: "Chlorohydrate of Dimethylamino-benzoylpentanol." Such is the awe-inspiring title of the latest anaesthetic. In order not to unduly alarm his patients, Dr. Fourneau, its French discoverer, has renamed it "Stovaine." It is injected into the spinal fluid, and within five minutes produces complete anaesthesia in the body below the point of injection. The patient, however, does not lose consciousness. Its effects last for an hour and a half, and no unpleasant results have yet been observed, though it has been tried for some time in more than one Paris hospital.

May Wreck This Scheme.

The latest wrinkle in the insurance line is a baggage insurance check, resembling in form the accident tickets issued by a number of the casualty companies. It is attached as a tag to the articles of luggage insured. The check insures personal property, whether trunks, bags or any other style, against loss by fire and theft, while in transit or in any station, storehouse, hotel, boarding house or dwelling, except, of course, the dwelling of the owner, where it is supposed to be covered by the regular fire insurance. The check protects the property of the purchaser and any of his family and the servants accompanying them. Indemnity is payable also in the event of loss or damage by collision, derailment or accidents of navigation.

The ticket contains the provisions of the contract on its face, and in the margin are figures which are punched to denote the date of issue, the number of pieces of baggage covered, the period the insurance is to run, and the amount of the insurance. Not more than $2500 can be issued on these tickets on the baggage of any one person or family, nor more than $500 on any one piece of baggage. The checks cost twenty-five cents a week for each $100 of insurance, increasing in proportion up to $2 a hundred for six months' insurance.—New York Press.

Pearls of the Wabash.

On the banks of the Wabash River a new industry has sprung up since that stream was sung to death on the vaudeville stage and played to extinction by restaurant orchestras. It is that of "pearling," and has enlisted in the work hundreds of men and women and boys and girls who search for the fresh water pearls, or "slugs," as they are known in the trade; that is, pearls in their rough state.

It is not uncommon for the pearl hunters to earn $3 a day, and thus far this work has been so profitable that farmers along the river are complaining of a lack of "hands" to harvest their crops.

Naturally, most of the pearls found are small ones, but some have been found that weigh 200 grains each, and it is the hope of picking up one or more of these big slugs that keeps the "pearlers" at work. The slugs are sold to local dealers, who resell them to dealers in Maiden lane. One of the merchants on that street has thousands of the Wabash River pearls in stock.—New York Press.

Togo's Presentation House.

Yes, Japan will give Togo a house, but it is a "lighthouse," to commemorate his victory. What a superb expression of his country's gratitude to light the scene of the destruction of the Russian fleet for all time! Wish other folks could think of these things!—Boston Herald.

Richmond, Va.—The case of Mrs. Estelle Smith, of Manchester, Va., charged with beating to death her 5-year-old son, Ralph, was submitted to the jury without argument because of the indisposition of Commonwealth Attorney Page. The jury returned a verdict of voluntary manslaughter and fixed the penalty at five years in the penitentiary. An appeal will be taken.

Pashikao, Old New Chwang, Haicheng, Anshantien, Lyoanoang, Kaiping, Seng Wang Cheng and Saimachi.

The information was given the American minister that this action was purely a military measure.

Captain of Czarevitch.

Astoria, Ore.—Captain Robertson, of the steamer Sandhirst, which arrived here from Tsingtau, China, states that while he was there he was anchored a short distance from the disabled battleship Czarevitch. Captain Robertson states that when the news of Rojestvensky's defeat was received there the captain of the Czarevitch committed suicide. One of the Czarevitch's officers, the captain says, while reading an account of the battle of the Sea of Japan, which blamed defeat on the sailors, was overheard by a sailor on the Czarevitch. Captain Robertson states that the sailor picked up a hammer and saying, "It is such men as you who are to blame," brained the officer. Both dead officers were buried the following day.

May Call on Troops.

Washington, D. C.—The labor situation in the Hawaiian Islands, where several thousand Japanese laborers on sugar plantations are on strike, has led to representations to the war department that a call for the use of United States troops might be expected at any time, as the Japanese have shown an entire disregard of the police.

The governor has taken the matter up to ascertain exactly his authority in calling upon the federal troops and has been informed that under the law such a call would be responded to.

Licking, Mo.—Two persons perished in the destruction by fire of the Collier Hotel here. The dead are Mrs. V. L. Shelp, of Romma, Mo., and Emmett Sticer, of Williams' Springs, Mo. The cause of the fire is unknown. The hotel was a one-story frame structure and burned quickly.

Tiflis, Trans Caucasus.—Bomb-throwing continues daily. Two Dvnoriks were killed and thirteen persons wounded by a bomb and a policeman was shot Saturday night.

Memphis, Tenn.—Judge Moss turned his attention from "the lid" to Magistrates who are violating the law passed by the recent legislature by trying misdemeanor cases outside their districts. The grand jury was instructed to indict these Magistrates.

Making Axle Steel.

Gadsden, Ala.—The steel plant of the Alabama Wire and Steel company in this city is turning out a fine grade of axle steel now and it is making a splendid record for the company. Over 55,000 tons have recently been shipped and so far the company has not heard of a single complaint. The plat is in operation throughout, but a large number of men can find employment there at good wages.

In fact men are badly needed. An accident happened to furnace No. 4 Wednesday morning as the cast was tapped and the entire heat was lost and the furnace is shut down for repairs, which are being rushed and the furnace will be in operation again in a few days. Blast furnace No. 1 was forced to shut down Monday on account of the scarcity of raw material and will be idle for several days, or until a sufficient supply of material can be secured to keep the furnace in full operation.

Is After Blind Tigers.

Athens, Ala.—The recent term of the circuit court was an eye opener to the whisky sellers of this county who have been selling whisky for some time without license. At the recent term of the circuit court one white man was convicted of selling whisky on the testimony of one little negro when he had three white men testifying for him, and he was fined fifty dollars and given a month in jail. Another white man is now serving time in jail on the charge of selling whisky. The county is terribly infested with blind tigers, and Judge Speake is sounding a warning note and says they must go out of business.

Miss Effie Jordan Drowns.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—News has been received here announcing the death of Miss Effie Jordan, which occurred at Gulfport, Miss., some days ago. She attempted to step into a small launch when she lost her footing and before any one had time to rescue her she disappeared beneath the waters. Several young men jumped overboard to save her, but on account of the darkness efforts were in vain until life had left her. Doctors worked in vain. For the past year Miss Jordan has been employed here by Mrs. Rabbittee and had many friends here. She was but 22 years of age.

Engine Ditched Near Anniston.

Anniston, Ala.—The fast Southern passenger train No. 36 was ditched in the local yards at 7:15 o'clock Saturday night and from the looks of things at the scene of the wreck it is only short of miraculous that a number of persons were not killed. As the damage stands a negro fireman had his right leg sprained at the ankle from a jump. Train No. 36 was in charge of Conductor Sims and Engineer Hawes. In leaving Anniston a switch at the north end of the track known as the "east transfer" was split. The wheels of the engine tried to follow two tracks, the engine jumped both tracks and ploughed into the ground between these tracks, almost burying itself in the soft ground.

Boiler Maker Injured.

Selma, Ala.—Lee Bowen, a boiler maker in the employ of the Union Iron Works, was painfully injured Friday. The injury, while painful, is not of a serious nature and Mr. Bowen will be able to be at work again within a few days. He had a green negro helper and was holding a chisel while the negro swung a large sledge hammer over his shoulder and hit the chisel.

While making one of the swings with the sledge hammer it became unfastened from the handle and with all of the force that the negro had behind it the hammer flew off and hit Mr. Bowen in the left side, knocking him unconscious. Fortunately no bones were broken, but the bruise that he received was very painful and he had to be carried home.

A CRITICAL TIME.

When maw is cleanin' house, you bet
We ain't got much to say;
The baby that would whine an' fret
Throughout the livelong day
Now does just what maw wants him done—
He's silent as a mouse,
An' all us other youngsters, too,
When maw is cleanin' house.

When maw is cleanin' house, then pap
He wears a solemn frown;
Without his breakfast out he'll hop
An' git his meals down town,
An' late at night we'll hear him swear
Because he's caught a douse
From some old pail left standin' there
While maw was cleanin' house.

When maw is cleanin' house, by gosh,
There's soapsuds high an' low
An' water round you comes, ker-slosh
'Most anywhere you go.
The rooms is cold, the meals is bad,
It's one continual souse
An' we will all be more than glad
When maw's done cleanin' house.

"I don't remember," said John, whose interest in the election was but lukewarm, and who was then with Nansen in the "Farthest North."

"Don't remember!" thundered his father. "Don't remember, sir! If you are so stupid you can't remember a few important figures for ten minutes at a time, why don't you write them down, as I do?"—Youth's Companion.

THE farmers of the South are masters of the situation. They are rapidly learning how to control the prices of their product.

UPON the result of the farmers' toil the success of all business depends, and yet the farmers are not allowed to say what their products are worth. They are compelled to accept prices fixed by others who are interested in keeping such prices as low as possible; and when the farmers buy they must pay prices also fixed by others who are interested in making such prices as high as possible.

Court of County Commissioners was in session Monday and Tuesday with Back Tax Commissioner Vanderveer considering the raising of a number of assessments. Application was made by the Back Tax Commissioner in about one thousand cases for increase in rate of assessment, but the court declined to allow about one-half of them, to which Mr. Vanderveer agreed, on the ground that the small increase would equal the costs of collection, and it is expected that a number of citizens will voluntarily raise their assessments next year to a just amount, and thus avoid trouble and expense. About 500 citations were issued.

GOOD OLD COOSA.

Editor Banner—It has been said as a fact, and I believe it true, that our birth place, first love and first born make impressions upon our minds that are everlasting, and well they should, and to this end I write to say that at an early hour this (Sunday) morning Bro. Ellis and myself left for Providence church, Coosa county, to attend preaching and "all day dinner with singing on the ground" We arrived in due time to find five or seven hundred of our old school mates and associates and their children gathered together to serve the true and living God in the good old way as taught us in childhood, and not by bowing to false Gods, frills, flounces, etc. Remember, mind you, Mr. Editor, that this southwest corner of Coosa county is what some call "Coosa backwoods," and yet the best array of mules, horses, buggies, young and old or middle-aged men, and last and the best, the most pretty girls perhaps. Lord! Lord! Um! Um! Gee whiz! as old man Bill Tylor said to Dick Allison, "If I could just call back thirty-seven years" what a time I would or maybe could have had! It called to my mind the days of my boy and early manhood when I used to carry apples, roses and "smell melons" to Lizzie, Nancy, Fredonia, Laura Jane and a number of other class mates where we used to romp and play and study together. Right on this spot where Providence now stands I took my first book "larnen" Jan. 1, 1856. Upon this very spot I listened to the first preaching I ever heard. Near this same spot I first saw the light. That I fingered my first quarter; that I used to have to dance when "Dad" played; that I was taught to do as few of this day and time (at least if taught they fail to heed their their teaching). That is to "Honor thy father and mother that thy days may be many."

It was near here that "Jig" (Tom) Traywick learned "Hog Eye" and the "Tennessee Wagoner" on his gourd fiddle, and yet he afterward becoming famous as a country fiddler, while I became somewhat proficient in such little things as the "Back step," "Double rap," "Jim crow," "Pigeon Wing," etc. It was also near this spot that I "Sprung the question," as the fellow said, to Delia, that she and I tied up for life. Also near where Mollie, my first born, first saw the light. And again I want to say that it is this Providence country that can, has and does furnish as good people as inhabits God's earth. To illustrate: Think of say six hundred people gathered together (in the backwoods, mind you,) for a whole day; I mixed and mingled closely with them all and not a whif of whiskey, not an unkind word nor act by anyone, except three boys with their cigarettes.

Later.—And it came to pass that they all became of one mind and called together all their hosts, and of the spread which followed the multitude were filled and to a man with a well satisfied appetite the remainder was greater than that in case of the parable, where "Twelve baskets were filled." And now, Mr. Editor, I take the liberty to invite you to accompany me to the "Backwoods of Cocsa," where I can show you at Providence a large large membership to the church, together with a well ordered Masonic Lodge with a membership of forty-five, who are not members in name only but in fact, and whose attendance at their Lodge is constant, and I guarantee you a fine time and to be introduced to most of those good people, including a lot of those pretty girls, and as you are yet a single man you would do well to put on your best bibb and tucker ere you go as you are apt to find rare inducements on your trip. In conclusion, will say we have melons and "ripe" chickens too. Come to see us. I will comment on original barbecue later.

F. A. GULLEDGE.

Verbena, July 2, 1905.

[Your glowing description of the beauties, animate and inanimate, of Coosa, tempt me to accept your invitation, and as soon as possible after I return from the annual meeting of the Alabama Press Association at Coden, Mobile county, next week, I shall be delighted to make the trip with you and enjoy some of the good things whereof you speak.—Editor.]

The Diamond Cure.

The latest news from Paris, is, that they have discovered a diamond cure for consumption. If you fear consumption or pneumonia, it will, however, be best for you to take that great remedy mentioned by W. T. McGee, of Vanleer, Tenn. "I had a cough for fourteen years. Nothing helped me, until I took Dr King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs, and Colds, which gave instant relief, and effected a permanent cure" Unequalled quick cure, for Throat and Lung Troubles. At Upchurch Drug co.; price 50c and $1 00, guaranteed. Trial bottle free.

Sardis.

Well, the farmers are very busy with their crops. Crops look very good in this part of old Chilton. At Sardis the children's day on the 4th Sunday was a grand success—plenty of people and plenty of dinner.

Prof. Parish's school at this place is progressing nicely; hope he will have great success.

Miss Etta May Roper, one of Billingsley's most charming young ladies, has the Wayside school in charge this summer. We know she will have good success, for she har recommendations for success everywhere she teaches.

C. M. McCary and family of Biocton are visiting his father here.

Some of our people went to Clanton on the Fourth and report a good time.

Bub Henley of Birmingham is down on a visit this week.

Bro. Bone's smiling face was seen with his many friends here on the Fourth. Some of the girls was well pleased too.

Mr. Ernest Williams has been visiting our community very frequently. Wonder what's the attraction.

Brack McCary has been at his fathers for three week's suffering badly with rheumatism, but by the management of Dr. Parnell, he is able to return to his home at Billingsley.

Mr. Jessie Klinner is visiting his home here to the delight of his many friends.

Protracted meeting begins here the 4th Sunday; we hope to have good attendance.

VIOLA.

Kincheon.

Crops are looking fine in our section; rain plenty at present. Outlook for corn is better than common.

Mr. I. J. Huett and Miss Emma Maddox were happily married at Prattville last Sunday. We wish them much pleasure and a prosperous life.

Is Your Hair Sick?

That's too bad! We had noticed it was looking pretty thin and faded of late, but naturally did not like to speak of it. By the way, Ayer's Hair Vigor is a regular hair grower, a perfect hair restorer. It keeps the scalp clean and healthy.

"I am well acquainted with Ayer's Hair Vigor and I like it very much. I would especially recommend it as an excellent dressing for the hair, keeping it soft and smooth, and preventing the hair from splitting at the ends."—BESSIE FRITTS, Vosdam, Mich.

he knows it for I do not. I have always found him prompt, honest and plain. I wish he would come with some more of his pieces, as it is good advice for me and others and are facts, and as Sam Jones says one fact is worth a thousand theories. Respectfully,

B. F. HIGGINS, Jr.

Kincheon, July 7, 1905

Editor Banner—I will drop you a few lines in regard to your editorial about the barbecue. I find that I was an unknown quantity and Tom Tyus was all in all. Now, Mr. Editor, Tom Tyus is entitled to the credit of getting up the meat, as is also Mr. Culver, for they both worked like heroes to make the barbecue a success and did make a good thing of it under difficult circumstances, but as to that good meat that Mr. Robinson and others was talking about, it was cooked by your humble servant J. C. Grimes. Now, Mr. Editor, I well know that the honor that falls to a servent is always small, but I would like to have a small share of the credit of cooking the meat well—as I was on my feet at the dead hours of midnight when Tom Tyus was asleep and dreaming of swapping of horses, and all Clanton in the slumberland. I know I am poor and illiterate, but please give me what is due me and it will be good. Respectfully yours,

J. C. GRIMES.

Card of Thanks

Clanton, July 10, 1905

Editor Banner—Will you kindly allow us through your paper to thank our neighbors and friends who so kindly helped us to nurse our dear little daughter, Trudie Belle, through her sickness and death, and also our kind and patient physician, Dr. P. I. Hopkins, who attended so faithfully and did all in his power to save our loved one? May God's richest blessings attend all of them through life and save them in death, are the sincere wishes of

Mr. and Mrs. ALEX BOUTWELL.

Billingsley.

The health of this community is very good. We had nice shower last night which was very badly needed. Cotton is doing very well, but corn is suffering for rain; some are complaining of their cotton having the black rust.

The writer had the pleasure of attending a dinner on the Fourth at Mrs. Cindy Turner's, which was enjoyed by all present. Had plenty of ice cream and lemonade for all and everybody enjoyed themselves.

The glorious Fourth has come and gone again and was much enjoyed by both old and young.

Mr. Robert Martin, Mrs. Sapottie and Miss Minnie Foshee chaperoned a party of the little folks at fishing in Mulberry creek; although most of their "bites" were inflicted by mosquitoes the day was enjoyed very much. Then again the evening was celebrated by the grown up young people by a grand entertainment given at Mr Ralph Callaway's The refreshments were ice cream and ice cold watermelons, served by the genial hosts, Mr. and Mrs. Callaway, assisted by Mr. Wiley Mitchell. All would have done credit to a feast at Delmonico's.

Your scribe had the pleasure of attending the Children's Day service at Shady Grove Baptist church last Sunday. Surely it is a day long to be remembered. The young people and little tots who took part in the service reflected much credit on their superintendent and teachers. The children were trained for recitations by Miss Joe Goer Sweet music was furnished by Miss Lillian Goer, assisted by Miss Fay Hicks. Mr. Edwards' vocal class assisted in singing. Mr. Noah Latham read the program with much exactness and dignity. All the school felt very proud of him as their superintendent. Last, but not least, I wish to make a bow to the good ladies who furnished such an abundance of delicious chicken pies and egg custards (both of which your scribe is very fond) thus satisfying the wants of a vast concourse of people.

Married at the home of the bride's parents, on July 2, Miss Ethel Stewart and Mr. W. J. Bryant. We wish this young couple much happiness.

Editor Banner: Our people down here are feeling better now, as we had fine rains yesterday, which were very much needed

The Primitive Baptists held their annual meeting at this place Friday, Saturday and Sunday last, which was largely attended. We have a flourishing Sabbath school, with sixty-five on roll

We had a picnic at J. H. Roberts' saw mill on the Fourth and a dance also. The young men behaved admirably, but in the afternoon John Vinson, aged about 45, and John Mims, about 40, showed their fighting qualities by attacking Lee Kicker and beating him severely. Lee is a small puny looking fellow weighing 135 pounds, John Vinson's near 200, and John Mims about 140.

One Dollar Saved Represents Ten Dollars Earned.

The average man does not save to exceed ten per cent of his earnings. He must spend nine dollars in living expenses for every dollar saved. That being the case he cannot be too careful about unnecessary expenses. Very often a few cents properly invested, like buying seeds for his garden, will save several dollars outlay later on. It is the same in buying Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It costs but a few cents, and a bottle of it in the house often saves a doctor's bill of several dollars. THE OPTIMIST.

There's a mighty sight of trouble as th' world we're sailin' through,
But behind th' clouds o' trouble skies are shinin' clear an' blue;
An' we'll all be gay an' happy if our hearts are beatin' true,
While we listen for th' music sweetly ringin'.
So it ain't no use repinin' 'cause your plans all go askew,
Better keep right on a tryin' f'r th' best that you can do,
Never troublin' Mr. Trouble till he tries to trouble you,
But a song o' cheerfulness forever singin'.

Th' man who sits a mournin' by th' grave o' blasted schemes
Is bound t' miss th' glory o' th' dawnin' mornin's gleams;
An' he hides his face an' catches none o' Ol' Sol's cheerful beams
That are paintin' all th' landscape o'er with glory.
So it's better t' be smilin' than t' weep o'er shattered dreams;
Th' world is always better than you sometimes think it seems,
An' there's love an' light an' laughter in th' flowers, fields an' streams
When Ol' Nature tells in song her sweetest story.

Th' man who gives up tryin' 'cause he failed once in th' race
An' sits down weak an' sobbin' with big teardrops on his face
Would be better up an' doin', better give his spine a brace,
For a race is never ended till you've run it.
So it's better t' keep runnin' at your very swiftest pace;
Do your level best a tryin' to' secure a better place;
'Tain't not winnin', but not tryin', that heaps on you deep disgrace,
So keep runnin' at top speed until you've won it.

Th' world is full o' glory if you open up your eyes,
Th' sun is brightly shinin' back o' clouds that line the skies,
An' th' joys o' love an' livin' back o' trouble always lies
An' you'll reach it if you'll only keep a goin'.
There's no doubt about th' winnin' of a good an' ample prize
By th' man who's up an' doin' an' with all his bein' tries
For th' joy o' simply livin' all the ol' world glorifies—
An' it ain't no trouble keepin' things a glowin'.

GOOD FOR EVIL.

By GUY DECKER.

MR. BEND was a dry goods merchant doing business in Broadway. He employed a number of girls to sew for him many of the articles he sold.

In a few years he had amassed quite a fortune, and he now lived in Madison avenue, in a fine, stately mansion.

He had a son at college—a fine, noble young man, whose ideas were somewhat different from his father's. He showed this, after leaving college, by falling in love with one of the girls who worked for his wealthy parent. The name of this young woman was Martha Stephens. She was intelligent, refined and of a domestic nature—just the one to please the fancy of Richard, who, of a lively nature himself, preferred the sedate of the other sex.

Mr. Bend stormed violently when Richard announced his intention of marrying Martha.

He at once discharged the young girl from his employ, thus driving her to the extremity of want and suffering, as she had a crippled mother on her for support.

Pale as death, she entered the apartment where her mother sat on the evening she was discharged.

Mrs. Stephens endeavored to console her child.

"Perhaps we may hear from your uncle while you are looking up employment," said she.

Martha shook her head.

The uncle alluded to was Robert Stephens, brother of the young girl's mother, and who had been absent from home, doing business in San Francisco, for many years.

He had, until the past few months, been in the habit of occasionally sending small remittances to his sister, who had been much benefited thereby.

Why he had ceased to do so was a mystery to Mrs. Stephens, who, however, concluded that he must be sick.

Martha, however, feared that he had been lost at sea, as in his last letter he had stated his intention of coming home, and the young girl had soon after read in a paper an account of the burning of a vessel with great loss of life, on her passage from Portland, Ore., to San Francisco.

Even while Martha was desponding, however, there came a knock at the door, which being opened, admitted Richard Bend.

Mrs. Stephens had seen him before, and liked him very much.

He stayed on this occasion two hours, and before he left Martha had consented to be his wife.

He had not concealed from her the opposition of his parent to his union, and she had said:

"No, Mr. Bend, I will not make trouble between you and your father."

"You love me?"

"Yes, I could not express how much."

"Then I will have you," said Richard, firmly, "even if my father disinherits me, as he has threatened to do."

"I cannot consent to cause you all this trouble."

"It will make no difference about father's money," answered the high-spirited young man, "as I would not now accept a dollar from him, whether I married you or not."

Martha's eyes beamed proudly upon the young man, especially as another impediment to her union with him was now removed.

He could not think, even had he been inclined to do so, that she married him for his money, if she accepted him.

She put her hand in his.

"I am yours."

The wedding day was fixed for the following week.

A few friends were invited when the day came, and Martha Stephens and Richard Bend became man and wife.

The young man, on the very day of his marriage, received a letter from his father, disowning him, and bidding him never darken his doors again.

For this he did not care a pin.

He engaged humble lodgings for himself and wife, and obtained a situation as clerk in a newspaper office at a modest salary of fifteen dollars per week.

Martha and he were very happy. The crippled mother found, with these two, a home, both often denying themselves that they might obtain comforts for her.

To Richard, who had been used to all the luxuries of wealth, this way of living seemed rather depressing, yet he never complained.

Whenever a cloud came across his brow there was Martha, ready to cheer him with a smile and an embrace.

She kept their three little rooms in the neatest order, for she was an excellent housekeeper, and, whenever he came home, and saw the cleanly-swept oilcloth round the stove, with the cat coiled upon it, and the canary hopping about in its cage on the wall, the humble little place seemed transformed into a paradise.

Martha was ever ready to wait upon him, to contribute to his comfort in a thousand ways. The moment he finished his supper and rose, glancing around him in a certain peculiarly wistful manner, she, knowing what he wanted, would run and bring him his pipe and tobacco.

Then there were his slippers ever at hand, and when he finished smoking, the glass of fresh water was brought to him before he could leave his chair to obtain it himself.

Sometimes he would smooth her hair, and tell her she must not tire herself by waiting on him so much.

But this always had the effect of making her more anxious and ready than ever to administer to his wants.

The effect of these things upon Richard was happy in the extreme.

His love for Martha kept increasing, while she, feeling that such was the case, bloomed in her married life, and became lovelier than ever.

Finally came business troubles. The newspaper where he was employed failed. He found it hard to obtain employment elsewhere.

Finally he took to writing for the press, and thus earned a few dollars weekly. He worked hard, and by dint of constant application, earned ten dollars weekly. He experienced none of those coarse rebuffs of which some contributors complain. Publishers and editors always treated him kindly and courteously, and were really sorry when they could not use his articles.

He was more successful than he had anticipated. Everybody seemed friendly to him, and glad to help him along.

Nevertheless the wages he earned were rather scanty. Martha did her best to hide her necessities—but he could not help perceiving that she needed a new dress, shoes, etc.

The crippled mother-in-law was taken sick. A doctor was summoned, and Richard found it hard to pay him.

Two of the papers for which he wrote began to retrench expenses.

He was almost thrown out of employment.

He strove hard to get work, but in vain.

He could not remain idle. He procured a basket, bought a stock of shoe blacking, shirt studs, shoe laces, etc., and went round peddling them.

When he came home he wrote a humorous article on "peddling," and sent it to the Jolly Joker.

The Jolly Joker sent him ten dollars for it, and like "Oliver Twist," wanted more. On the strength of that "more" he bought his mother-in-law a bottle of rare old wine, and for Martha purchased a pair of French boots for seven dollars. He wrote "more" for the Jolly Joker, but, alas! the poor Joker had collapsed, and was no "more."

Richard reflected. Every paper he had yet written for had got into financial difficulty!

This looked ominous.

Could it possible that his articles had sunk them all?

Benevolence would not permit him to continue this wholesome murder.

He threw down his pen, and was about taking up the basket again, when there came a thundering clap—of good fortune.

Martha received a letter from her uncle's attorney, stating that he had died on the passage from Portland to San Francisco, bequeathing every penny of his wealth—five hundred thousand dollars—to her!

All was settled in a month, and Martha found herself with half a million.

Meanwhile Richard had heard that his father had failed—had become bankrupt.

He had gone too largely into speculation, and thus lost all.

One day Richard, with Martha, stood in the doorway of a mercantile establishment, which he had set going with some thousands borrowed from his wife.

On the other side of the way they suddenly beheld an old man, bowed and thin, in thread-bare garments, much too worn to shelter his shaking limbs.

Richard at once recognised him, and so did his wife.

It was Mr. Bend!

The young woman said nothing, but on the very next day she sent Mr. Bend a letter containing a check for ten thousand dollars to begin in business again, the letter containing the simple signature, "A Friend."

The old man went almost mad with joy. He could scarcely believe his good fortune. He started in business again, and was soon doing as well as ever.

Meanwhile he wondered who was the unknown friend, whom he had not yet been able to discover.

Finally, one of his confidential clerks being shown the letter, declared that it was Martha Stephens' handwriting.

The old man went straightway to the bank, questioned the paying clerk, who had unhesitatingly given the money on seeing the check.

This showed that some arrangement had been made between the "friend," whoever it was, and the bank official.

The man, however, had sworn to keep the secret, and would not divulge the name.

Therefore there was no other way but to go to Martha Bend herself.

The old man did so, and the blushing wife owned that she had sent the check.

This was too much for Mr. Bend.

His hard feeling relaxed, sunshine entered his heart, and remained there forever.

From that moment he was a wiser and better man.

The kindness of Martha, who had so nobly returned good for evil, made upon him a lasting impression.

He insisted on paying every cent of the money, regarding it as a loan, and, on paying it, said he was proud to know his son had obtained such a noble-hearted wife.

A reconciliation took place between father and son, and the old man to his dying day was heard to declare that his happiest moments were always passed with Richard and his wife.

And Martha—angel Martha! how she bloomed and brightened in these halcyon days.

Richard, meanwhile, steadily increased his business, so that in a few years he was able to refund all his wife's money.

Many years have passed since then.

The mother-in-law is now in her grave, and so is Mr. Bend.

But Martha and her husband, the parents of several blooming children, are yet living, enjoying themselves as those who truly love ever may.

They live among green willows and singing birds, in an attractive country home near the banks of the silver Hudson, where they intend to pass the rest of their days.—New York Weekly.

AN ANDAMAN WEDDING.

Queer Tree Climbing Ceremony of a Dwarfed People.

The day was warm for March. The sailor sat in the ice cream saloon eating ice cream and lady cake.

"The queerest marriage I ever seen, miss," he said, "was in the Andaman Islands. But maybe you ain't interested in marriages?"

He laughed, as men always laugh over this joke, and the pretty waitress permitted herself to smile.

"The islanders in them islands," he said, "is dwarfs. Four feet, on the average. Very fierce and ugly.

"If a young islander wants a girl for his wife, he asks her parents for her. They never refuse. They take the girl and hide her in the forest. There the lad must find her before morning. If he finds her, she is his. If he don't, she ain't.

"Of course, I don't need to tell you that if the girl wants the young feller, she sees to it that he finds her all right.

"And vice versa.

"Here is how the marriage ceremony is performed. The lad climbs up a slim young tree and the girl climbs up another close to him. Her clothes don't bother her in climbin'—clothes never bother an Andaman islander. Well, up they go, and as they near the top their weights bend the slim trees over toward each other prettily. The trees bow and bend and courtesy, and finally the lad's head touches the girl's, and from below a shout goes up, for the head touching has done the business. The ceremony is finished. The young folks' troubles have begun."—Chicago Tribune.

Chicago's Record-Breaking Firemen.

Chicago has to-day one of the fastest and most effective fire departments in the large cities of the world. The city has the record for the smallest percentage of loss of property involved, in comparison with the number of fires extinguished. The records for 1904 show the actual loss on property involved to be less than 2.50 per cent. The department worked on nearly 8000 fires during the year. In 1903 there was a 2.73 per cent. loss, the value of property involved being $111,743,441, and the actual loss $3,062,931, which is a record seldom equalled by metropolitan departments. In a display where splendor was considered, the department of the "windy city" would not head the list, but the records made, under the leadership of the gray-haired chiefs, stand out in bold relief. Fire Marshal John Campion, the present chief, and W. H. Musham, lately retired, are both veterans of the great fire of 1871. To them and the sturdy men who followed their stentorian commands is due the credit of driving the fire-fiend to his den.—Leslie's Weekly.

THE PULPIT.

A SCHOLARLY SUNDAY SERMON BY DR. M. E. HARLAN.

Subject: Moral Amusement.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—The Rev. Dr. M. E. Harlan, pastor of the First Church of Christ, Sunday morning gave another of his series of sermons on "Problems of Power For Plain People," the special subject being "The Problem of Morally Healthful Amusements." In February he offered prizes for best replies to questions covering the several problems to be discussed. He sent a printed list of these questions to several hundred people over the country. The sermon was based largely on the replies he received. The text was from Ecclesiastes iii:4: "There is a time to laugh and a time to weep." Among other things he said:

A few years ago, when a certain supposed ornament (?) to French society was asked what he did, he replied: "My business is to amuse myself." The history of the church is but a history of the struggle between men and women like this Frenchman, on the one hand, and, on the other hand, those who have had no place for a smile in their religion. The world has never lacked the stoic and the sensualist. To the stoic the church has seemed very lax. To the sensualist she has seemed too strict. The church always has stood and always will stand against the purposeless lives of both of these extremes. If to the mere pleasure seeker the church has seemed dogmatic and damnatory, we must remember that pleasure has been tyrannical and brazen and absurd. To him who worships the god of pleasure, even otherwise harmless pleasures become dissipation till the world is full of the insipid in heart and the vile in character and the purposeless in life. God did not make the world for mere amusement, neither did He design that it should be run by the mere rollickers. Yet desire for food and clothes is no more an indication of the physically robust and normal man than are the demands for laughter and amusement indices of the normal, mental and spiritual man. The question is not, therefore, one of amusements, but what kind and how much.

No doubt that the church has often been too closely allied with the stoic in exercising damnatory power respecting all forms of amusements. But before we censure too severely let us take into account the conditions of her early history. The church began her mighty march of conquest in cities where all sorts of lewd and obscene amusements were the rule—Rome, Corinth, Ephesus, etc. In these cities the god of pleasure held such high carnival that industry was throttled and domestic life was weakened. Rome's great amphitheatre, seating 385,000 people, could easily be filled with the morbid crowd that measured the worth of the amusements by the fury of the entertainment and by the number of men and horses slain merely for their amusement. The Emperor Trajan gave a three months' show in which 10,000 men and 11,000 beasts were slain to amuse the very best people of Rome. Men would appear on the stage dressed gorgeously, when suddenly flames would burst forth all over their bodies and they would die writhing in agony of flames to the delight of the god of pleasure. Often Christians were forced spectators and often unwilling participants in these brutalities. "Food and fun" was the hilarious cry of these amusement loving people that haunted with its awful hiss the ears of the dying gladiators. The popularity of the ruler was measured by his willingness and ability to satisfy this cry for "food and fun." An unwilling witness to these debaucheries in the name of amusement, can we wonder that coming from such a birthplace the church has at times been extreme?

Gibbon tells us that in the days of Rome's worst famines she dismissed her senators and patrons of art, but to satisfy her god of pleasure she kept her vile vestal virgins and her 6000 dancers and singers of the lewd sort to amuse her as she staggered down to death or lay in the last convulsions of her dying hour. He will not criticise too harshly the church who has come with her down her historic way and has witnessed her death struggle with the professional dispensers of amusement, who, as vile in purpose as the vestal virgins and who for financial gain will pander to the selfish and sensual moods of men till they leave those who otherwise would be noble men and women, mere derelicts on life's sea to the menace of the innocent voyagers.

Even to-day under the spell of this pleasure good men will pay an uncomplaining tribute to her and do not hesitate to keep an open account with the dispensers of hilarious and sensuous amusements about dance halls and theatres, while at the same time they will become exceedingly poor and saving if approached for charity or philanthropy or justice. The mere vagabond on the streets with his hand organ and monkey, or the grewsome and discordant "curb stone band" take in the revenue that belongs to laundryman or grocer, as though these mountebank dispensers of amusement were more deserving than they.

Seeing how Rome amused herself to death and how Spain amused herself with her bull fights out of one of the first rank powers into the imbecile skeleton she now represents, no wonder our Puritan fathers were fearful of this pleasure god. He is blind who sees no inconsistence in the Puritanical bans on all forms of amusement till a man must be or at least appear miserable before he can be happy. But he to-day is worse than blind who does not see, and especially in city life, that the god of pleasure has become daringly despotic and that she tyrannically invades every shrine of her devotees, and that no day is too sacred for her ribaldry and coarse jest. By pandering to the ruinous passion that would rather laugh than to think she would leave our fair land tenantless of the serious and the wise and fill it with a race of grinning pigmies. Any amusement that hinders me from doing my duty in my business during the week or makes me careless of my duties in the house of God or that would make serious thoughts a bore is to be avoided. Foster nor harbor no amusement that cannot grow consistently on the same stem with the Christian religion. The godless Coney Island craze creates a morbid desire for Sunday amusement that as a vampire feeds fat on the vitals of our holy religion.

I know there is danger of being misunderstood when I speak in detail. The man with a crabbed religion will think me too lax, while the man without conviction will think me too strict. With a zeal worthy of a better cause the church in the past has picked out a few amusements upon which it has placed the ban and left others with no censure. It has decreed that dancing and card playing and the theatres were of themselves sinful and devilish and were worse than are "Jacob and Ruth," or "Blind Man's Buff," or the more widely practiced game of miserliness or covetousness or "fibbing." It is a hopeful sign that the present tendency of the church seems to be to give more attention to the affirmative side of life rather than to act as Pharisaical judges on the negative. "Thou shalt not," is like a prop to keep a dying tree from falling, but it takes more than a prop to make a live tree grow. While the prop may have a place it is not nearly so important as some think.

I am not a theatregoer nor ballroom frequenter, neither do I know even the names of the different "playing cards." I feel that I have much better use for my time and money. From my observation I have no hesitancy, however, in agreeing with those who replied to my question that the theatre and dance and progressive euchre and cards are menaces to the development of the Christian life. While of themselves they may not be more harmful than the other forms of amusement named, their influence seems to be against them. To the question: "Do you personally know people who frequent the theatres and ballroom and euchre parties who at the same time are also leaders in prayer meeting and the Sunday-school as soul winners, with a good, healthful influence?" only two answered in the affirmative. Why? Does it not indicate that there is something out of harmony with these particular amusements and the healthful influence of the Christian life? Is it right to go counter to the testimony of people scattered over such a wide territory and from so many different denominations so long as we prize our religious influence?

If we say the theatre as a whole is of good influence and a necessity for the men who are carrying the great burdens in the commercial and industrial world, then it falls short of its purpose, for the theatre is supported not by the Cargenies and Rockefellers, but mostly by those who cannot afford it and at the same time do what they ought to in philanthropy. Most of the support comes from the younger class, who as yet have no great burdens to bear. As to why those who frequent them are not real forces in Christian work, read the following: President Eliot, of Harvard, says: "The influence of amusements may be drawn from the quality of the popular theatre. The taste is for the trivial spectacles, burlesques, vulgar vaudeville, extravaganzas, and the stage often presents to unmoved audiences scenes and situations of an unwholesome sort."

One of the leading dramatic critics of the English press, Mr. Clement Scott, says it is "nearly impossible for a woman to remain pure who adopts the stage as a profession and that the stage has a tendency to disorder the finer sensibilities and to substitute hollowness for sincerity," and adds: "I speak from my intimate experience with the stage running over a period of over thirty years." Is it right to demand amusement at the enormous price suggested by these men in the ruin of the virtue of womanhood whose profession is to amuse us and thus like Rome's vestals let their virtue pay the awful price for our mere entertainment? If it is "nearly impossible" to adopt the stage and remain pure, then it is not Christian to demand that form of amusement on whose altars womanhood is sacrificed. If the sacrifice was that of our own sons and daughters would we be willing to make it simply to amuse people?

The stage cannot be kept up without using somebody's daughters on the altar. Now the question becomes a double one—not only can I have Christian motives by frequenting the theatre, but is it right to ask that somebody's daughter run the risk of such an awful temptation as that to which the stage subjects them for my mere amusement, granting that the stage has many of the most noble as its adornment and that many of our best people patronize it? Yet if the flame of the theatre passion demands such fuel, can I afford to be a party to the transaction? I would not appeal to prejudice nor act as judge over other men's consciences nor pass hard ecclesiastical laws of disbarment against those who might differ with me. I make my appeal to the heart's sense of justice to make man or woman who may have enough of the Christly ambition to make the most of life by shunning that form of amusement of any kind which runs such tremendous risks.

Are you asking me if a man is to be deprived of his rights just because he is a Christian? This is a good question over which to pause and ask for the sake of others not what are my "rights," but what are my duties and obligations?

A Robert Louis Stevenson's Prayer.

Lord, behold our family here assembled. We thank Thee for this place in which we dwell; for the love that unites us, for the peace accorded us this day, for the hope with which we expect the morrow; for the health, the work, the food and the bright skies, that make our lives delightful; for our friends in all parts of the earth, and our friendly helpers in this foreign isle. Let peace abound in our small company. Purge out of every heart the lurking grudge. Give us grace and strength to forbear and to persevere. Offenders, give us the grace to accept and to forgive. Forgetful ourselves, help us to bear cheerfully the forgetfulness of others. Give us courage and gaiety and the quiet mind. Spare to us our friends, soften us to our enemies. Bless us, if it may be, in all our innocent endeavors. If it may not, give us the strength to encounter that which is to come, that we be brave in peril, constant in tribulations, temperate in wrath, and in all changes of fortune, and down to the gates of death, loyal and loving one to another. As the clay to the potter, as the windmill to the wind, as children of their sire, we beseech of Thee this help and mercy for Christ's sake.—From the Works of Stevenson.

USE OF KNITTING AS A NERVE CURE.

The Old Doctor Tells His Patient That It Induces a Calm and Cheerful Frame of Mind.

It is told of Robert Louis Stevenson that one of the many things he learned to do to keep him amused when he was restless or ill was to knit. There are many men of a generation much older than ours who improve odd moments by working with yarn and needles. But women to be women, simply must knit after their hair is grey, and it is good for them.

"My prescription, madam, is that you knit two hours daily," said the physician.

"Knit," exclaimed the nervous patient. "Why on earth should I knit?"

The doctor replied: "Because nothing is more soothing to the nerves; because nothing induces to such a calm and cheerful frame of mind. I could prescribe velerian for you, but knitting will be better. It will do you much more good. I believe that a month of it will cure you."

He went on to explain that his attention had been called to an article in a medical journal on the beneficent effects of knitting, and he had prescribed the treatment, with excellent success, to a dozen women.

"The shining needles," he said, "playing swiftly among soft-colored silks or wools, engage the eyes pleasantly, and fill the mind with cheery and sane thoughts. At the same time they may produce admirable things—golf waistcoats, golf stockings of wool, delicate evening stockings of silk, shawls, a hundred articles."

The woman smiled, and said she did not know how to knit, but she would learn at once.

WISE WORDS.

Life has no blessing like a prudent friend.—Euripides.

A wanton eye is the messenger of an unchaste heart.—Augustine.

The heart is an astrologer that always divines the truth.—Calderon.

To the honest mind the best perquisites of a place are the advantages it gives for doing good.—Addison.

We all dread bodily paralysis and would make use of every contrivance to avoid it, but none of us is troubled about a paralysis of the soul.—Epictetus.

It's a Crime to Split Bills.

Judge Taylor, for the first time by any Federal Judge, has decided that the practice of splitting bills is a crime. In defending three Greeks charged with splitting bills, Attorneys Matthews and Billman set up the novel defense that it was no crime to paste the back of a one-dollar bill upon the back of a five-dollar bill, inasmuch as the splitting of the bills destroyed their value as money. In his decision Judge Taylor found that splitting bills constituted an alteration of the money against which the Federal statutes specifically provide. The jury found one of the Greeks, William Mihatakaponias, guilty of splitting one-dollar and five-dollar bills, and Judge Taylor sentenced him to five years in the penitentiary. Two other Greeks were acquitted.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Boon of Self-Education.

"To give a boy the best of all opportunities—the opportunity for self-education—turn him loose in a library," advises Professor George Edward Woodberry, writing of Sir Walter Scott in McClure's.

"Scott," he says, "had the education of the school as a thing of course, and it was valuable to him; but he illustrates the fact that to turn a boy loose in a library is to give him the best of all opportunities—the opportunity for self-education. He read from childhood widely and well, and while yet a boy had such an acquaintance with great literature as would now seem phenomenal, though it was precisely the same as that which a generation later New England boys had at the same age, if they were so inclined."

The Oldest Inns.

There is a discussion in the English papers as to which is the oldest inn in England. A writer in the Estates Magazine thinks the Ostrich, at Colnbrook, Middlesex, is one of the oldest. There is every reason to believe it has been in existence 700 years, and even then took the place of an earlier inn burned down by Henry I., in consequence of the misdeeds of the tenant. The story of the Seven Stars, in Manchester, can be traced clearly back to 1356. Its existence as a licensed house dates down to that year. Among the relics of the Seven Stars is an old clock which has stood at the top of the staircase for more than two hundred years.

Great Maritime Cities.

Suppose you were asked to tell which is the greatest maritime city of the whole world, judging by the vessel tonnage movement? You would in all probability say Liverpool, London, Antwerp, New York or Hamburg. Wrong. To be right you would have to say Hong Kong, according to the report of the bureau of statistics of the department of commerce and labor. The general supposition is that Hong Kong is a city. Wrong again. It is an island, a British crown colony and naval station, with Victoria as its capital. But Victoria is nearly submerged in common usage, being called by nearly everybody Hong Kong. After Hong Kong come, in order, London, Antwerp, New York, Hamburg, Liverpool, Rotterdam, Cardiff, Shanghai and Singapore in vessel tonnage.

Buying Up America.

Foreign landlordism is reaching out its tentacles in the direction of America. A syndicate headed by the Earl of Verulem and the Earl of Lankerville owns a vast tract of land in Wisconsin. Alexander Grant, of London, has 35,000 acres in Kansas. The English Land Company owns 50,000 acres in Arkansas. Mr. Elfenhauser, of Halifax, has 600,000 in West Virginia. A Scotch concern, Syndicate No. 1, bought 50,000 acres in Florida. The Holland syndicate owns 5,000,000 acres of grazing lands in the West, and the German syndicate 2,000,000. It is said that 20,000,000 acres of good American land are owned by foreign landlords (English and Scotch). That is an area larger than the state of South Carolina, and nearly as large as Maine.

A Peculiar Gun.

A shotgun recently manufactured by a Connecticut firm was a special order for a man who uses his left eye to aim with, the right eye being sightless. When asked what gave her such a brilliant and lovely complexion, she replied, 'A healthy woman can be sure of a fine skin if she will do as I do, use plenty of Cuticura Soap and water.' She insisted that I follow her example, which I did with speedy conviction. I find that Cuticura Soap keeps the skin soft, white and clear, and prevents redness and roughness."

NOTICE.

There will be another pilgrim sent out by the Watchtower Tract Society to preach at the meeting place, three miles east of Randolph on Jemison road, near Simeon Waldrup's old place, on the 25th and 26th of July. We cordially invite all Christian and skeptic thinkers that desire to learn more about God's Word and ways and plans, what God has been doing, what He is doing now and what He will do in the thousand years of Christ's reign. We are hoping and praying and watching for that kingdom to come wherein free grace will not be limited to a few but to all the world. We expect the thief's prayer to be answered shortly, when the Lord comes in His kingdom, that is when he asked Him to remember him. Do you want to learn on those lines? If so come and hear the pilgrim; house and seats free, and we will will take care of you as best we can.

Bent Her Double.

"I knew no one, for four weeks, when I was sick with typhoid and kidney trouble," writes Mrs. Annie Hunter, of Pittsburg, Pa., and when I got better, although I had one of the best doctors I could get, I was bent double, and had to rest my hands on my knees when I walked. From this terrible affliction I was rescued by Electric Bitters, which restored my health and strength, and now I can walk as straight as ever. They are simply wonderful." Guaranteed to cure stomach, liver and kidney disorders; at Upchurch Drug Co.; price 50c.

The Dog Spider.

"The giant of the whole spider family is the "hound" or "dog" spider of Madagascar. Its body weighs almost a pound, and each of its eight legs is longer and larger in diameter than the common cedar pencil. Each of its mandibles is three-fourths of an inch in length and very strong. The dog spider does not spread a net and lie in wait for its prey, as do the gigantic bird spiders of Ceylon, but "follows the trail" in exact imitation of a hound. It will follow a faint scent to and fro through the weeds and underbrush until the course is ascertained and then suddenly dart off in a bee line and quickly overtake the lizard, rat, mole or other animal of which it is in pursuit. It has been known to capture and kill lizards a foot or more in length, and Professor Barnaby tells of one which pounced upon and killed a full grown rat. The dog spider is said to be the only variety among the larger species of spiders which is absolutely nonvenomous, there being no more danger in its bite than there is in that of a squirrel or a rabbit.

The Man Eating Battas.

The man eating Battas of North Sumatra have a postal system. They make use of hollow tree trunks at cross roads, and these primitive letter boxes are largely patronized by young men and women, who read and write and correspond in a degraded native script, which is traced on palm leaves in vertical lines that run upward and from left to right. These Battas, though undoubted cannibals, are skilled in agriculture and in raising stock. They form large communities, have an organised government, hereditary chiefs, popular assemblies and a written civil and penal code. Their picturesque dwellings have been compared to Swiss chalets, and the ground floor is reserved for their live stock. For their skill in ironwork, pottery and weaving they are probably indebted to Hindoo teaching, and their repulsive habit is combined with a belief in a triune deity, Creator, Preserver and Destroyer.

Her Figure.

Fred — She is anything but handsome, and she hasn't even got a good figure. Joe—I'll admit she isn't a prize beauty, but she is worth a half million in her own right, and if that isn't a handsome figure then I'm no mathematician.

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY
REVIEW OF REVIEWS

The more Magazines there are, the more Indispensable is The Review of Reviews

"Indispensable." "The one magazine I feel I must take." "The world under a field-glass." "An education in public affairs and current literature."— these are some of the phrases one hears from noted people who read the Review of Reviews. The more magazines there are, the more necessary is the Review of Reviews, because it brings together the best that is in all the most important monthlies of the world. Such is the flood of periodical literature that nowadays people say that the only way to keep up with it is to read the Review of Reviews. Entirely over and above this reviewing section, it has more original matter and illustrations than most magazines, and the most timely and important articles printed in any monthly.

Probably the most useful section of all is Dr. Albert Shaw's illustrated "Progress of the World," where public events and issues are authoritatively and lucidly explained in every issue. Many a subscriber writes, "This department alone is worth more than the price of the magazine." The unique cartoon department, depicting current history in caricature, is another favorite. The Review of Reviews covers five continents, and yet is American, first and foremost.

Men in public life, the members of Congress, professional men, and the great captains of industry who must keep "up with the times," intelligent men and women all over America, have decided that it is "indispensable."

Shades Mountain, July 15, '05

Editor Banner—I have received a number of letters requesting me to write to the Banner. One came over two thousand miles. Now you see the Banner is not only read in Chilton county but in many other places. We always welcome it and peruse its columns with great pleasure.

Shades Mountain is about to get on a boom. Two of Birmingham's most prominent citizens, Messrs. Yates and Hannahan, are starting to build two elegant residences on the mountain. It is also reported that one of Birmingham's prominent doctors is going to build a sanitarium up here. So you see property and real estate is going up, it is getting out of sight up here in the clouds. It is delightfully cool and pleasant most of the time, we have cool breezes in the day, also have cool nights. We have a great many requests from people of Birmingham for board through the summer. A large hotel here would do a splendid business during the heated term.

We have had good rains and the gardens are looking fine; the farmers made very good potato crops this year; one of our good farmers told me that he has sold about five hundred bushels of Irish potatoes and has about five hundred more bushels to sell.

Quite a number of our mountaineers attended the celebration of the Fourth at Oak Grove. The good people of Oak Grove gave us a splendid dinner and it was greatly enjoyed by all.

The furnace at Oxmoor, that is at the foot of the mountain, is going to start up and will soon be turning out iron.

Miss Maud Turner of Hartselle is the charming guest of relatives here.

Miss Carrie Smith of Jasper is visiting Mrs. Elmore Dison.

Mr. John Shannon and children, with Miss Mable Moore, have gone to the sea shore, near Wilmington, N. C.

Mrs. Walter Urquhart and Miss Frances Crenshaw of Birmingham are visiting Mrs. G. A. Northington's family.

The ladies of the Summit church gave an ice cream supper recently in the interest of the church; it was a great success. Quite a nice sum was realized.

Mr. C. C. Moore has another fine young Democrat at his house. His name is Dick

Answer to School Girl, District 32

Editor Banner—Please allow me space in your valuable paper to say a few words concerning our school. I appreciate our school house very much, but will a nice painted school house educate children standing locked up? I don't think it will. If so I would like to have two or more at a place. I say this because we have no school and no effort being made as I have heard to have any school. In the backwoods of Coosa, as Mr. Gulledge calls it, I can show you students that have never went to school anywhere else but in a little old log cabin that can teach any student in District 32 a year and then tell them something they don't know, and they don't go to school much over half as much as our children. Will some one please explain to me the cause? Now, don't think that I am against schools but I want more schools and better schools. If I know anything at all schools are not as successful now as they were 25 years ago according to the time taught. The way they run the schools now they are of very little benefit to the poor people. They claim they have to teach all the school in succession, which deprives a lot of children of school in the spring on account of helping to work on the farm, and idle their time away in summer when they ought to be in school.

DUCKLINGS.

Shoults.

It rained yesterday and how glad the farmers were.

I will take for my subject, smoking and drinking. How ugly it is to stand before the church door and smoke. The boys from eight years to twenty-one think it is big and nice to smoke, but it don't look nice in any man, big, young or old, to smoke anywhere. Boys, when asked to take a drink of whiskey, have courage to say "no." Think of your mother at home; it would break her heart if she knew you were drinking. The broken hearted mothers are on their knees praying to God for their sons. If you don't care for yourself, have respect for your mother, and if you have drank whiskey, go down on your knees to God in prayer, and go in earnest and He will forgive you. Then go to your mother and tell her you will never break her heart again, and don't break your promise. Success to the Banner and its many readers.

THE BANNER.

CLANTON, ALA.

One of the secrets of the success of Japan is the power of concentration which is cultivated and practiced in all the affairs of life. To the making of a cup of tea or the arrangement of a vase of flowers as much attention is given as would be required for the painting of a picture or the building of a man-of-war.

The appeal for an addition of $2,500,000 to the endowment of Harvard should meet with a response from men in every part of the country who are interested in education, the New York Evening Post declares. Harvard, the oldest and most famous of our colleges, the mother of learning in America, is not a local, but a national institution.

From one point of view, it is of course obvious that the man who can afford to pay $8000 for a Louis XIV. tapestry can afford to pay $3000 additional for the privilege of bringing it into his own country. And yet it would be hardly surprising if the gentleman had entertained a passing wish that Louis had lived and reigned in Paris, N. Y.

The true keynote of what we may term educational exchanges among the nations was sounded by the Primate of All England in accepting the retiring American Ambassador's gift of a Harvard memorial window in a London church. He was, he said, happy to think that all the work done for American colleges was done as well for Great Britain, and that all the work of British colleges was done as well for America.

A cordial welcome must be extended to anything that helps to solve the servant problem, especially in so far as it relates to the kitchen, says the New York Evening Post. Good cooks, always at a premium, are particularly scarce at present, as servants are showing more and more inclination to insist on having the easier upstairs and dining-room work. It is therefore of the utmost importance that the kitchen work should be made easier and pleasanter.

The country's service is more than honorable to the man who performs it. It is valuable to the country that commands it, and it should be paid for at a proper rate and surrounded by the signs of a national appreciation of its worth. The country is rich enough to do its diplomatic work with more liberality. It should not permit its ambassador at the Court of St. James to spend, on its behalf, a large fortune of his own in order that he may preserve the prestige of the United States as a great power, declares the Washington Star.

It is not to be wondered at the editor of Brassey's Naval Annual says, at the end of 1908 the United States will become the second naval power of the world, and the British and United States navies combined would be able to put into line 75 first class battleships, as compared with 69 possessed by the other five naval powers. This is a most impressive consideration, thinks the New York Tribune. Its bearing upon the greatness and self-sufficiency of the Anglo-Saxon world is obvious and most gratifying, and we may hope that its significance to the peace and welfare of the entire world may be no less apparent and effective.

General Passenger Agent Lynch of the Big Four Road threw some new light on the question why railroads run a president's special train. "The railroads," he said, "do not carry the president of the United States in a special train over the country for fun, for glory, or for advertising purposes, but because the chief executive may not be carried on a regular train, as it would handicap the general operation of the road and work a hardship on the traveling public. No regular train could possibly adhere to its schedule were the president on board. The fact that he was a passenger could not be kept secret, and at every station and cross roads there would be a crowd demanding to see and hear him make a speech. There would be a delay of ten or fifteen minutes at every station and every other passenger on the train would be greatly inconvenienced. The president's special train inconveniences no one, and the roads would rather go to the expense of running a special train free than subject the traveling public to the annoyances unavoidable if the president were carried on a regular train."

GENERAL STATE NEWS.

Current News Garnered as It Falls From the Plant of Report.

Officer Kills a Negro.

Selma, Ala.—Police Officer Logan killed a negro by the name of Willie Chum Friday morning. He was accosted by the officer and asked if he had paid his street tax, the officer having notified him. The negro stated that he had not paid and did not intend to pay it. Whereupon he was told to consider himself under arrest, and Chum replied that he would rather die than either be arrested or pay the tax. He had in his hands some long tin shingles and started towards the officer in a threatening manner when the latter pulled his pistol and fired twice, both balls taking effect and causing instant death.

The officer remained at the scene of the shooting until Chief Walters, who had been notified, reached him, when he turned over his pistol and policeman's club to the chief, awaiting an investigation. Mr. Logan, in speaking of the shooting, stated that he regretted exceedingly, but he deemed that he was going to be attacked, and knowing the negro's character had to shoot him. Chum did not bear a good character, while the officer is considered one of the most conservative and faithful men employed by the city. This is Chief Walters' estimate of the officer as expressed publicly after the shooting.

Officer Logan went to the county jail, where he will remain until the mayor holds a preliminary examination. There is little room to doubt that Mr. Logan will then be liberated

Dead Body Found.

Tuskegee, Ala.—News has just reached here that the body of Bolling Cloud was found in Calibee swamp on the evening of the 11th, near Millstead.

Mr. Cloud has been missing since May 18th. When last seen he was at the home of a Mr. Simmons near Milsend. He spent the night of May 17th with the Simmons family, leaving there on the morning of the 18th for his home near Laplace and it is supposed he was taken sick on the way hame, as he was subject to spells and perhaps stopped in the shade of the swamp for a little rest, where he died.

The body was found by a negro who was out squirrel hunting. When he discovered the scattered bones of what he thought a person, the negro reported the find to some of the white people who lived close by.

Big Order of Iron.

Birmingham, Ala.—Announcement has been made that the United States Cast Iron Pipe and Foundry Company has placed an order for 10,000 tons of pig iron in this district, delivery to be made between now and the first of January.

It is understood that the order was placed with the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company under $11 per ton, No. 2 foundry, and the greater portion of the order will be filled from the Bessemer furnaces, five ironmakers at that point being in blast. This order is the largest one booked in the Southern territory in several weeks.

New Steamship Company.

Mobile, Ala.—When the Bay Steamship Company, of Baldwin county, filed with the secretary of state a notice of its incorporation it became definitely known that a new freight and passenger line will be established with offices at Point Clear.

The boats of the new company will ply to and from all points on the shores of Mobile Bay, the rivers and streams flowing thereinto and the waters adjacent thereto in the Gulf of Mexico and Mississippi Sound.

The capital stock of the company is $50,000.

Shot By Negro.

Girard, Ala.—Young Thompson, a well known citizen of Girard, was shot and seriously wounded Friday night at 9 o'clock under very peculiar circumstances. He and a number of friends were walking along Sixth street, Thompson being slightly in the rear of the others. They met and passed a negro and Thompson, thinking he was a white man, accosted him and jocularly asked him, "What's the matter?"

Without a word the negro pulled a pistol and fired twice. One ball struck Thompson in the leg, producing a serious but not a fatal wound. The other shot went wild. The negro was pursued by the crowd but escaped. His identity is unknown.

Charged With Mail Robbing.

Birmingham, Ala.—Charged with robbing mail pouches, John Pruett, of Talladega, was brought to Birmingham Saturday and landed in the county jail. His bond has been fixed at $200 and this will be made.

Charged with Stealing Watch.

Gadsden, Ala.—Deputy Sheriff Dick Handy arrested Roland Bearden in Attalia Monday afternoon on the charge of entering the home of a man named Webster at Duke on the 19th day of last August and stealing a watch. Bearden was placed in jail here and on Tuesday was taken to Anniston to answer the charge. Bearden says he did not steal the watch, but that he won it from another person in a game of cards.

New Coal Company.

Birmingham, Ala.—The Star-Cahaba Coal Company has been organized by W. G. Robinson, John J. Callahan, D. H. Brown and others, of Bessemer, Birmingham and other places in this vicinity and mines are being opened near Parkwood, on the Louisville and Nashville railroad, twenty-five miles south of Birmingham.

The mines have already run down 300 feet. A basin will hardly be reached until 500 or 750 feet have been pushed down, when entries will be opened. The new company expects a daily output of 1,000 tons of coal when fully developed.

Couch Religious.

Decatur, Ala.—Pierce Couch, who shot and killed Police Officer William A. Baber on the night of June 30, and who is now confined in the county jail in this city, is spending his time while incarcerated in the study of the Bible. He says he has read the Bible half through and that he wants to join the Methodist church on next Sunday morning if Sheriff Wiggans will accompany him or send a deputy with him.

Couch shot and killed Policeman Baber and then escaped to Winchester, Tenn., where he was arrested on the following Saturday on an N., C. and St. L. train bound for Nashville He was brought back here the same night and lodged in jail. He was given a preliminary trial and denied bond.

Didn't Know It Was Loaded.

Selma, Ala.—Word reached the city of the shooting of a negro by the name of Wull Hall by another negro by the name of Dick Fields near Consul in Marengo county. Hall was working a crop on shares with Fields and was late in coming to work Friday morning. Fields upbraided him and the two negroes quarreled. Fields pulled a pistol which he claims he did not know was loaded and the two negroes scuffled for the weapon. In some manner it was discharged as he was stooping over at the time, ranged downward into his lung, causing practically instant death. Fields gave himself up and will be sent to jail at Linden.

A Youthful Couple.

Birmingham, Ala.—A youthful couple, at first claiming to be brother and sister, but later claiming to be man and wife, called upon Mayor Ward Saturday requesting transportation to their home at Macon, Ga. They give their names as Henry and Pauline Crawford. The boy says he is 18 and the girl admits that she is just 13 years of age. They were detained at police headquarters and a telegram was sent the authorities at Macon asking for information about them.

Company to Develop Natural Gas.

Huntsville, Ala.—The annual meeting of the shareholders of the New York-Alabama Oil Company that is developing the natural gas fields of this section, has been held in New York and directors for the year were elected. The company has an oil well good for a dozen barrels a day and four gas wells near Balze Green and others being drilled. The company has already secured rights of way and franchise for running a pipe line to Huntsville and expects to take up this enterprise as soon as arrangements are completed.

May Get Glass Factory.

Decatur, Ala.—A party of Northern and Eastern capitalists are contemplating locating a large glass factory near this city, and those in a position to know say the chances are the factory will be a go.

It is stated that this factory will employ about 600 skilled mechanics, and that it will bring with it a number of other glass industries, such as factories for the manufacture of glassware of all kinds.

It has long since been demonstrated that there is lying in easy reach of the Decaturs almost inexhaustible quantities of the finest glass sands. Much of this sand could be transported to the city by the present railroads, river and by wagons.

It is said that the location of this industry would probably add 5,000 or more to the population of the Decaturs and would pay out in wages many thousand dollars monthly.

Abbeville, Ala.—The Abbeville Guano company has been formed with a capital of $10,000. It will manufacture and sell guano, also will sell cotton seed meal and acid and buy cotton seed. The plant will be located at Dothan. The officers are J. W. Melvin, president; R. C. Stokes, vice president; M. V. Capps, treasurer; Robert Newman, secretary.

Tragedy at Artesia.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—News has been received here of a tragedy which occurred at Artesia Thurday when J. T. Shepherd shot and instantly killed Robert Watts, who resided at Artesia. Mr. Shepherd has lived here for a number of years and has a very large circle of friends. He has a wife and several children living here and is conductor on the Mobile and Ohio railroad. Watts it is said also had a family residing at Artesia.

McGill is Lynched.

Mobile, Ala.—Captain Doe, of the steamer Condor, arriving here Thursday afternoon from Ceiba, reported that the negro McGill, who murdered the crew and eight passengers of the cattle steamer Olympia, has been lynched. When McGill was captured at El Esoviaci, he was placed aboard the Honduran warship Ta Tumbiar and sent back to Utilla Island. The natives were greatly wrought up over the horrible murders, and according to Captain Doe they first planned to burn the prisoner, but later he was taken from the officials and lynched.

The laws of the island forbid capital punishment, and it was this fact that caused the lynching.

Injured in Runaway at Boaz.

Gadsden, Ala.—Carrier Duffy, on the Boaz free delivery, number six, and his son had a very narrow escape from death one day this week at Boaz. Mr. Duffy and his son were driving through Boaz when the horse become frightened and ran away, and Mr. Duffy was thrown out and badly hurt by the wheels running over his body. The boy remained in the buggy and the horse ran for nearly two miles down the public road, being finally stopped by several men, and the boy, who was almost frightened to death, was rescued uninjured.

Big Sale of Cotton.

Scottsboro, Ala.—Col. D. N. Snodgress, one of the largest planters in Jackson county, and whose magnificent plantation fronts for miles on the Tennessee river, sold on Monday last his entire crop of last year's cotton, consisting of three hundred and fifty-four bales, to Knight, Yancy & Company, cotton dealers of Decatur, for 10 cents a pound, clear of all expenses, storages, insurance, etc., giving him in round numbers $18,953.90. Colonel Snodgrass has only three hundred acres in cotton this year, as he greatly reduced the acreage.

At the same time J. D. Snodgrass sold to the same firm three hundred bales for $17,000. The crop condition is poor and prospects are indeed gloomy, caused by the excessive rainfall.

Attempts to Take Life.

Gadsden, Ala.—J. B. Bynum, one of the most prominent and oldest citizens of Nix, Etowah county, made an unsuccessful attempt to commit suicide Thursday afternoon at his home some twenty miles from Gadsden. Dr. Bynum has been in feeble health for some time and Thursday while all the family were at dinner he walked out of the house and after going some little distance draw a sharp razor across his throat, cutting a gash about two and one-half inches long but fortunately the wound was not deep enough to be fatal.

He was not found until some hours later and after a hard rain had fallen. He was in an unconscious condition from loss of blood and the rain, but he was revived by hard work. When he regained consciousness he said that he was sorry he was unsuccessful, for he was tired of living and wanted to die and end his sufferings.

Speculation as to Engineer Corps.

Selma, Ala.—A corps of civil engineers has been observed in this vicinity for the past two days and their presence has caused much speculation. The party themselves do not make public their business, but have been busy running lines west of the city through what is known as Leach's grove and from that point to Valley Creek and the Alabama river.

It is said that the party is employed by the Memphis and Pensacola railroad which is seeking to secure a branch from the mineral fields to join the main line below Selma. It is supposed to be the same party that was seen near Bessemer some weeks ago. There are others who think that there is some local enterprise afoot and that a branch of either the Southern or the Louisville and Nashville is to be run to the location.

Bad Fires Occur at the Same Hour.

Bay Minnette, Ala.—The plant of the Hand Export Company at Hurricane, seven miles below here on the Louisville and Nashville, suffered a loss of about $25,000 dollars Friday afternoon by fire. The planing mill, dry kiln and commissary were entirely destroyed, together with about 10,000 feet of lumber. One box car on the side track was burned.

At the same hour the turpentine still of Cooper & Lowell, three miles from here, was burned, loss $2,000. It is not known what the cause was for either fire, and neither company carried any insurance.

Store is Robbed at Vance.

Vance, Ala.—The store of A. W. Roland was broken into Friday night and goods valued at between $400 and $500 were stolen. The articles stolen included a 38 Winchester rifle, a 38 Colt's pistol, jewelry, clothing and $25 or $30 in cash. A liberal reward has been offered for the capture of the burglar.

Will Start Canning Factory.

Gadsden, Ala.—The canning factory on the fruit farm of the Elliott Fruit Company will be put in operation in a few days. For the past month wagons have been busy hauling tin cans and crates to the factory, and now that the peaches and tomatoes are turning the factory will be started up and kept running day and night until the crop is canned. About one hundred men and boys will be given employment during the canning season.

A HORRIBLE CRIME

Committed Near Gadsden—Woman Assaulted and Murdered.

FEAR OF A MOB IS NOW OVER.

Woman's Awful Struggle Shown By the Scenes Where the Body Was Discovered.

Gadsden, Ala.—One of the most horrible crimes ever perpetrated in the history of Gadsden took place some time Saturday night between 11:30 and 12 o'clock, when Mrs. S. J. Smith, a white woman, was repeatedly criminally assaulted and afterwards murdered on a lonely road in the outskirts of the city and left in a clump of bushes on the side of the road. News of the crime reached the center of the city soon after daylight when word was brought to the officers that a white woman had been found dead in the woods on the road leading to the Hammonds mines.

Chief White was notified at once and he and several of his officers went to the scene with an ambulance and the remains were brought to the undertaking parlors of the Woodliff-Dunlap Furniture company. The remains were found by a negro man named Vance Garner, who saw where some heavy object had been dragged across the road and following it found the body of the woman. He told another negro, who in turn told a white man near by, who sent word to the officers.

Scene of Crime Is Lonely Spot.

The scene of the murder is on the side of the mountain opposite the city chert bed and on the road which leads to the Hammonds mines, and is about three-quarters of a mile from the city. Mrs. Smith was seen in the city about 10 o'clock Saturday night at a street fakir show on the corner of Broad and Sixth streets. She was seen to leave the show, followed by two men. She was next seen at the old Coosa furnace on the river bank, where she went to one of the boats and asked if her two boys had been seen.

Not finding the boys, she started home, taking a near path which would take her to the road leading to the Hammonds mines, where she lived with her two sons. It is evident she was attacked near the road, for the ground showed a struggle. From the scene around the road it seems that she was attacked and evidently criminally assaulted, being afterwards dragged by the hair some twenty-five yards to the road and down the embankment which is three feet deep, across the road and some thirty yards further over the rocks and small trees, and left with her head lying down the incline, where she was found.

Made Desperate Fight for Life.

The poor woman evidently made a desperate fight for her life. A pair of scissors and an old case knife were found near by, both being broken. Her little finger on her left hand was cut near the end and she was bruised over her back, where she was dragged. Her neck was broken. Mrs. Smith was a large woman and would weigh 225 pounds, and the pulling of her body by her hair evidently broke her neck. Her false teeth were found on the road, while her shoes and stockings were found on the side of the hill where she was first attacked. Her clothing was in shreds and her body lying on her back with her feet drawn up against her body. One peculiar feature of the crime is the finding of four leaves crossed with a twig fastening them to the ground where she was attacked.

Five Negro Men Arrested.

Chief White and his officers got to work quickly and soon had arrested five negro men and one negro woman, who are in the city prison charged with this foul crime. Those arrested are Will Johnson, Jaff Alford, Vance Garner, Ed Johnsey, Bunk Richardson and Fannie Mayor, the latter a woman and sister to the notorious Morris Mayo, who has given the railroad officials here so much trouble. From the very best information possible it is stated that the officers have the right parties and have evidence enough to convict the guilty ones.

Vance Garner, who was arrested first, was the negro who found the woman. He has admitted enough to convict himself. He states that he heard cries of murder about midnight and that he answered the cry for help, and that when he reached the scene he found a negro man trying to stuff a towel in the woman's mouth and that he told the negro to stop, but was told to go about his business, and that he left. This story is not believed by the officers.

Royal March's strong face might haunt her secret thoughts, her conscience might upbraid her for some of those bright mornings upon the mountain when their paths had crossed not wholly by accident, but within three days she was Paul Ruble's promised wife.

Mr. Ruble was coming out of his library with a queer, twisted key on his finger, when Miss Darley's face, looking at him over the shoulder of a marble Venus, caused him to start and drop it.

"Is it the key of Bluebeard's chamber, that you are so particular?" she asked, coming forth. "Or, has it the property of vanishing through the floor in a mysterious way?"

"It has vanished, I think," said Mr. Ruble, nervously. "Never mind. What were you thinking of as you stood there rivaling Venus in her charms?"

"I was wondering how I would feel if I were mistress here by my own right instead of your favor," she answered, coolly. "I have a fancy I ought to have been."

His fiancee's abruptness must have grated upon Mr. Ruble's nerves. He changed color, bit his lip, and walked away. Miss Darley stooped when he had disappeared and picked up the key, which had been snugly reposing beneath the sole of her slipper, and though a housemaid came and searched diligently for the missing instrument, her inclinations did not prompt her to give up her discovery. There was a memory connected with that curious bit of twisted metal which Madeline Darley pondered over for the hundredth time, perhaps, that day.

Old Aunt Miralda—dead and gone now, so peace to her ashes!—had held it in her hand when she broke out in that denunciation of Paul Ruble, who had gained such an influence over her in her declining age that the poor lady had become little better than the creature of his will.

"He is an evil man, Madeline, a hypocrite and a traitor. You were right in disliking him, and I have been a blind old fool. But we will have justice done yet. The will goes into the fire, for one thing, my dear, and we make another one putting you in the place where he never would have been but for his base and most unwarranted pretensions—never, believe me!"

But after all Aunt Murilda had died and Paul Ruble came into possession of the controlling interest she had held in mills and mines, and Madeline hung the distorted key upon her watch-chain as she thought, with a sigh, of how differently her life might have turned had her relative's intention only been carried out. Whatever impulse made her take possession of the key, she had no thought of using it to discover her intended husband's secrets. Her opinion of the man was so far from flattering that the less of these which came to her knowledge the better, she thought.

Meanwhile Mr. Ruble was not a little nettled at its loss. He rode away in the afternoon to one of the coal mines from which mutterings of discontent had been making themselves heard. A knot of miners were gathered on the hillside, awaiting his approach.

"What now, you rascals?" he asked, angrily. "Why are you not at your work?"

A decent-looking man took off his hat as he made answer for the party.

"We was a-comin' to tell you, sir, as how we'd put in our last strokes. 'Tain't noways safe in that mine with the roof all sagging and the pillars cut out till there's no more'n a few inches of crumblin' slate 'twixt us'n's bein' crushed to a jelly, and we've got our love of life strong as other men. We'll go to work elsewheres if it's your pleasure, sir, but not in the old mine, where it's tempting Providence every minute we stay."

"You're a pack of contrary idiots and I'll have no more to do with you," was Mr. Ruble's gracious response as he pursued his way.

If the fates had combined to aggravate him, they could have taken no surer means than by sending Royal March to confront him near the mouth of the mine.

"The men were quite justified in leaving," said the latter.

"I will be the judge as to that," retorted Ruble. "As for you, sirrah, confine yourself to your own place after this, or I'll send you adrift as surely as I do those insubordinate hounds." The blue pallor of quivering wrath was in Ruble's face as he saw the other's brows knit and darken. "What do I mean? I mean that your intolerable presumption, and your chance meetings with Miss Darley are both at an end. The lady has given her future into my keeping, and if her own pride doesn't check her associations, my will shall. I'm kindly enough disposed toward you, my man, in your own sphere, but it will be well for you to bear in mind that I am master."

He scarcely looked it for all his bullying assertion. His hand shook as he got out his pocket lantern, and he kept a furtive watch upon his companion, more than half expecting some savage uprising of a spirit he had reason to dread. The brawny hand of the workman clenched until the muscles stood out in great cords on its back, and he turned away as if fearing to trust himself to any reply. But as he reached the descent he faced around.

"I wonder that Heaven doesn't send in that tottering roof on your head," he muttered, as if invoking such an end. A moment more and a dull rumble shook the earth. The sound like sullen thunder died away, and the sun shone down, the wind whispered lightly amid the leaves, but Royal March shivered in the summery warmth and turned pale under the tan of the furnace fires. What struggle possessed him for a moment, what better impulse was trampled out as he sprang down the pathway, he best knew.

A storm came up with the evening. Such thunder, such lightning, such down-pouring torrents, were unknown even in that region of storms, but while the tempest raged, the furnaces threw their steady glow athwart the wild, wet darkness, and the night force were thrilled by one of those horrible accidents which occur, now and then, in their midst. The pincers in one man's hands missed a red-hot bar, as it came from the rolls, and the ductile metal had coiled around him, searing the strong limbs that in a moment had lost their strength and active usefulness forever—and this man was Royal March. A message to Miss Darley brought her to his bedside by midnight.

"No, I am not dying," as he met the stricken fear in her face. "But even men who are doomed to live sometimes have confessions to make. Has Mr. Ruble come home?"

He had not.

"Send searchers to the old mine. It caved in on him this afternoon. Let them make haste, for this storm is likely to flood the mine, and drown any living thing there like a rat. I knew it and left him, Miss Darley, but it wasn't entirely because of you," answering a question he read in her face. "I may have been so mad—I was—and that added to an old wrong put murder in my heart. Do you remember the invention with which I hoped to make my fortune, years ago? He stole, just as I was sure of success after the long time I spent in perfecting it, and he has risen since, while I have been pushed down until he made a virtue of giving me work, and claimed gratitude for the meager wages paid back by the hands that robbed me. I don't expect you to forgive me for telling you the truth about him. I might hope for your pity if I had not such a black sin to lay bare, but as it is——"

"As it is, I am so far from good myself that I am grateful to you for setting me an example in forsaking the wrong and turning to the right."

The old mine had caved in upon Mr. Ruble, but a lodgment of some of the supporting timbers had saved him from being crushed to death; and in quarters so narrow that he could not stand upright, he had ample leisure during the long night to reflect upon his sins, and fright enough to resolve upon atonement when the waters gathered about him and rose gradually to his chin; but these varied sensations fell away from him when his release was effected in the breaking light.

Miss Darley stood in the doorway when he arrived, a pitiable figure, at his own house. She was a little worn with her sleepless night, more than a little changed in an indescribable, haughty way which repelled him, yet Mr. Ruble forced himself to do something in the sentimental line.

"Oh, my Madeline, I thought I would never see you again!"

"Your Madeline never will be seen, sir," she replied. "I am free to confess that what you had, and not what you were, attracted me, but the charm is broken since I know how much came to you through the meanest of thefts."

Her fingers were twisted in her chain, and as Mr. Ruble's abashed eyes fell they rested upon the key which was suspended there. His lips twitched and turned ghastly, and next moment he fell forward writhing in a fit.

Two or three facts were not long in connecting themselves in Miss Darley's mind, and if she changed her intention about using that key, the result certainly justified her. It unlocked a cumbersome secretary where Aunt Murilda had kept her private papers, and brought to light a codicil to that will of which the old woman had repented, which document in her upright handwriting declared:

"Whereas, I have just learned that my kinsman, Paul Ruble, has been guilty of fraud and deception in imposing on me certain improvements now used in the machinery of the mills as his own invention; and whereas, being impressed by what I considered his practical genius I have heretofore named him as the heir to my estates, this codicil is to revoke such disposition of my properties to the aforesaid Paul Ruble; and, furthermore: I, Murilda Ruble Darley, being sound in mind, but feeble in body, do hereby devise and bequeath all the estates and personal properties of which I may die possessed to my beloved grandniece, Madeline Darley, on condition that she shall make such restitution as justice demands to the actual inventor of said improvements of which he was wickedly defrauded—said inventor, I have reason to believe, being a young man named Royal March."

That, and more, in Aunt Murilda's hand, and a rather awkward imitation of a lawyer's phraseology left her last wishes unmistakably clear, and the choice between Paul Ruble and poverty was lifted away from Madeline, and Mr. Ruble himself recovered to slink out of her knowledge, and, without a doubt, to curse the weakness which left that document undestroyed.

Did she fulfill the condition imposed upon her? There is a crippled joint-owner with her of those mill and mining interests who evidently thinks so, into whose eyes she looks as she says: "You are the only lord and master I could ever acknowledge, Royal, my dear."—Good Literature.

THE PULPIT.

A SCHOLARLY SUNDAY SERMON BY DR. WILLIAM YOUNG CHAPMAN.

Subject: Churchgoing Abolished.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Dr. William Young Chapman, pastor of the Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church, Buffalo, preached Sunday at both services in the Central Presbyterian Church. In the morning he had as his subject "Churchgoing Abolished." The text was from Revelation xxi:22: "And I saw no temple therein." Dr. Chapman said:

Among many things in this sublime apocalypse of St. John hard to be understood there is one thing that stands out with clearness and certainty, and that is the vision of the perfected church, the ideal society. It is the same church triumphant and perfect there that is militant and defective here. The same souls that struggle and suffer here are they that walk in white and wave palms of victory there. Here we see as in a glass darkly. There they see face to face. Here we know in part, there they know as they are known. John had given to him a divine horoscope, revealing the consummation and absolute perfection of the essential characteristics of the kingdom of God concentrated in the imperial capital of the universe—the city of God. By every sort of figure and symbol are its glories set forth. And we learn as much about it by what is said negatively as by what is said positively. Thus we are told it has streets of gold and gates of pearl and a sea of glass and all the most costly and beautiful things of this world, while all that is disagreeable—pain, sickness, sorrow, sin, death—is wanting there. There is nothing to hurt or annoy, no night, no more sea, no temple.

And it strikes us at first thought as very strange that there should be no temple, no central place of worship in a city which we are accustomed to think is altogether devoted to religion. And yet the text states a great truth which I want to treat broadly, and I believe the text contains easily the subject by which I have chosen to entitle this discourse, "Churchgoing Abolished." The end being attained, the means are discontinued. Hence there are no more churches, no times, nor places, nor forms; no liturgies, nor rituals; no ecclesiastical machinery such as we know here.

And, surely, this must come as a welcome announcement to many a tired churchgoer in this world who finds his religious duties more or less irksome, and to many a non-churchgoer, who does not feel quite comfortable in his neglect of formal religious exercises. Many there are who indulge an indifferent hope of heaven as a sort of Mohammedan paradise, where they may enjoy an eternal holiday, basking in the uncreated rays, drinking from and bathing in the waters of the fountain of life, eating the twelve manner of fruits and sailing on the glassy sea. But they would hardly be attracted to a place where this ceaseless round of ecclesiastical duties should go on forever. Imagine such a one enjoying the delights of that glorious city, counting the towers thereof, marking well her bulwarks and admiring her foundations of jasper and sapphire and chalcedony and sardius and emerald and sardonyx and chrysolyte and beryl and topaz and chrysoprasus and jacinth and amethyst, when suddenly there comes a peal from the golden bells and poor soul, he must take himself off to prayers.

Let such a one be comforted, for John says he saw no temple there, and we dare to infer from that statement that there is no synagogue, nor meeting house, nor Sunday, nor formal religious exercise, "for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it."

It becomes us to inquire more closely into the truth involved here. And if what John saw was the church triumphant, if the conditions he saw were the perfection of what is rudimentary here, if the Holy City, New Jerusalem, is continually coming down from God out of heaven, then we ought to be realizing more and more on earth that heavenly condition.

I believe that condition is illustrated by the progressive church of Christ on earth. Think for a moment of the advantages we have over the ancient Jewish worshiper. He had his central place of worship. Three times a year he must make his pilgrimage to Jerusalem, from even the remotest corner of the land. Over many a rugged mile he must travel with his family and his sheep and oxen for sacrifice and his tent and provision for his journey, in order to perform his religious duties. There at Jerusalem was the temple. There he expected to meet God, or at least there God would be propitious. There was the priest who could offer his sacrifice and present his confession to God. There was the holy place and the most holy place, the locus of the Jewish worship. Even in far off lands, when he worshiped he turned his face toward the temple, as if his heart were there, in any case.

Then, too, his daily devotions found expression in a most elaborate ceremonial. There were divers washings, as there were multifarious causes of uncleanness. There were tithings and manifold offerings. There were sin offerings and peace offerings, all associated with infinite trouble to the worshiper. These minute requirements were infinitely multiplied by the Jew in the time of Christ and His apostles, so that Peter spoke of it as a yoke "which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear."

Now it was immunity from these intolerable burdens that was the first great practical boon of Christianity. Our Lord stated the precious truth to the woman at the well. Said she, "Our fathers worshiped in this mountain (Teresim), and ye say that in Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship." Jesus saith unto her, "Woman, believe Me, the hour cometh when ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, worship the Father. But the hour cometh and now is, when the true worshipers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth. God is a spirit, and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth." It was one of the first meanings of Christ's sacrifice, to abolish the temple. When He bowed His head in death on Calvary and said "It is finished," "the veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom," and the whole significance of the temple service passed away. The temple itself did not long survive the death of Christ, and the ecclesiastical capital was soon destroyed. Henceforth the Church of God in the world was on a different basis. Henceforth God became accessible without offering or priest, without temple or altar, and irrespective of locality. We are enjoying in a measure that rest which Christ came to give—rest from ceremonial burdens. We are living in the dispensation of the spirit, and the church is wherever the spirit moves men to worship. Wherever the Holy Spirit has gone and planted the gospel of Christ in the hearts of men, turning their thoughts and affections to God, there is the church. It matters not whether it be in Greenland's icy mountains or India's coral strand. It matters not whether it be in gorgeous cathedral or in mountain cave. It matters not whether the worshiper be white or black, whether he worship on his knees or on his feet or on his back, so long as he worship in spirit and in truth. Christianity so far as it consists of a visible performance at all is the most natural and spontaneous outgo of the religious instincts to God, and religious worship is essentially a personal communion with God, and in such form and place as is best suited to the worshiper and most in accordance with the will of God.

Hence, you will see, one of the prime characteristics of the church triumphant is perfect liberty. "Get religion," said Augustine, "and do as you please." By which he meant if you truly get religion you will always please to do right. Paul means the same thing when he says, "If ye be in the spirit ye are not under the law." And Jesus meant the same when He said, "Make the tree good and his fruit will be good." And hence, the ideal Christian life is perfectly spontaneous. Obedience is not by compulsion of law, but by impulsion of love. "All the law is fulfilled in one word, 'Thou shalt love.'"

We have heard not a little about "the consent of the governed," and we are likely to hear more. The statement as it stands in that famous document will not bear a literal application. But there is good reason to believe that our fathers knew what they were talking about. If they had said, "government derives its potency from the consent of the governed" they would have been uttering the exact truth. Statutes are inoperative until the subjects consent. Perfect society implies perfect acquiescence in the will of the superior or law making power. The more society progresses toward unity, the simpler and more equable will government become, because the more general will be the consent or acquiescence in the government. Paul says, "I consent unto the law that it is good," and in the perfect society of John's vision each man enjoys perfect liberty because the will of the governor and the governed are in perfect correspondence. Each individual does as he pleases and at the same time does as He pleases.

In some such way the perfect community is characterized by perfect unity without uniformity. Each performs his own duty in his own way, but is all the while in perfect harmony with his neighbor. Again, in the perfected society there is no distinction between the religious and the secular. Here we have our times and places of religion. We gather here in this house of prayer, believing that God is present here as He is not in other places, as, indeed, He has promised to be. It is God's concession to our limitations and infirmities. But it is far from the ideal. We are apt to identify religion with the means of religion, rather than religion itself. We get grace by our religious exercises to keep God's commandments in all our walks of life, and that is religion. The members of the church triumphant are equally religious every day of the week and every hour of the day, and hence, church-going in our sense of the word, is forever abolished. In that society, one does not need to say to his brother, "Know the Lord," for all shall know Him from the least to the greatest. There is no more preaching, "no temple therein."

Once more: it is obvious that the more faithful and devoted we are to the means of religion here the sooner we shall be fitted to do without them. Your child, learning to play the piano, finds it hard labor to spell out note by note, conforming to the rules and rudiments of practice. By and by she will go beyond the rules. She will acquire the genius of the skilled performer. And the more diligently we observe our religious duties here the sooner we shall get beyond them. The more faithful we are now to the times and places of religious worship the sooner shall we be ready for that society where all life is religious.

Zachariah had that vision ages before John had it, when he saw "Holiness to the Lord" inscribed on the bells of the horses and the pots in the Lord's house, as sacred as the bowls of the altar; yea, and every pot in Jerusalem as holy as the vessels of the sanctuary. That was at least a glimpse of the templeless city of God.

And now shall we not keep before us that ideal? Let us not be discouraged by the great disparity between that far-off perfection and present reality. The poet well expresses our feeling:

Oh, Land of Promise, from what Pisgah's height
Can I behold thy stretch of peaceful bowers,
Thy golden harvest flowing out of sight,
The nestled homes and sun-illumined towers?
Gazing upon the sunset's high-heaped gold,
Its crags of opal and of chrysolite,
Its deeps on deeps of glory, that unfold,
Still brightening abysses,
And blazing precipices,
Whence but a scanty leap it seems to heaven,
Sometimes a glimpse is given
Of thy gorgeous realm, thy more unstunted blisses.

Gazing upon that vision, let us be faithful to our temple duties here that we may be fitted for that city where there is no temple, "for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it."

No troubles are so great that they cannot be built into the steps of the staircase, by which souls mount up to heaven.—Canon Liddon.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR JULY 23.

Subject: The Gracious Invitation, Isa. lv., 1-13—Golden Text, Isa. lv., 6—Memory Verses, 6-8—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

I. An invitation to the blessings of the Gospel (vs. 1-5). 1. "Ho." A word calling immediate and earnest attention to what is to follow. "Every one." The invitation is unlimited. "That thirsteth." Every one who has a keen sense of need and an intense desire for those things (see Matt. 5: 6). "Wine and milk." These were regarded by the Jews as the very choicest articles of diet. "Without price." The freeness of the offer is again repeated that there may be no mistake and the poorest and most needy may feel sure of a welcome.

2. "Wherefore." There is a remonstrance here against earthliness; against making much of that which is of the least importance. "Not bread." Contrast the "bread of deceit" (Prov. 20: 17) with the "bread of life" (John 6: 32, 35). "Satisfieth not." Nothing but God can meet the boundless desires of the soul. "In fatness." This expression pictures to us the choicest blessings that God has. His provisions are ample and satisfying (1 Cor. 2: 9, 10; Psa. 36: 8; 63: 5). 3. "Incline your ear." Pay attention. "Soul shall live." Life is more than mere existence. Real life is spiritual life—a life in Christ and given by Christ (John 14: 6). "Everlasting covenant." The covenant made first with Abraham and renewed with David; the covenant promised of Christ in His humiliation and ending with a crowned Christ, exulting in royal victories and a redeemed church. "Sure mercies." That is, the mercies promised to David and his house (see 2 Sam. 7: 8-16, 23-5).

4. "Given Him." God continues calling attention to the great Messiah. He is the central figure of these three chapters. David was the type and Christ the antitype; David in supreme royalty, king over all foes and friends; Christ in ascended majesty, but dispensing His rich blessings which He has provided in His redemptive work to all who will receive them. "A witness." He bore witness even unto death for God, to His law, to His claims and to His plan of redeeming love. "Leader," etc. He was the great Lawgiver, originating laws and institutions for His people. "People." "Peoples."—R. V. We must keep in mind that no race distinctions are allowed. All the peoples and nations of the world are included.

5. "Call a nation." The Christian church, a holy nation, a peculiar people. "Knowest not." The Gentile world whom He had hitherto not distinguished by covenants and blessings. "Know ye not," etc. The Gentile nation was to become one with the people of God (see Eph. 2: 11-13).

II. Conditions of accepting the invitation (vs. 6, 7). 6. "Seek." The only way to find God is to seek Him; but how? By repenting of and forsaking sin. "May be found." This implies that there will be a time when we cannot find Him. 7. "Wicked . . . unrighteous." The wicked man sins more openly in "his way." The unrighteous refers to the more subtle workings of sin "in the thoughts." All are guilty in the latter respect, though many fancy themselves safe because not openly wicked in their ways. "Forsake . . . return." He who would find God must first forsake his sins. Yet this is not sufficient; he must actually come to God. Repentance therefore implies both the negative and the positive duty. "Will have mercy." However far away the sinner may have gone yet when he returns with his whole heart God will not reject him. "Abundantly pardon." God's pardon is full and free. The margin renders it "multiply to pardon."

III. Reasons for accepting the invitation (vs. 8-13). 8. "My thoughts." Jehovah's thoughts transcend those of man as much as the heaven is higher than the earth. The thoughts and ways of Jehovah are His purposes of redemption. Thus we have not only a motive for repentance, but also for eager, expectant hope.

9. "My ways higher," etc. This is a natural and beautiful illustration of the previous verse. Our fellow men might not be willing to forgive, but God is always ready to pardon the true penitent.

10. "Rain . . . snow," etc. By quick association of the ideas mentioned in verse 9, there is a comparison here made. Rain and snow fall from heaven to water the earth and so prepare it for its annual growths to feed the bodies of men and beasts. Just as God's word falls from heaven to produce fruit of righteousness among the millions of Israel and of outlying peoples, and it shall not be void, for every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God is bread (Deut. 8: 3). 11. "So," etc. So every word that God utters shall be made a blessing to man. The Gospel promises and commandments are all important and beneficial. "Not return . . . void." It shall not return without results. God's purposes shall be realized. The full accomplishment of this verse and verses 12 and 13 is to be at the Jews' final restoration, and the conversion of the world. 12. "Go out with joy," etc. The words are used as illustrative of the people of God from the Mosaic dispensation and brought into Gospel privileges under the Christ. They go forth bounding with joy for the conquest of the whole world for Christ, and all nature—the mountains, the hills and the trees—take on the happy spirit of the church. The result shall be the world's renewal. 13. "Instead of the thorn," etc. Christ's work in the world is to remove the useless and the injurious, and to plant the good and the helpful. Where the Gospel goes sin must give way to holiness. "For a name." That is, "for a memorial to His praise" (Jer. 13: 11).

The Stars and Stripes in the Far North.

There is a strange facination about the Artic regions. Year after year, century after century, the struggle between man and nature is continued there. One country or another keeps up the fight, and slowly but surely the standards are pushed forward, each leader outstriping his precessors; and the daring, resulute minds of many lands are attracted to this weird region of endless ice, wherein is enshrined the one grat prize that now remains to reward the venturesome pioneer of geographel discovery. Meanwhile, the world waits with anxious interest for the news their ships bring home, and all to often it is a tale of tradegy and death which comes from the frozen waste. During the past century 4,000 human lives, 200 ships and $100,000,000 have been lost in fruitless efforts to reach the North Pole, and there may be disaster yet to chronicle before the conquest is accheived, if, indeed, it ever is. This season there will be four expeditions operating within the Artic Circle—Fila's and the Duke of Orleans' in Franz Josef Land, Amundsen's in Boothia Land, and Peary's in Greenland.

Fiala and Peary are both Americans, and American interest in the subject is naturally keenest over the men striving to plant "Old Glory" at the apex of the globe; which interest is stimulated by the fact that both stand an excellent chance of regaining for the United States the distinction of "fartherest North," even if they fail in their larger aim. Lockwood of Greely's expedition, carried the Stars and Stripes to 83 deg. 24 min. north in 1882, a record not broken until 1895, when Nansen reached 86 deg. 14 min. with the Norwegian colors. Cagni, of Abruzzi's party made his way to 86 deg. 33 min. in 1900, and Italy's banner now floats nearest the Pole, Peary advancing his flag to 84 deg. 17 min. two years later. The United States seemed destined to gain whatever laurels are to be obtained from the present season's work, and possibly the honor of again lead in the van of poleward progress—From "For the Conquest of the Pole," by P. T. McGrath, in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for July.

A Hero by Accident.

"There's no telling what moment a man's fortune may turn or what may decide the turning," remarked the visitor, who had been listening to the interchange of stories.

"That's so," agreed one of the bystanders. "The only question is whether the man's got the wit to see the chance and the grit to make use of it."

"Well, even that isn't always necessary. I was out on the frontier some years back when a young fellow I knew to be a 'white head' was promoted in his regiment and paragraphed in all the eastern papers for his courage and coolness. He had been sent out to meet an attacking party of Indians. He didn't want to go a bit. He actually trembled when he confessed to me it was his first call to dangerous duty and he'd give anything on earth to be out of the affair. In less than twenty-four hours the station was ringing with the way he had held his ground, even when his men had beat a retreat. It was a miracle he wasn't captured or killed, staying there single handed to face and fire on the advancing foe"—

"Just one of those instances of a man finding his native courage in the presence of real danger?"

"Not a bit of it. He was riding a mule, and just at the critical moment the animal planted his feet and refused to budge."—Youth's Companion.

[illegible]

In one of the most fashionable restaurants in Paris a man's life was saved through the skill and quickness of one of the guests. It appears that a man, with three friends, was dining at one of the small tables when a piece of meat lodged in his throat and he found it impossible to get rid of it. His friends in alarm slapped him on the back, but the unfortunate man became black in the face and fell to the floor. A surgeon from the German hospital, who happened to be dining in the cafe, pushed his way through the crowd. He saw at once that the man was dying and that if prompt measures were not taken he would quickly succumb. He ordered one of the waiters to bring him a small funnel such as is used in bottling wine and then, without a moment's hesitation, took out a sharp knife, cut the man's throat, removed the piece of meat and—the waiter having returned—quickly inserted the funnel in the opening. The man was then hastily conveyed to the hospital, where a silver tube was inserted in the place of the funnel, and a few hours later he was pronounced out of danger.

The Wisdom of Scroggins.

The wisdom of Scroggins, millionaire ex-stage driver, from John Uri Lloyd's novel, "Scroggins:"

"Et don't make no difference, Mr. Mayor, how rich and ign'rant a man is ef he only hes sense 'nough ter keep on workin' after gittin' rich. But ef he tries ter quit work an' enj'y himself by lookin' at things with his eyes an' thinkin' with his no 'count brain an' stuffin' his one stomach like et war a hogshead he air a fool. I've got my wind agin, and I'm goin' back ter the gulch."

"But, my good man, you are old. Your place is filled by some other man. Perhaps you cannot get it back."

"Pardner," said Scroggins, "there ain't no question 'bout my gittin' that place. Mr. Mayor, I owns the line. When I picks up them ribbons thar won't be no agent to say, 'Put 'em down, Scroggins.'"

The Enemies of Success.

Bright, cheerful hopeful thoughts and a strong belief in one's own ability to accomplish the thing undertaken are friends that will insure success. The ambitious person should learn as early in life as possible to pick out the friends and enemies of success, and in many cases it will be found that the greatest enemy resides within himself. Morbid thoughts, for example, are infinitely greater hindrances to success than opposition from outside, and no health, no beauty, no harmony, no real success can exist in the atmosphere of abnormal melancholy or morbid ideas. Overcome the enemies to success within yourself and you will have done much toward reaching the goal of your ambition.—London Answers.

Preservation of Meat.

Meat is commonly preserved by steeping it in brine. This method, however, has the undesirable effect of extracting from the meat much soluble nutritious matter besides rendering the meat harder and less digestible. Another way of preserving it is in airtight cases. The cases are packed with meat and filled up with gravy and are then hermetically sealed except at one point. They are then exposed to heat above that of boiling water for several hours, thus destroying all the existing germs and driving out all the air contained in them. The open part is then soldered over. If by any accident the tin is not hermetically sealed the meat will spoil.—American Queen.

Odd Geographical Division.

The range of the Blue Ridge mountains in Pennsylvania is divided by a river every twenty-seven miles, as follows: From the Susquehanna to the Swatara, 27 miles; from the Swatara to the Schuylkill, 27 miles; from the Schuylkill to the Lehigh, 27 miles; from the Lehigh to the Delaware, 27 miles. At the next 27 miles is a hollow of New Jersey in which nestles a lake known as Culver's pond.

Had Read About Him.

"Now, boys," said the Sunday school teacher, addressing the juvenile class, "can any of you tell me anything about Good Friday?"

"Yes, ma'am, I can," replied the boy at the foot of the class. "He was the fellow what done the housework for Robinson Crusoe."

Bent Her Double.

"I knew no one, for four weeks, when I was sick with typhoid and kidney trouble," writes Mrs. Annie Hunter, of Pittsburg, Pa., and when I got better, although I had one of the best doctors I could get, I was bent double, and had to rest my hands on my knees when I walked. From this terrible affliction I was rescued by Electric Bitters, which restored my health and strength, and now I can walk as straight as ever. They are simply wonderful." HEAVENLY HOME.

Deeply impressed I have been of the heavenly home subject of Sunday's lesson, June 18. The very thought who shall enter there, that most perfect city free from sin. No one enter save those whose names are written in the Lamb's book of life, only loyal subjects of Jesus Christ enter; if we be not subjects of the lowly Jesus we will not have a place. The drunkard, the poor slave to whiskey, oh poor wretched soul! no evil speaker, no evil worker can enter this city of gold. O friend, let me persuade you in the name of our blessed Saviour, turn thou away from such things that will destroy both soul and body. Won't you take heed while it is calling today? In heaven there will be no temptation to evil, all untruths, all evils, will be excluded. For a sure fact we grow either better or worse day by day, and it is possible that we let the hold of sin grow stronger. He will come again in like manner as you have seen Him go away, the angel said, and will He find us waiting, ready to enter this beautiful home or shall our mournful crys be heard when he says depart, I know you not, no name written in the book of life? O what a sad, sad, heart-rending scene to think about for those not ready to enter. And let us consider and ask ourselves the question, am I ready if He should call for me? I hope all who take the pleasure of reading this may be impressed as I was and will tell to others of this heavenly home, beautiful home.

CONCORD S S. PICNIC.

Early Wednesday morning, July 12, the hum of vehicles and the clank of feet was heard in this community and on a jolly crowd of us went to Adams' Ferry on the Coosa. Some families of that community met us there; we appreciated their presence and aid very much. All was lovely and we spent an enjoyable day on the banks of the romantic Coosa, the children gathering flowers, grasses, ferns and mosses and climbing the cliffs of rocks and viewing the scenery. Several of our number carried suits and went in bathing; also had lemonade a plenty for the use of all during the day. At noon a bounteous dinner was spread on a huge rock on the bank of the Coosa, and God's blessings were invoked by our Pastor, Rev. M. J. Parrish, that we might realize the goodness of God. The refreshments served was for the pleasure of all present. I will say that the Sunday school teachers and students who did not go surely missed a treat for we spent a lovely day together.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

Special correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, D. C. July 17, 1905

The possibility of an extra session being out of the way leaves the anti tariff revision people in a strong strategic position. They believe the President can be induced to press the question of control of railway rates at the expense of anything else. The consideration of this legislation they assert can be, and will be, drawn out to an inordinate length, because at the Senate hearings there appeared to be no public demand for giving to the interstate commerce commission the right to regulate railway rates—only a demand for such amendment to the existing law as would enable them to better deal with the question of discriminations against individuals and localities. With a lively fight pending on this question, and the certainty that the Democrats will take advantage of it to press their claims for governmental ownership as the only remedy for railway abuses, the managers of the campaign against tariff revision believe that any legislation regarding the tariff can be stayed off indefinitely. Appropriation bills will occupy so great a portion of the time as to help materially in their campaign.

The deficit in the Treasury receipts must be made good rapidly. To that end the people who are opposed to tariff revision will urge strongly, persistantly and probably effectively, the reinstitution of internal revenue taxes on such necessities as beer, cigars, tobacco, tea, coffee and other things of daily use in the life of the common people, that they are pleased to term luxuries.

This combination the opponents of tariff revision believe will enable them to carry through their program, which is in short to make the railroads and the common people the fenders that will keep the law makers away from the tariff schedules, and permit the tariff barons to enjoy two years more of their present exorbitant profits.

I feel certain that there is less of real heart interest and more demagoguery and artificiality in this talk about railroad rate legislation than in any issue political or semi-political that has been before the country in a decade. CHAS. A. EDWARDS.

One Dollar Saved Represents Ten Dollars Earned.

The average man does not save to exceed ten per cent of his earnings. He must spend nine dollars in living expenses for every dollar saved. That being the case he cannot be too careful about unnecessary expenses. Very often a few cents properly invested, like buying seeds for his garden, will save several dollars outlay later on. It is the same in buying Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It costs but a few cents, and a bottle of it in the house often saves a doctor's bill of several dollars. Energy.

I am glad to see every body enjoying life and pleased with their crops so well. On an average I can say that our crops are looking fairly well. As to our ball games I can say that we, the Blue Darters, have not lost a game this season, we played a game Saturday, the 15th, at Vida, against the G. B. Boys and won the game by a score of 6 to 4. We believe that we can do Clanton team the same way if they will play the Clanton boys straight. If the Clanton team don't believe that we will play them just let them challenge us and see if we won't play them.

Picnics have been plentiful around here this summer and several more on hand. I have been to four picnics this summer and have had chicken pie at each one; I have also played a game of ball at each and won all four. There is going to be a picnic at the Hampton school house, 7 miles west of Verbena, the 22d inst., and would like for everybody to come out and bring a chicken pie, as we are going to play a game of ball against the Kingston boys. Come one, come all.

Edison on New York Living.

Edison despises New York City. "I loathe its artificial way of living," he says. "It's mannerisms, its ways of thought. It has but the one redeeming feature, that it is getting so impossible that people must leave it or become crazy. A man in New York gets down to his office at 9, works until 12 or 1, goes out, takes a couple of cocktails, eats a hearty luncheon, hurriedly goes back to his desk and works until 5 or 6, hurries up town, stopping off for one or two more drinks, goes out somewhere, eats an enormous dinner, goes to the theater and then supper afterward, and finally tumbles into bed. It is that type of man who often says to me: 'I don't see how you stand the strain of working the way you do day after day and night after night in the laboratory.' Work? Why, my work is play compared with his."

Aluminum-Coated Paper.

Aluminum-coated paper, made in Germany for wrapping food substances, is prepared by applying a thin coat of an alcohol solution of resin to artificial parchment, then sprinkling aluminum powder over the surface, and finally submitting to pressure. The artificial parchment is paper that has been treated with sulphuric acid. The aluminum paper is not attacked by the air or by fats, is much cheaper than tinfoil, and late analysis in Paris of tnis paper and of aluminum foil showed but a small proportion of foreign matter and no arsenic or poisoned metal.

COMES A TIME

When Coffee Shows What It Has Been Doing.

"Of late years coffee has disagreed with me," writes a matron from Rome, N. Y., "it's lightest punishment was to make me 'logy' and dizzy, and it seemed to thicken up my blood.

"The heaviest was when it upset my stomach completely, destroying my appetite and making me nervous and irritable, and sent me to my bed. After one of these attacks, in which I nearly lost my life, I concluded to quit and try Postum Food Coffee.

"It went right to the spot! I found it not only a most palatable and refreshing beverage, but a food as well.

"All my ailments, the 'loginess' and dizziness, the unsatisfactory condition of my blood, my nervousness and irritability disappeared in short order and my sorely afflicted stomach began quickly to recover. I began to rebuild and have steadily continued until now. Have a good appetite and am rejoicing in sound health, which I owe to the use of Postum Food Coffee." A VETERAN OF THE BLACK HAWK, MEXICAN AND THE CIVIL WARS.

CAPT. W. W. JACKSON.

Sufferings Were Protracted and Severe—Tried Every Known Remedy Without Relief—Serious Stomach Trouble Cured by Three Bottles of Peruna!

Capt. W. W. Jackson, 705 G St., N. W., Washington, D. C., writes:

"I am eighty-three years old, a veteran of the Black Hawk, Mexican and the Civil Wars. I am by profession a physician, but abandoned the same.

"Some years ago I was seriously affected with catarrh of the stomach. My sufferings were protracted and severe. I tried every known remedy without obtaining relief.

"In desperation I began the use of your Peruna. I began to realize immediate though gradual improvement.

"After the use of three bottles every appearance of my complaint was removed, and I have no hesitation in recommending it as an infallible remedy for that disorder."—W. W. Jackson.

Limits of Vision.

The limits of vision vary with elevation, conditions of the atmosphere, intensity of illumination and other modifying elements in different cases On a clear day an object one foot above a level plain may be seen at the distance of 1.31 miles; one ten feet high, 4.15 miles; one twenty feet high, 5.86 miles; one 100 feet, high, 13.1 miles; one a mile high, as the top of a mountain, 95.23 miles. This allows seven inches (or, to be exact, 6.99 inches) for the curvature of the earth and assumes that the size and illumination of the object are sufficient to produce an image. Five miles may be taken as the extreme limit at which a man is visible on a flat plain to an observer on the same level.

A WOMAN'S MISERY.

Mrs. John LaRue, of 115 Paterson Avenue, Paterson, N. J., says: "I was troubled for about nine years, and what I suffered no one will ever know. I used about every known remedy that is said to be good for kidney complaint, but without deriving permanent relief. Often when alone in the house the back ache has been so bad that it brought tears to my eyes. The pain at times was so intense that I was compelled to give up my household duties and lie down. There were headaches, dizziness and blood rushing to my head to cause bleeding at the nose. The first box of Doan's Kidney Pills benefited me so much that I continued the treatment. The stinging pain in the small of my back, the rushes of blood to the head and other symptoms disappeared."

HIGHWAYMAN KILLED

By Officers, After He had Secured a Booty of $5,000. Money Recovered.

THEIR PLANS WERE KNOWN.

Robbery and Killing Occurred Saturday Between Littleton and Flat Top—Robber Identified.

Birmingham, Ala.—L. D. Burr, paymaster of the Sloss-Sheffield Steel and Iron Company was held up by two masked highwaymen Saturday afternoon at 2:55 o'clock on the railroad between Littleton and Flat Top and $5,000 was secured by the robbers. The money was recovered.

In less than five minutes after the robbery Detective George Bodeker, Policeman Joe Nix and Charles Pickard a Flat Top guard, had shot and killed one of the highwaymen, whose name is said to be Dan McAbee, or BeBee, and recovered the money. The other robber made his escape.

The dead highwayman, it is said, made an attempt to kill Detective Bodeker as the officer was walking toward him to place handcuffs on the prisoner's wrists, and Nix and Pickard each emptied a load of buckshot from double-barrelled shotguns into the man, killing him instantly.

Both of the loads entered McAbee's breast within a few inches of each other, and he sank to the ground dead, dropping his pistol as he fell.

The story is one unique in criminal circles. Some time ago Vice President J. W. McQueen of the Sloss-Sheffield Company, learned that an attempt was going to be made to hold up the paymaster between Littleton and Flat Top, a distance of several miles over which the paymaster always walked, carrying the money with him, guarded by one of the employes of the company.

Several days ago Mr. McQueen learned further of the plans of the robbers and that they intended executing their plans Saturday afternoon. With that information Frank H. Gafford, mine superintendent, requested the police department to detail Detective Bodeker and another officer to work on the case. Chairman Parker detailed Detective Bodekar, who asked Policeman Nix to accompany him. The two left the city Saturday morning on the Southern and spent the entire morning watching the river bank of the Little Warrior.

The information which was received by the company was that the robbers would use a boat in effecting their escape. After searching the river bank for some time they discovered the boat hidden in some weeds, and they watched it from about 11:30 o'clock until the holdup occurred.

The Hold-Up.

In order not to excite suspicion Paymaster Burr took the trip as usual, being confident that if the robbery took place the money would be recovered. The money was contained in a bag, carried by a negro employe of the company and Mr. Gresham, one of the guards, accompanied Mr. Burr on the trip.

As the paymaster reached the part of the railroad nearest where the boat was concealed, the two highwaymen, masked and otherwise disguised stepped out and one of them levelled a shotgun and the other a pistol and commanded the three to throw up their hands, using an oath. Then turning to the negro he said:

"Nigger, —— —— you, drop that bag!" The negro did so, and the smaller of the two highwaymen stepped forward and picked up the bag. With another oath the highwaymen commanded the three men to run for their lives down the railroad track.

The smaller of the two highwaymen, the one that was killed, started down toward the boat, carrying the money. He had dropped his pistol into his coat pocket. When he reached the place where the three officers were hidden they stepped out from the underbrush and commanded him to throw up his hands, which he did. Detective Bodeker then told him that he was going to handcuff him and that he would not be hurt if he did not resist. The detective started toward the highwayman, and tripped and fell. As he did so the highwayman jerked his pistol from his pocket and levelled it at Detective Bodekar. Two shotguns spoke at the same second, and the highwayman dropped to the ground, his pistol and the money bag falling from his hands as he did so.

One Robber Escapes.

The officers ascertained that the man who was shot was dead and then started up to the railroad track to get the other robber, but he had escaped into the woods on the other side of the railroad. The remains of the dead man were brought to the city and carried to the undertaking establishment of the Gandin Company.

The man was wearing a mask and a pair of dirty overalls and a coat which was badly torn and cut. Under this disguise was a comparatively good suit of clothing and he had a new hat hidden under his arm. It is supposed that the men intended escaping by this lightning disguise which they could have easily made.

The other highwayman is described as being about six feet tall. The three officers never saw him except just the top of his head, but Mr. Burr the guard accompanying him and the negro would probably be able to identify him.

Coroner Paris was in Littleton investigating another case, so he was summoned and the case was turned over to him.

Body Identified.

Saturday night about 11 o'clock the dead highwayman was identified by D. N. Kemp, as Dan McBee. Mr. Kemp stated positively that he knew the dead man, and that about eighteen months ago, he was engaged in business with a man by the name of Davis at Cordova, the two managing a drug store at that place.

It was also stated that McBee married a lady of Cordova, but that the two have not lived together recently. Mr. Kemp said that he last saw McBee at Horse Creek about two weeks ago. It was stated by some who claim to know the highwayman that he had been living in that vicinity for some time.

Posse Is After Negro.

Poplarville, Miss.—Saturday about 1 o'clock a negro named Ollie Evans attempted a criminal assault upon the wife of a prominent farmer living ten miles south of here. The news reached here late Saturday evening and a large posse has gone out to search for him. It is thought he will be caught before morning, and if he is taken he will probably be severely dealt with.

Shoots His Bride of Six Weeks.

Little Rock, Ark.—A special from Texarkana says: Charles Reynolds, of New York, Saturday night, in a fit of jealous rage, shot his bride of six weeks at 1124 Wood street, where they have been visiting her cousin for a week past. The bullet, a 41-calibre, entered the left breast two inches above the heart and penetrated the cavity. She is in a critical condition. Reynolds escaped after the shooting, but the officers are scouring tne town for him.

The couple were married in New York six weeks ago and left at once for the west on a bridal tour, going first to Houston, Tex., where they remained until they came here. Mrs Reynolds is a beautiful blonde, 35 years of age, and was a widow when she married Reynolds. The finding by the latter of an old love letter written by a former sweetheart of the lady is said to have caused the trouble.

Solons in Norway Look Very Grave.

Stockholm.—The Norwegian Storthing voted to increase the duty on pork from 2 1-2 to 3 1-2 cents. This indicates that the Storthing will pass the government bill, considerably raising the entire tariff.

In the lower house of the Rikskdag, the minister of justice answered Pastor Waldenstorm's interpellation as to who falsified King Oscar's rescript refusing to accept the resignation of the Norwegian cabinet by omitting in the statement appearing in the Storthing minutes the word "now" in the sentence "I cannot now obtain another cabinet." The minister of justice informed the Kiksdag that Premier Nicholson gave the correct version of the rescript but that Herr Berner, president of the Storthing omitted the fatal word in reading it to the Storthing.

Saturday night both houses of the Riksdag were holding sessions, discussing with a special committee its preliminary proposals. The greatest secrecy prevails and it is impossible to get an inkling of what is going on from any of the members except the information which is considered reliable that the committee will not reach any conclusion earlier than the middle of next week. Members of the senate on leaving the building, all the doors of which are closed and guarded, are looking unusually grave.

Revenue Raids.

Troy, Ala.—Deputy Collector W. F. Russell and Deputy Marshal J. F. Green have returned from a raid in Houston and Geneva counties.

They destroyed four illicit distilleries on the raid and a quantity of beer. John Holland was arrested by Deputy Marshal Greene, brought before United States Commissioner Tutwiler and bound over to the next term of the United States court to await the action of the federal grand jury under a $200 bond.

Deputy Marshal A. J. Collier brought Lewis Tooles, of Geneva county and Hobert Sawyer, of Coffee county, before United States Commissioner Tutwiler charged with illicit distilling, but both were discharged for want of sufficient evidence.

Eufaula, Ala.—H. E. Sellers, a young man who lives on South Three Notch street and works at Hanchey's mill, met with a very serious and painful accident at the mills by being so unfortunate as to get his hand lacerated in the machine.

Barron Is Released.

Bay Minette, Ala.—In the preliminary trial of Lafayette Barron, the justice of the peace discharged him after a six-hours' legal fight on the evidence between the attorneys. Some of the best people of Bay Minette resent the action of the justice, even though the case was one wherein a white man was charged with assault upon a little negro girl.

Exchanges and Associations Took up Leakage—Tobacco Reports Wrong.

LONG CONFERENCE HELD.

New Orleans Exchange and Southern Cotton Growers' Association in Earnest Consultation.

Washington, D. C.—A long conference took place Friday night between Col. Henry G. Hester, secretary of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange, and Richard Cheatham, secretary of the Southern Cotton Growers' Association relative to the cotton leak situation, and, at the request of Mr. Cheatham, Colonel Hester, who intended to stay over until Sunday to confer with Harvie Jordan, president of the Southern Cotton Growers' Association, who has been in New York in consultation with officials of the New York Cotton Exchange.

Colonel Hester and Mr. Cheatham agree that there should be a new report by the department of agriculture on cotton acreage and that the bureau of statistics should be continued. Colonel Hester called on Secretary Wilson today and urged this. He was backed up by John Hyde, chief statistician of the department of agriculture, at whose suggestion he called on Mr. Wilson. The secretary of agriculture is seriously considering making a new report, and it is not unlikely that this will be done.

The conference between Messrs. Hester and Cheatham lasted until 1 o'clock, and they decided to co-operate on the cotton statistics question.

Memphis Exchange's Message.

Memphis, Tenn.—The Memphis Cotton Exchange Friday forwarded a letter to President Roosevelt, a copy of which follows:

Hon. Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States, Washington, D. C.

Sir: The Memphis Cotton Exchange desires to enter its earnest protest against the system of leakage in the government cotton report by employes of the bureau of statistics of the agricultural department as recently exposed at Washington, and to express the hope that you will order a thorough investigation of the matter and, criminal prosecution of the party or parties who have been guilty of this offense.

No man should be permitted to occupy an office of the government who makes public the secrets of the office for his private gain or for the benefit of others in collusion with nim. We hope that you will order the matter sifted to the bottom and that steps will be taken for the adequate punishment not alone of the employes of the government who are found guilty but of all parties who have been the beneficiaries of this corrupt and disgraceful system.

Very respectfully,
DENNIS SMITH,
President.
HENRY HOTTER, Secretary.

Cheatham to Assist.

Washington, D. C.—Richard Cheatham, secretary of the Southern Cotton Growers' Association, was in lengthy conference with District Attorney Beach and Mr Moran, acting chief of the secret service bureau, regarding the recent cotton investigation.

Mr. Cheatham proposes to remain here for some time and will assist in the preparation of evidence upon which possible criminal prosecutions may be based.

Hubbard Asks Correction.

New York.—President Walter C Hubbard, of the New York Cotton Exchange, sent the following communication to the Associated Press:

"Permit me to ask you very kindly to correct a misapprehension of the press in regard to my letter to President Roosevelt concerning the disclosures in the department of agriculture.

"I have never written to Secretary Wilson, and my letter was not the sequel to any correspondence with him conducted by my brother, Samuel T. Hubbard, when president of the New York Cotton Exchange.

"My note was prompted simply by the recent revelations and had for its purpose solely to make a clear statement of the attitude of our exchange."

He grows a new half- to replace the one which has devoured, and seems to mind loss no more than a body minds ving his hair cut.

There are besides, some snail-like water worms which quite outdo the earthworm If one of these chances lose his entire head, in a week or sometimes in only four or five days he grows a new one, brain, eyes, all, and is as well off as ever. Even if a hungry fish gets two bites him, so that he loses both head and tail, the worm can patch himself with new members and go about his business as before. They have been known to get divided into pieces about equal in size, and each piece grow a new half-body, so that there were two entire worms in place of one.

After this it will easily be guessed that if the head end of the worm happens to be split half way down he will grow two new sides and become shaped with two heads. Or if the end is split new sides grow and two-tailed worm is made. Sometimes one or two new heads develop close behind the old one in the angle the Y Indeed, the little creature seems to have a sort of mania for making new heads and tails wherever finds a chance. If, therefore, the worm, after receiving several wounds, manages to escape with his life from the cuts which happen to open forward, little heads grow out, and from those opening backward little tails—no doubt greatly to his embarrassment.

But what of the cut-off heads and tails? Do they make new bodies and become whole animals again? Not usually The severed head seems to become confused, so that it does not know what to do. If it lives it is most apt to produce another head like itself and change into two heads placed neck to neck so that they look in opposite directions. So, too, the severed tail, equally foolish, doubles itself and becomes two useless tails growing end to end.

But isn't this really quite impossible? A head or a tail or even a half-body cannot get food. If it cannot eat it cannot grow; and that is all there is about it. Well, it is true that a fragment cannot eat. But still it can make the new part out of its own tissue So the animal keeps getting smaller as it becomes more nearly complete, until, when the new part is finished, the whole body may be no more than the tenth part of its proper size The reconstructed animals are, therefore, forced to begin life over again like young worms. In time, however, they grow up to full size When a head end makes a new head instead of a tail, or a tail makes a new tail instead of a head, the little creatures must necessarily waste away and die—From Nature and Science in St Nicholas.

WATERS OF HAMMAN.

Baths in Galilee Which Have Been Used Since 1350 B. C.

Stooping, I put my hand in the water. It was hot—so hot, in fact, that the thought took hold of me, if I entered that water to bathe, I might peradventure stay there to be boiled.

But knowledge cometh only by experience, so I removed my garments, and dipped an experimental foot in the steaming fluid. It needed some resolution to give it the company of its fellow, and there I sat humbly on the stonework, awaiting courage for further immersion. Gaining confidence by degrees, anon the two English bathers stood upright on the margin of least depth fetching their breath how they could in the clouds of steam. Then my brother, plunging headlong, swam across the bath, and, he returning none the worse (but, indeed, much uplifted in spirit), I found heart to copy his behavior. So that presently the pair of us were swimming in full enjoyment to and fro across the little bath, drawing ejaculations of enthusiasm from the Bedouin bathers, who, it would seem, could not put their arms and legs to such service.

That water, hot from the inside of the earth, had a soft and silky feel though pleasantly sulphurous to the taste and smell. From our new point of view the dome was seen above this disk of water, so that in form the bath (though the present building is only some sevety years old) resembles those of antiquity.

In subsequent soapings and sluicings by a bakshish-expectant attendant, experiences in a Turkish bath found their counterpart. A notable shortcoming of the establishment then revealed itself. It had no dressing room. An apartment of a lower temperature was manifestly essential if the burden of clothes were to be resumed in any comfort, and if one were to confront the cold night air with confidence and closed pores. We had perforce to take the risk—and, indeed, we did not contract the chills we courted.

I have since seen the Hamman in full daylight. You hear the water gurgling within the closed-in remnant of a former bath, and chinks in the ancient masonry give out evil smells from the pent-up sulphur fumes. Several springs gush forth openly beside the shore, the copious supply of hot water being available to all who may desire to profit by its use.

At one of the steaming pools I saw two industrious Arab women washing the bright raiments of those they love; and water at a temperature of 144 degrees Fahr., must be excellent for the purpose. It remains to state that since 1350 B. C. these hot baths have been credited with a great efficacy in rheumatic complaints, though neither my brother nor I was qualified to test any virtue of that sort which may belong to them.

We have made acquaintance with another hot spring of Galilee. In a little boat we sailed northward over the small, calm sea, gliding by Tiberias and the flowery shore that lies beyond. And the day being gloriously warm, we dropped anchor and bathed. This was to have experience of two sorts of water—one luxuriously warm, the other benumbingly cold.

We were but thirty yards from the shore at a point where a hot stream came tumbling over dark stones into the sea. So considerable was the volume of this tributary that its waters were spread far over the surface of Galilee. We swam into patches of warmth, and the water between and underneath felt, by contrast, icy.

VICTORIA AND NIAGARA.

There is No Possibility of Comparison Between the Two.

It was on the 22d of November 1855, that the friendly natives with whom he was traveling brought Dr. David Livingstone for the first time within sight and sound of the wonderful cataract on the Zambesi River now known as the Victoria Falls. Before finding it, the good missionary had journeyed for nearly two years, and from his point of departure at Kuruman, in Cape Colony, had traveled quite 4,000 miles of hitherto unknown country.

Today one takes the train at Cape Town on Wednesday, passes through Kimberley on Thursday, reaches Buluwayo on Saturday, and late in the afternoon of Sunday begins to see in the distance the rising pillar of mist from the great cataract.

The natives call it "Mosi-oa-tuni," meaning "the roaring smoke." Twenty miles away the spray thrown back from the depths of the tremendous cavern into which the river tumbles appears like a column of smoke from a burning village, and during the last mile of the railway journey the roar of the falling water becomes noticeable. Finally, when the edge of the chasm is reached, if the river is in flood, the eye and ear are assailed by a combination of phenomena that probably cannot be duplicated as marvels anywhere else on the planet.

The first question that is asked of an American who has seen this African wonder generally is, "How does it compare with Niagara?" There is no possibility of comparison. The two are as different as day and night. Niagara is a perfect picture in a lovely natural framework. Every point and line and curve of motionless trembling verdure and gliding water is a touch of majestic beauty. Victoria is simply a phenomenon, a terrific gash in the floor of an apparently unending plain, which, as one gazes, simply swallows a river in a manner that produces almost a thrill of horror.—From Theodore F. Van Wagenen's "The Victoria Falls," in the Century.

Whispering She Would Ne'er Consent.

If the crinoline comes, the most courageous of women will have to wear it. She will begin by declaring that nothing will induce her to adopt so meaningless and so hideous a fashion; and for several weeks, no doubt, the knowledge that she possesses greater courage than other persons will sustain her as the ballrooms and reception roms become every day more crowded with silk-covered cages and Venetian-blind cotrivances for the nice disposition of steel-ribbed skirts. But the weeks will go on until one day, in the utter desolation of her unfashionable prettiness.— It is impossible to contemplate the end without emotion.—London Speaker.

One of the most energetic nest builders is the marsh wren.

Something of a Contrast.

Dr. Parkhurst will preach only a few more sermons in his famous old church in Madison Square. It is likely that the new place across the street will be completed before the snow flies, and then the gaunt old brownstone pile will be pulled down to make room for the tallest inhabited structure in the world—the new tower of the Metropolitan Life Insurance building. Here will be a characteristic contrast of the newer New York. The church now building for the Parkhurst congregation is a squat, low-roofed affair which for all that its architecture signifies might be a theater or an eye and ear infirmary. Directly across the street will be the great temple of Mammon, fully five time as high as the church. Time was, and not so very long ago, either, when the church steeples thrust themselves far above the commercial sky-line, but this is so no longer. Twenty years hence, when the spire of the new cathedral of St. John the Divine begins to take shape, it will probably be the only acute angle visible from the harbor of New York.

Irish Language.

Among the many languages that exist today is the Gaelic or Irish language, a tongue which belongs to what is technically called the Celtic branch of the Indo-European family of languages; which has monuments going back to an extraordinarily early period; which has been called more flexible than the Greek, more subtle than the French, more comprehensive than the German and yet more concise than the ancient Hebrew, and which, with its wonderfully copious literature, is without doubt one of the greatest glories of Ireland. The Irish language has this peculiarity, that amid the tribulation and suffering and tyranny which have made up the history of the race its language still remains intact. There is perhaps, besides the Irish, only one other race which has, through chance and change, through chaos and circumstances, preserved intact its national language—that is the Hebrew race.

Body Raw With Humor—Caused Untold Agony—Doctor Did No Good—Mother Discouraged—Cuticura Cured at Once.

"My child was a very delicate baby. A terrible sore and humor broke out on his body, looking like raw flesh, and causing the child untold agony. My physician prescribed various remedies, none of which helped at all. I became discouraged and took the matter into my own hands, and tried Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment with almost immediate success. Before the second week had passed the soreness was gone, not leaving a trace of anything. Mrs. Jeannette H. Block, 281 Rosedale St., Rochester, N. Y."

Cure For The Blues

ONE MEDICINE THAT HAS NEVER FAILED

Health Fully Restored and the Joy of Life Regained

When a cheerful, brave, light-hearted woman is suddenly plunged into that perfection of misery, the BLUES, it is a sad picture. It is usually this way: She has been feeling "out of sorts" for some time; head has ached and back also; has slept poorly, been quite nervous, and nearly fainted once or twice; head dizzy, and heart-beats very fast; then that bearing-down feeling, and during her menstrual period she is exceedingly despondent. Nothing pleases her. Her doctor says: "Cheer up: you have dyspepsia; you will be all right soon."

Mrs. Rosa Adams

But she doesn't get "all right," and hope vanishes; then come the brooding, morbid, melancholy, everlasting BLUES.

Don't wait until your sufferings have driven you to despair, with your nerves all shattered and your courage gone, but take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. See what it did for Mrs. Rosa Adams, of 819 12th Street, Louisville, Ky., niece of the late General Roger Hanson, C.S.A. She writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I cannot tell you with pen and ink what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered with female troubles, extreme lassitude, 'the blues,' nervousness and that all-gone feeling. I was advised to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it not only cured my female derangement, but it has restored me to perfect health and strength. The buoyancy of my younger days has returned, and I do not suffer any longer with despondency, as I did before. I consider Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a boon to sick and suffering women."

If you have some derangement of the female organism write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for advice.

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY
REVIEW OF REVIEWS

The more Magazines there are, the more Indispensable is The Review of Reviews

"Indispensable." "The one magazine I feel I must take." "The world under a field-glass." "An education in public affairs and current literature,"—these are some of the phrases one hears from noted people who read the Review of Reviews. The more magazines there are, the more necessary is the Review of Reviews, because it brings together the best that is in all the most important monthlies of the world. Such is the flood of periodical literature that nowadays people say that the only way to keep up with it is to read the Review of Reviews. Entirely over and above this reviewing section, it has more original matter and illustrations than most magazines, and the most timely and important articles printed in any monthly.

Probably the most useful section of all is Dr. Albert Shaw's illustrated "Progress of the World," where public events and issues are authoritatively and lucidly explained in every issue. Many a subscriber writes, "This department alone is worth more than the price of the magazine." The unique cartoon department, depicting current history in caricature, is another favorite. The Review of Reviews covers five continents, and yet is American, first and foremost.

Men in public life, the members of Congress, professional men, and the great captains of industry who must keep "up with the times," intelligent men and women all over America, have decided that it is "indispensable."

NOTICE.

There will be another pilgrim sent out by the Watchtower Tract Society to preach at the meeting place, three miles east of Randolph on Jemison road, near Simeon Waldrup's old place, on the 25th and 26th of July. We cordially invite all Christian and skeptic thinkers that desire to learn more about God's Word and ways and plans, what God has been doing, what He is doing now and what He will do in the thousand years of Christ's reign. We are hoping and praying and watching for that kingdom to come wherein free grace will not be limited to a few but to all the world. We expect the thief's prayer to be answered shortly, when the Lord comes in His kingdom, that is when he asked Him to remember him. Do you want to learn on those lines? If so come and hear the pilgrim; house and seats free, and we will will take care of you as best we can.

Forced to Starve.

B. F. Leek, of Concord, Ky., says: "For twenty years I suffered agonies, with a sore on my upper lip, so painful, sometimes that I could not eat. After vainly trying everything else, I cured it with Bucklen's Arnica Salve." It's great for burns, cuts and wounds. At Upchurch Drug co. Only 25c

Kneeling Horses.

In ancient times, before the invention of stirrups and luxurious saddles, horses were taught to kneel to permit their riders to mount. A beautiful Greek vase in one of the museums in St. Petersburg shows a war horse of many centuries ago kneeling low before an amazon. The riders in those days mounted from the "off" side in contradiction to the modern usage. Plutarch tells how in the first century of this era certain effeminate Roman riders found even the horse block of too little assistance and had their horses trained to kneel to them.

Thinking and Doing.

I have been a great deal happier since I have given up thinking about what is easy and pleasant and being discontented because I could not have my own way. Our life is determined for us, and it makes the mind very free when we give up wishing and only think of bearing what is laid upon us and doing what is given us to do.—George Eliot.

A Witty Diagnosis.

The object of the duel is said to be the healing of wounded honor. To try to cure a wound of the spirit, or, rather, the temper, by a scratch on the skin savors of homeopathy, but may perhaps be justified by the surgical principle of relieving tension by incision.—British Medical Journal.

Homemaking.

Men do not make their homes unhappy because they have genius, but because they have not enough genius. A mind and sentiments of a higher order would render them capable of seeing and feeling all the beauty of domestic ties.—Wordsworth.

Unimportant Man.

Many a man goes away from home for a week and imagines that he is missed by the whole community, and when he comes home he finds that there isn't a person in town that knew he had been away.

So work the honeybees, creatures that by a rule in nature teach the act of order to a peopled kingdom.—Shakespeare.

His Compliment.

First Artist—Well, old man, how is business? Second Artist—Oh, splendid! Got a commission this morning from a millionaire. Wants his wife and children painted very badly. First Artist—Well, old man, you're the very man to do that for him.

This Girl Knew.

One of the infielders had made an error.

The rosy cheeked girl in the grand stand turned to the young man at her side.

"George," she said.

George instinctively braced himself to meet the question he foresaw as to what had happened and what all the fuss was about.

"Well," he said.

"Why don't they put a wooden Indian cigar sign on third in place of that moon faced duffer with the split cipher running gear and the glass arm? That fellow couldn't stop a toy balloon if it was lobbed right into his flippers."—Chicago Tribune.

Pearls Found in Cocoanuts.

"Pearls are not found in oysters alone. Sometimes," said a lapidary, "they are found in cocoanuts. I once cut a cocoanut pearl. It was the size of a pea, and its quality was good. It resembled an oyster pearl, only it was a little duller. Cocoanut pearls are found in the heart of the nut. It is thought that they are formed by the hardening of the nut's flesh. They are, so to speak, a kind of crystallized tumor or wart. These pearls are rare. They are rarer than oyster pearls. They are also cheaper than oyster pearls, being less hard and less transparent."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

The Bells of Davos.

The first thing that strikes the stranger in Davos, Switzerland, and strikes him unpleasantly is the bells. Not only does every cow, goat and sheep wear its bell, but when they are all shut up for the winter and we hope for a little rest then comes the infernal, eternal din from every cart, carriage, sleigh, omnibus and all other kinds of vehicle which ply for hire or otherwise. No doubt they become a necessity on the silent highways as winter progresses, but that does not render them one bit more palatable.

Irrigation Is Ancient.

The practice of irrigation is very ancient, water having been stored and distributed in this way in Egypt as early as 2000 B. C. Persia, India, Ceylon, China, as well as Peru and Mexico, also had irrigation works ages ago. Even in Arizona remains of ancient irrigation works can be found, which suggest that that section of the desert may have been compelled by men to "blossom as the rose" many hundreds of years ago.

May Change Her Mind.

Little Ethel (laying down a book)—Do princes always dress in silk and velvet and wear a cap with a white feather and ride a sweet little white pony? Mother—Not now, my pet. They dress just like other boys. Little Ethel (sadly)—Then I don't think I'll ever marry.

Preaching and Practice.

Jinks—I'm ever so much obliged for this favor, and if I ever have a chance I'll do as much— Hello, here comes Bilkins! Let's dodge into an alleyway. Binks—Don't you like Bilkins? Jinks—He did me a favor once, and the fellow may want me to return it.

His Model.

Baron—Then the obstreperous beggar whom you turned out of doors was coarse and abusive. Valet—Abusive, my lord! He might have been your lordship himself!

Fame is the perfume of heroic deeds. —Socrates.

Weak Hearts

Are due to indigestion. Ninety-nine of every one hundred people who have heart trouble can remember when it was simple indigestion. It is a scientific fact that all cases of heart disease, not organic, are not only traceable to, but are the direct result of indigestion. All food taken into the stomach which fails of perfect digestion ferments and swells the stomach, puffing it up against the heart. This interferes with the action of the heart, and in the course of time that delicate but vital organ becomes diseased.

Mr. D. Kauble, of Nevada, O., says: I had stomach trouble and was in a bad state as I had heart trouble with it. I took Kodol Dyspepsia Cure for about four months and it cured me.

Kodol Digests What You Eat and relieves the stomach of all nervous strain and the heart of all pressure.

Clanton, July 24, 1905

Editor Banner—We attended a grand barbecue and picnic at Camp Falkner, near Mountain Creek at the old Soldiers' Home, Saturday, the 22d. We took in all the facilities of the Home by 10 o'clock. At 10 o'clock the drums and fifes ceased and the audience was called to order by the gallant Commander A J. Brooks. Governor Johnston delivered an excellent address to we old Vets. Then two gentlemen delivered addresses. All three were good and were loudly cheered by the old Veterans and the ladies also. Then next came music up in the hall, the drums and fifes commenced and continued until the Commander ordered them to stop so that he could be heard to announce for dinner. Then next comes Camp Hardee and Pelham Chapter of Birmingham, and all marched down to the grove to spread dinner on the table, accompanied by Camp Falkner and the mothers and daughters of the Confederacy of Montgomery. The table was then loaded with everything that was good and was graced with an able prayer. Then we had orders to help ourselves, and we sure did enjoy the dinner, it was fine, and oh, such good behavior too, the Commander and wife won't have anything but good behavior. Next came the watermelons, at 2 o'clock 150 or 200 fine melons were cut. Oh, no one but an old Veterans can fully appreciate the kindness shown we old soldiers. No large I's nor small U's, all alike. Even the old black veteran was not neglected, he had on his old canteen, haversack and uniform, he is 88 years old and says his name is Prince Douglas.

Old Veteran and wife,
L. A. and S. A. SCOTT.

REPLY TO OLD FOGEY.

Editor Banner—I have just read a piece in the Banner signed "Old Fogey." I think it was correctly signed. There is so much absurdity in it that I really wondered if the writer intended it for irony. But we will treat it as if the writer meant it in earnest, and if he did not he will forgive us for our mistake. The first expression we will notice is where he says, "Will a nice painted school house educate children standing locked up?" The complaint here is that the school is not run for a long enough period during the year. But just below he refers to the "Backwoods of Coosa" where he says the children do not go to school much more than half as much as our children," and he says he can find students there who can teach any students in District 32 a year. If I understand this expression it is an argument for schools of less length. I do not know where District 32 is, but I would like to say to Mr. Old Fogey just get up your students from the "Backwoods of Coosa" and I will hunt up District 32 and get some of the representative students there, and if his students can do what he says they can do, then the cake is his.

He tells us that schools are not as good now as they were 25 years ago according to the time taught. I was going to my first schools then. As to whether they were good or not I was not caring much then, I would rather have been out romping over the fields and woods. But how do we know our schools are not as good now as they were then? How do we know they are not better now than they were 25 years ago? Mr. Fogey says they are not as good, but does not give any proof I have as much right to say our schools now are better. The next expression is "The way they run the schools now they are of very little benefit to the poor children." Let us see about that. It may be that Mr. Fogey does not properly appreciate the "benefit" there is in a schooling. What do our children get from schools the way they are run now? One of the finest things they get is a knowledge to read. They learn to read the First Reader. Really Mr. Fogey is there not a good deal of benefit that may be derived from that? And then they learn to read in the Second and Third and Fourth Readers. And I know that this is true for I have sold hundreds of these books to them. Would we say that this is only a "Little benefit." Is it only a little benefit to be able to read the books and newspapers of our country? Is is only a "Little benefit" to be able to read the Bible? And I know too they are learning something about arithmetic, grammar, geography and history besides their reading.

I have made this reply because I do not like to see a gloomy view taken of our educational status. I do not like to hear people run down their home and praise some other places Let us look for the good and we will find it.

Verbena, July 23. 1905

Editor Banner—Please allow me space in your paper to say a few words in reply to Old Fogey. I endorse what he says in regard to schools twenty five years ago. I know that children learned more in the same length of time than they do now. Then a man had to work to get the money; now the average is what he looks for. I have got, and am getting now, better results from a two months private school than I have got from a five months public school. We need some of F. A. G.'s old backwoods teachers over here. Now, I would like to read some more good letters to the boys and girls as we had some time ago for I have one boy and one little girl who read the Banner and love those good letters. I wish they could read more of them than they do for my aim is by the help of God and the good advice of good people to raise them right.

I will say to the girls let the boy that drinks whiskey, plays cards or totes a pistol, or uses profane language alone until he reforms from such, as he has caused your sex more trouble than I can speak of. Young men, be nice and obey your mothers for none of them will tell you to do the things that are wrong. Leave of those things if you are guilty.

Mulberry.

Will you kindly allow me space in your paper to write about our base ball picnic we had Thursday. The Black and Tan boys, sore from one defeat, came over early saying they were going to even up matters by winning from us. There were two games played, the Mulberry boys winning both by the scores of 17 to 5 and 14 to 7. Batteries in the morning game for Mulberry, Williams and Hayes; Black and Tans, Henley and Cooper; struck out by Mulberry 12; by Black and Tans 6. Batteries afternoon game for Mulberry: Williams, Simpson, Hayes and Bruce; B. and T. Henley, Robinson and Cooper; struck out by Mulberry 16, by B. and T. 12. The only feature of the game was a home run by Williams of the Mulberry team, We all heartily thank the ladies of the Mulberry district for a most excellent dinner; everybody had enough to eat (chicken pie included) and all report a good time. A PLAYER.

Maplesville.

Among the visitors here the past week are: Miss Della Blalack of Thorsby; Mr. Shep Bearden and wise, Mr. Will Garner, wife and children, Miss Stacy Goodwin, all of Selma; Mr. Robert Walker of Oklahoma; Dr. James A. DuBose and wife of Anniston; Mrs. Brown of Birmingham, who was dispatched for owing to the serious illness of her daughter, Mrs. C. W. Plant.

The visitors to the ninth annual convention of the Chilton County Sunday School Association, which was held here Saturday and Sunday, are too numerous to mention, since the church was literally packed. A bountiful feast was spread both days. All seemed to enjoy being there and meeting old friends and "Throwing dull care to the winds" for the time being. We were all so glad to see our intellectual friend, Mr. T. U. Crumpton, out and able to take an active part in the convention. We also felt very proud of our able superintendent, Mr. G. W Fox, Mr. Tidwell and Mr. J. W. Mitchell, Bible class teachers, who assisted in making the convention the great success which it was. We wish for many more such revivals of this great work which is leading so many children to Christ and pray that God will help and sustain the good men and women who make such an effort to meet at distant points to carry on this work.

RUNAWAY AT CLANTON.

Tuesday morning while Messrs. Douglas Harper of Clanton and — Lewis of Mountain Creek were driving around town, the horse got seared near the Methodist church and ran away, striking a tree at the Central Hotel, turning the buggy over on both the occupants, bruising Harper about the head and face and dislocating Lewis' shoulder and breaking his collar bone. The horse then ran full speed against a box car, and was killed instantly. Mr. J. R. Popwell, the owner of the team, estimates his loss at about $175.

Young Girl Kills Herself.

New Orleans, La.—Because her sight, hearing and speech had been destroyed by a strange affliction under which she suffered, Miss Lilly Goldberg, of Jeanette, La., suicided Saturday at her temporary home in this city by drinking carbolic acid.

Miss Goldberg was a beautiful girl 16 years of age, and had been brought here by her parents for medical treatment, but the efforts of the physicians were attended with but scant success. In despair the girl took the fatal dose.

Vessels Will Be Watched.

Norfolk, Va.—Yellow fever having been discovered at New Orleans, the United States marine hospital service will keep a very rigid watch on all vessels arriving in Hampton Roads from that port. Craft from New Orleans will be held in quarantine the usual five days.

Jerry Simpson Very Low.

Roswell, N. M.—Hon. Jerry Simpson, former congressman and nationally famed as "Sockless Jerry" of Kansas, is seriously ill at his home here, having ruptured one of the blood vessels of his heart. Death may result at any moment.

Big Saw Mill Fire.

New Orleans, La.—J. G. Powell's saw mill, situated on the river front at Lake Charles, together with all the machinery, the planer and part of the lumber, was burned Friday afternoon. Loss estimated at $90,000; insurance light.

Kelly Still Defiant.

Topeka, Kas.—State Treasurer T. T. Kelly today refused formally the demand of Governor Hoch to give a new bond for $750,000 to cover that impaired by the failure of C. J. Devlin, one of Kelly's principal bandsmen, and the governor announced that he would declare the office of state treasurer vacant because of Kelly's refusal.

Southern Pacific Train Wrecked.

San Antonio, Tex.—The westbound Southern Pacific passenger train which left San Antonio Friday morning was wrecked at Dryden, twenty-one miles east of Sanderson. The engineer was killed and the fireman is probably fatally injured. The engine and two cars were thrown into the ditch. No passengers were hurt, it is reported.

Killed by Lightning.

Talladega, Ala.—An 18-year-old negro girl by the name of Bertha McElderry was killed by lightning at McElderry's Station. The girl had started to take an umbrella to her sister, who had got caught in a shower while on her way to the station, and when a few yards from the house was struck by lightning, which killed her instantly.

Engineers Surveying Railway.

Florence, Ala.—A corps of railway civil engineers is surveying from Dickson, Tenn., to Florence, but for what road is not known. The line surveyed commences at Dickson and passes throught Wayne county, along Buffalo and Green rivers, on to the head of Big Cypress, which stream it parallels to within three miles of Cloverdale, thence direct to Florence.

Salvation Army Girl Sentenced.

Chicago, Ill.—Inga Hanson, the former Salvation Army girl, convicted of perjury in connection with a suit for personal damages against the Chicago city railway, will have to go to the penitentiary to serve an indefinite term, according to a decision given Friday by Judge George H. Kernsten. The decision denied a motion to vacate sentence in the case.

Mustered Out.

Jackson, Tenn.—The McMillin Rifles were formally mustered out Saturday night and the new military company mustered in by Dr. George Hamilton, assistant surgeon of the Second Tennessee. R. A. Wells was elected captain, Dave Stovall first lieutenant and Horace Blankinship second lieutenant. Fifty men were enlisted.

Young Marksman.

Martin, Tenn.—The Gun Club of Martin has some splendid shots, but we doubt if any club in the state has a younger or smaller member than Maurice Baker, son of W. G. Baker. He is only 12 years of age and handles a gun like a veteran. In a trial shoot yesterday he broke 46 clay pigeons out of 50.

Negro Assassin Killed by Posse.

Sumner, Miss.—Frank Allen and J. Barksdale were shot by two negroes, Will and Henry Harris, brothers, on the plantation of Tom G. James at Sharkey, about fifteen miles from here Wednesday. Allen is seriously wounded and may die. Barksdale is slightly wounded. The shooting was done with a shot gun, the negroes firing from ambush.

STATE HAPPENINGS

Of General and Local Interest as They Occur.

Freight Trains Collide.

Anniston, Ala.—Thursday morning at 11 o'clock freight trains north and south-bound collided on the tracks of the Southern railway in front of the union depot, and the caboose of the south-bound train was derailed and badly damaged. The exact cause of the wreck could not be ascertained, but it was thought to be due to either defective trucks on the south-bound freight or to a misplaced switch. As the accident was foreseen no one was materially injured. The hind trucks of the derailed caboose were torn from the car, and the side of the caboose striking the engine was badly smashed.

A Big Barn Burns.

Center, Ala.—The large barn at the residence of Dr. S. C. Tatum, in Center, was destroyed by fire Wednesday night, together with enormous quantities of hay and corn and a number of horses and cattle confined in the building. The loss will amount to more than $3,000, with insurance of about $1,200.

Will Keep Trophy.

Montgomery, Ala.—By winning the Clark trophy Thursday afternoon, the First infantry rifle squad becomes its owner. No shooting was done for the Ligon and other individual medals. The following was the score made:

First infantry squad, 200 yards, 214 out of possible 300.

Five hundred yards, 125 out of possible 200.

Second infantry, 200 yards, 113 out of possible 300.

Five hundred yards, 29 out of possible 300.

Big Coal Company Organized.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—Another corporation which will add very materially to Tuscaloosa's progressive march is a mammoth coal development company which has just been formed. There is more than three thousand acres of coal land in the tract, and when the mines are opened it will mean a very much better price of coal in this section. The class of coal there is very similar to that mined at Brookwood. It is said that nearly all of the stock is owned by Tuscaloosa people. A. S. Vandegraff and J. W. Miller are at the head of the company.

A New Inventor.

Eufaula, Ala.—Henry Perzons, of this city, is proving to be quite a genius and has on file an application for a patent that promises to prove useful and convenient. His invention consists of a covering for steam lauaches. Birmingham, Ala.—William Early, check weighman at the Coalburg coal mines, ten miles from the city, shot and fatally injured his wife about 2 o'clock Saturday morning, mistaking her for a burglar. Early is wild with grief over his awful mistake. It seems that his wife got up to get some hot water for the baby. The kitchen is out on a rear porch of the home. Early did not hear his wife get up, but when she re-entered the door slammed a little. This awoke Mr. Early, who secured his pistol quickly and fired on the approaching figure. The minute the bullet pierced the body of the woman she cried out, "My God, you haave shot me."

The husband instantly saw his mistake and hurriedly picked her up and placed her tenderly on a bed. Neighbors were summoned and physicians did everything in their power until the injured woman could be brought to the St. Vincent's Hospital. She will hardly recover.

Sawyer, special southern representative of the New York Commercial, stated to the people who have taken up the matter that there will be no trouble in disposing of bonds for the new concern and that within a few months a first-class electric car line can be in course of construction.

Land Office Closed Too Soon.

Montgomery, Ala.—It now develops that the United States land office at Huntsville was closed prematurely, and the peculiar feature about it is the received of the land office, H. V. Cashin, the negro in charge, is primarily responsible for it. It was a case where a man cut his own official head off and unwittingly deprived himself of at least one year's salary. A republican official tells the story. "The closing of the Huntsville land office," said the official, "was due ntirely to a clerical error in the office, of which, of course, the head of the office was responsible. It was due to a mistake in figures giving the number of acres of land in the territory of the land office and under the jurisdiction of the land office in question. But for this mistake the Huntsville land office could at leest have been continued in existence a year longer, if not indefinitely

"Under the rules of the land office at Washington," continued the official, "every land office must have within its jurisdiction 100,000 acres of public land. When the Huntsville office was asked for the number of acres the official accepted as correct the totals handed down to him by his predecessor and abstracted the land that had been sold since he came into office, and as a result he made a most unfortunte mistake for himself. He reported to the government that he had only 85,000 acres, whereas a recent investigation by the land office in this city revealed that the Huntsville office at the time it went out of business had over 150,000 acres within its jurisdiction.

"Capt. Robert Barber, register of the montgomery land office, never takes anything for granted," said the official, "and when he was called on by the Washington office for a statement of public lands within the jurisdiction of his office he and his clerk went back over the books, made a map of all the government lands and marked each section off that had been sold. In this way a correct footing was made, and the result was that over 50,000 acres of land were found yet in possession of the government more than the Huntsville office had given the government credit for."

JONES' BODY IS HERE

Arrived in Annapolis Saturday Witnesses Lined the Shore.

EVERYTHING IS IN READINESS.

Body Will Be Placed in Temporary Vault Until New Naval Academy Chapel Is Completed.

Norfolk, Va.—In the early light of a midsummer morning the body of John Paul Jones was brought back Saturday through the Virginia capes to the land of his adoption. Cottagers at Cape Henry, Ocean View and Willoughby Spit lined the shores to witness the pomp of the admiral's return. The sight as the ships passed in line was one of grandeur and beauty.

Across the bow of the cruiser Brooklyn as she passed Ocean View sailed a schooner. The onlookers appeared pathetically small in contrast to the magnificent flagship, and yet this stray schooner was almost as large as the Bonhomme Richard, aboard which John Paul Jones stood with the broadsides of the Serapis pouring in upon her, many of his men wounded and dying, until the captain of the Sarapis stopped the fighting for a moment to ask him if he was ready to surrender, when he gave his historic answer. "We have not yet begun to fight."

Came Under Threatening Sky.

Under a threatening sky three divisions of the North Atlantic fleet, headed by the battleship Maine, flagship of the commander-in-chief, Rear Admiral Evans, bore down the capes, and at 7:20 the long line of battleships forming the escore to the body of John Paul Jones, on board the Brooklyn, passed the capes.

The first division of the battleship squadron separated from the second division of the squadron and the third division, under command of Rear Admiral Sigsbee, after the entrance to the capes was reached.

The Maine did not lead the long line of battleships and cruisers up the bay, but instead Captain Niles, commanding Rear Admiral Evans' flagship, headed his ship for Hampton Roads. The battleships Kearsarge, Kentucky and Missouri followed the Maine in the roads.

The second division of the battleship squadron, commanded by Rear Admiral Davis, continued in a northward course up the bay, headed by the flagship Alabama. The battleships Illinois, Iowa and Massachusetts followed the flagship in regular formation. The Brooklyn, flying the flag of Rear Admiral Sigsbee, followed the second division of the battleship squadron in the capes and up the bay, the protected cruisers Chattanooga, Galveston and Tacoma coming after.

Could Not Enter River.

When the Brooklyn came off the capes orders from the navy department instructing the commanding officer not to enter the Severn river were transmitted to the ship by wireless telegraph. The Brooklyn will accordingly not venture closer to Annapolis than the mouth of the Severn. The orders were issued as a precautionary measure to prevent the grounding of the cruiser.

In accordance with these orders the body of the American hero, now nearing its last resting place, will have to be transferred to Annapolis on a launch. The battleships accompanying the funeral cruiser will anchor about two miles from the academy reservation. The two fleets met Friday morning twenty-five miles from the capes. During the journey down the coast Admiral Sigsbee and Admiral Evans held constant conversation by wireless telegraphy. When Admiral Evans' battleship left Admiral Sigsbee's fleet Saturday the Kearsarge Maine, Kentucky and Missouri each fired a salute of fifteen guns. The Brooklyn responded.

Admiral Davis, in charge of the cruiser division, will accompany Admiral Sigsbee to Annapolis. Admiral Evans will remain with his fleet in Hampton Roads till Tuesday, when his ships will go to New York.

All Details Arranged.

Annapolis, Md.All details of the transfer of the body of Admiral John Paul Jones from the United States cruiser Brooklyn to the navay academy have been arranged. The ceremonies are to be simple, the "pomp and circumstance" being reserved for the time of the removal of the body from the temporary vault, into which it will be placed on Monday, to its permanent resting place, the crypt of the splendid new naval academy chapel. This will likely be a year hence.

The ships of Admiral Sigsbee and squadron anchored for the night fifteen miles below Annapolis. Sunday morning they took up their position just outside Annapolis harbor. At 10 Monday the body will be conveyed to a point in the north sea wall of the academy grounds by the naval tug Standish, and as the cortege moves from the landing place fifteen minute guns will be fired by the academy battery. Rear Admiral Charles H. Davis commanding the second division of the North Atlantic squadron; Capt. R. F. Tilley, commanding the battleship Iowa; Capt. E. D. Taussig, commanding the battleship Massachusetts; Capt. W. H. Reed, commanding the battleship Alabama, and Capt. E. E. Gervais, commanding the French cruiser Jurien De La Graviere.

The escort will consist of four battalions of sailors from the American fleet, a battalion of sailors and marines from the academy and a detachment of fifty sailors from the Jurien De La Graviere. All the midshipmen now at the academy, consisting of the battalion, 200 strong, formed of the newly admitted members of the fourth class, will be paraded without arms. The body will then be deposited in the temporary vault. There will be no service, and the whole affair is expected to be over in a quarter of an hour.

THE HUSHED HOUSE.

went at nightfall,
Came again at dawn;
Love's door again I knocked—
Love was gone.

should had bade me to
would bid no more;
within his house,

When the door opened wide
Through it I could see the emptiness within stared at me.

Through the dreary chambers
Long I sought and sighed;
no answering footstep came;
replied.

Then at last I entered
Dim a darkened room;
There a taper glimmered gray
In the gloom.

And I saw one lying
Crowned with hellebore;
Never saw I face so fair
As was his.

Like a wintry lily
Was his brow in hue:
And his cheeks were each a rose,
Wintry, too.

Then my soul remembered
All that made us part,
And what I had laughed at once
Broke my heart.

AN ACCIDENT AND ITS SEQUEL.

By KATE RATHMORE.

I REMEMBER it as well as if it were yesterday. The carriage stood at the door, and I was to go back to school for the spring term.

My mother gave innumerable instructions, smoothed my collar and adjusted my cap on my head and, then gave me a kiss and looking wistfully at me as I went down the walk and got into the carriage.

A month or two later—it was in June, I think—after a hard struggle one afternoon with some figures, all about a ship and a cargo and the profit and that, I went out to join the other boys.

When I reached the playground they had gone, and there was nothing for me to do but amuse myself as best I could.

I strolled about the house with my hands in my pockets—which my mother had told me distinctly not to do—then suddenly remembering her instructions, took them out again; then, for want of better amusement, I began to whistle.

Next to the school there was a pretty cottage separated from the schoolhouse by a board fence. The two houses were not a hundrer feet tpart. I could look right through under the trees, and there on the tennis ground stood a girl a trifle younger than myself, looking straight at me.

Now, when a boy suddenly finds himself observed by a girl, he feels somewhat queer. I remember that very well. My hands went right into my pockets, but remembering that that was not the correct thing to do in the presence of a girl, I took them directly out again.

Then I concluded that it would be a good way to show how little I was embarrassed by turning around upon my heel, a movement on which I greatly prided myself. After that, I don't remember—it was so long ago—what new capers I cut. But one thing I am very certain. I was soon hunting for something I pretended to have lost in the grass beside the fence.

"If it's your knife you've lost," I heard a musical voice say, "it isn't there. I picked up a knife there a week ago, but it was all rusty and no good."

"Oh, never mind," I said, looking up into two eyes peeping out from a sunbonnet; "it wasn't much of a knife, and I've got another."

"Are you one of the boys at the school?"

"Yes."

"What class are you in?"

"The fourth."

"Do you study geography?"

"Yes."

"What's the capital of Austria?"

I scratched my head.

"I don't remember that," I admitted, hesitatingly. "I'm first rate on capitals, but I can't recollect that one."

"Why didn't you go off with the boys?"

"I was behind with my sums. I suppose they've gone to the river. I like the woods pretty well; they're full of squirrels."

"And lizards," she added. "I'm not afraid of lizards. I suppose you're going to go there."

"No, I'm not."

"I want to go there now, and mamma said I don't mind going with you just to keep off the lizards and things."

She looked wistfully out at the wood. I can see her now leaning on her racket, deliberating—if such a process can be called deliberation where the conclusion was determined—the slight little figure poised between the racket and one foot, one little leg crossed on the other—peering out at the forest.

Suddenly, without any warning, she dropped the racket and started for the wood.

We were not long in crossing the field and were walking in the dense shade when she stopped, and looking at me with her expressive eyes, said:

"How still it is in here! It seems as if one can almost hear the silence."

"Yes, it is pretty solemn," I replied. "Let's go on; the river winds about just there, and we can see the water over the dam."

I heard a distant voice calling "Julia." It was very faint; she did not hear it. I stood a moment hesitating.

"Come, let's go," I said, starting forward.

"Julia," I heard again, more faintly than before.

I hurried on, fearing she would hear the voice and turn back.

Presently we emerged from the wood and stood by the river. I was familiar with the ground, and led my little companion directly to the dam.

"Most of the boys are afraid to walk out on that dam," I said.

"I'd be afraid."

"Oh, you're only a girl; a boy oughtn't to be afraid." With that I started boldly out, occasionally standing on one foot, and performing sundry antics to show what a brave boy I was. Then I retraced a few steps and called to her to come.

"Oh, no," she said; "I'm afraid."

"Afraid! You little goose! With me to hold on to?"

Between her fear and a disposition pliable to a boy older and stronger than herself, it was not long before I was leading her out on the dam.

"Don't you see it's quite safe?" I said.

She shrank back as I led along. I determined that she should go to a point where the water poured over a portion of the dam lower than the rest. I turned my back to step up on the post. It was but a moment. I heard a cry, and saw Julia in the flood. The expression that was in her eyes is to this day stamped clearly on my memory—an expression of mingled reproach and forgiveness.

I could scarcely swin a dozen strokes, but not a second had elapsed before I was in the water.

I swam and struggled and buffeted to reach her; all in vain. An eddy whirled me in a different direction. My strength was soon exhausted. I was borne down the river, sinking and rising, till I came to a place where I caught a glimpse, as I rose to the surface, of a man running along some planks extending into the river, and raised above the water on posts. My feet became entangled in weeds. I sank. I heard a great roaring in my ears, then oblivion.

When I came to I was lying on my back. I remember the first thing I saw was a light cloud sailing over the clear blue. There was an air of quiet and peace that contrasted with my own sensations. Then I saw a man on his knees beside something he was rubbing. I turned my head aside and say it was a little figure—a girl, Julia. She was cold and stark.

My agony was far greater than when I had plunged after her into the stream. Then I hoped and believed that if she were drowned I would be also. Now I saw her beside me lifeless, and I lived.

Then some men came, and the man who was rubbing Julia said to them: "Take care of the boy; the girl is too far gone." They took me up and carried me away, and laid me for a while on a bed in a strange house. Then I was driven to the school.

The next day my father came and took me home. I was ill after that, too ill to ask about Julia, but when I recovered what a load was taken from my mind to know that by dint of rubbing and rolling, and a stimulant, she had been brought to and had recovered. I also learned that the man who cared for us had seen Julia fall and had rescued her. When I saw him running along the planks it was to his boat chained to the end.

That summer my father removed with his family to Western Pennsylvania. He was obliged to wait some time for my recovery, but at last I was able to travel, and left without again seeing the little girl whom I had led into danger. I only heard that I had been blamed by everyone.

• • • • • • • •

Ten years passed, during which I was constantly haunted by one idea; that was to go back and find Julia and implore her forgiveness. The years that I must be a boy and dependent seemed interminable. At last I came of age, and received a small fortune that had fallen to me, and, as soon as the papers in the case were duly signed and sealed, I started.

It was just about the same time of the year, and the same hour of the afternoon as when I first saw Julia, that I walked into the old school grounds. I had fully intended to go in next door and call for her, but my courage failed me. I had heard nothing of her for years. Was she dead? Was she living? Was she in her old home, or far away? These thoughts chased each other through my mind, and I dreaded to know.

I was standing at the school entrance, with my hand on the bell, when I heard a door in the next house open and then shut. From that moment I could feel that Julia was near me.

She came out of the house, a slender, graceful girl of nineteen, and, picking up a tennis racket, commenced to knock the balls about. I wanted to make myself known, but dreaded the horror with which she would regard me when she should learn who I was.

"I beg your pardon," I said, raising my hat, "can you tell me if the school is still there?" pointing to the house.

"It was moved some years ago," she replied, regarding me with the old, steady gaze.

"I was one of the scholars."

"Indeed!" She spoke without any further encouragement for me to go on.

"I see the wood has been cut away," I added, glancing toward it.

"No; it does not seem to be."

"Were you ever there?"

"Oh, yes, often."

"And is that old dam still across the river?"

"I believe it is."

She looked at me curiously. I went on without waiting for a reply:

"Would you mind showing me the way to it?" It is a long while since I was there."

She drew herself up with slight hauteur. Then, thinking that perhaps I was unaccustomed to the conventional ways of civilized life, she said, pleasantly:

"You have only to walk through the wood straight, at the back of the house and you will come to it."

"Thank you," I replied; "but I hoped you would show me the way."

She looked puzzled.

"Miss Julia," I said, altering my tone, "I once met you when I was a boy here at school."

"I knew a number of scholars," she said, more interested; "who are you?"

I dreaded to tell her. "If you will pilot me to the dam," I said, "I will inform you."

She thought a moment, then turned and looked out at the wood. With the quick motion with which she had made the same move as a child, she started forward.

We walked side by side to the wood, through it out on the river bank. There was the water and the dam; everything as it had been ten years before.

"Did you ever try to walk out there?" I asked.

"Once, when I was a child, I came here with a boy, and we walked to where the water pours over. I met with an accident. I fell in."

"The boy overpersuaded you, I suppose?"

It was difficult for me to conceal a certain trepidation at the mention of my fault.

"No, I went of my own accord."

"He certainly must have been to blame. He was older and stronger than you."

"On the contrary," she said, with a slight, rising irritation, "he jumped after me like the noble little fellow that he was."

I turned away on pretense of examining a boat down the river.

"At any rate, he must have begged your forgiveness on his knees for permitting you to go into such a danger?"

"I never saw him again. He went away."

I fancied—at least, I hoped— I could detect a tinge of sadness in her voice.

"I have often wished," she went on, "that he would come back, as the other scholars sometimes do, as you are now, and let me tell him how much I thank him for his noble effort."

"Julia," I said, suddenly turning and facing her. "This is too much. I am that boy. I led you into the wood. I forced you to go out in the dam with me. I permitted you to fall in."

"And more than atoned for all by risking your life to save me!"

Ah, that look of surprised delight which accompanied her words! It was worth all my past years of suffering, of fancied blame; for in it I read how dearly she held the memory of the boy who had at least shared the danger for which he was responsible.

I do not remember if she grasped my hand or I grasped hers. At any rate, we stood hand in hand, looking into each other's faces.

I blessed the Providence that ended my punishment; I blessed the good fortune that had led me to a knowledge of the kindly heart beside me.

Of all the moments of my life, I still count it far the happiest.

Then we walked back through the woods, over the intervening field, and stood together leaning against the fence between the old school and her home.

• • • • • • • •

We did not part after that for another ten years, which she spent as my beloved wife. Then she left me to go whence I can never recall her.

Yet there is a trysting place in the woods, through which we once passed as children, and often afterward as lovers.

There I watch the flecked sunlight, and mark the quietness, and it seems to me that I can "hear the silence."

More than that, I know the pure soul looks at me through her honest eyes.—New York Weekly.

A Detective Fox Terrier.

The story of the dog which recently caused the discovery of a tragedy at Brigend by barking outside the house in which it was committed recalls a sensational incident that took place in Grand Canary a few years ago. A young American was murdered for his money in one of the Spanish inns near the harbor, and his fox terrier was carried off to a plantation in the hills by one of his accomplices. Two years later the dog was brought back again to the town, and it immediately went to a certain spot in the road, tried to scratch a hole in it, and howled so piteously that it attracted the attention even of the Spanish policeman. This led to the discovery of its master's body and the final conviction of his murderer.—London Chronicle.

A Poor Chicken.

A well-known professor has a bright little boy, who one day appeared in his father's study, clasping a forlorn little chicken. "Willie," said the father, "take that chicken back to its mother." "Ain't dot any modder," answered Willie. "Well, then, take it back to its father," said the professor, determined to maintain parental authority. "Ain't dot any fader," said the child. "Ain't dot anything but an old lamp."—New York Times.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR JULY 30.

Subject: Manasseh's Sin and Repentance, II. Chron. xxxiii., 1-13—Golden Text, Prov. xiv., 34—Memory Verses, 10-13—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

I. Manasseh's excessive idolatries (vs. 1-9). 1. "Manasseh." The thirteenth King of Judah (not counting Athaliah, the usurper), son of Hezekiah and Hephzibah, who was traditionally the daughter of Isaiah. "Twelve years old." He was born three years after Hezekiah was miraculously restored to health. He reigned longer than any other King of Judah or Israel. 2. "Did—evil." He followed all the abominable practices of the nations of Canaan, but his sin was greater than theirs because he had light and knew about the true God. 3. "Baalim." The plural form for Baal. "Made grooves." "Made Asheroth." R. V. Asheroth is one of the plural forms of Ashrah, a heathen goddess. Baal was a male and Asherah a female divinity. An Asherah was probably a wooden pole which was planted beside an altar as a symbol of a deity. "Host of heaven." The sun, moon and stars. 4. "Altars in the house." He placed tne heathen altars even in the temple. "Shall my name be." See chapter 7: 16.

5. "In the two courts." Professor Lumby thinks this verse explains the preceding verse, and that the idolatrous altars were erected in the courts of the temple and not in the holy place. 6. "Through the fire." There is reason to believe that in certain circumstances the children offered to Moloch were actually burnt to death or were first slain and then burnt. See Psa. 106: 38; Jer. 7: 31; 2 Kings 17: 31. "Valley—of Hinnom." This was a ravine on the south and west of Jerusalem, the southeast extremity of which had the name of Tophet. "Observed times." See R. V. "Practiced divination by the clouds." "Enchantments." He used incantations and charms. "Familiar spirit." See 1 Sam. 28: 8. He had in his service those who pretended to raise the spirits. "Wizards." Wise or knowing ones who claimed to reveal secrets. Many of these impostors came from Chaldea to pursue their occupations and practice their deceptions, and Manasseh was their liberal patron. "Much evil." The heathen rites and ceremonies which Manasseh observed were often of the foulest character. 7. "Set—image." The setting up the Asherah within the sacred precincts is dwelt upon as the most aggravated outrage of this wicked king. 8. "Neither will I," etc. God had promised that this land should be theirs forever (2 Sam. 7: 10). "If only" (R. V.) All of God's promises are conditional. This condition was expressed at the very first. Had they obeyed God they would never have gone into captivity, but would still have been in possession of the promised land. 9. "To do worse." Through the pernicious influence of Manasseh they were led into worse forms of sin than were even practiced by the original Canaanites. Tradition says that under Manasseh Isaiah was sawn asunder.

II. Manasseh's punishment (vs. 10, 11). 10. "The Lord spake." We can imagine the bitter grief and burning indignation of those who loved the God of Israel. And they were not silent. In 2 Kings 21: 10-15 we see unnamed prophets denouncing the apostasy and threatening judgment in most striking language.

11. "King of Assyria." Assyria was at that time under Esarhaddon. "Among the thorns." "In chains." R. V. The sharp, thornlike hook by which prisoners were caught and held like fish. "Fetters." Probably manacles for the hands and fetters for the feet. "To Babylon." With this event Judah was added to the Assyrian Empire.

III. Manasseh's repentance (v. 12). 12. "Besought the Lord." In the solitude of exile and imprisonment Manasseh had leisure for reflection. The calamities forced on him a review of his past life, convincing him that the miseries of his dethronement and captivity were owing to his awful and unprecedented apostasy from the God of his fathers. "Humbled himself greatly." Afflictions are our best friends; we should never from upon them. In their midst we see our nothingness.

IV. Manasseh's restoration (v. 13). 13. "He was entreated." It is impossible that any sinner who desires to forsake sin and turn to God will be refused mercy, after the record of pardon from God to a man like Manasseh. Does this not explain why Manasseh was permitted to live the life he did? Would the Bible be the book it is if sin were not personified by such characters, and grace personified in Jesus Christ to meet their need? "Heard." Though affliction drives us to God He will not therefore reject us if we sincerely seek Him, for afflictions are sent to bring us to Him. "Brought him—to Jerusalem." When Manasseh is brought back to God and his duty he shall soon be brought back to his kingdom. See how readily God is to accept and welcome returning sinners, and how swift to show mercy. Let not great sinners despair when Manasseh himself, on repentance, found favor with God: in him God showed forth long suffering (1 Tim. 1: 16; Isa. 1: 18). "Manasseh knew—God." No precepts of his father; no teaching of priests and Llevites; no act of ceremonial circumcision nor engaging in forms of religion; no listening to sermons nor reading the Scriptures brought him this knowledge. He had to be brought to a position where nothing but the almighty power of God could deliver him. We will bless God through all eternity for the days of trouble that lead us to obey (Psa. 50: 15). But how much better it is to obey at once, thus making such afflictions unnecessary.

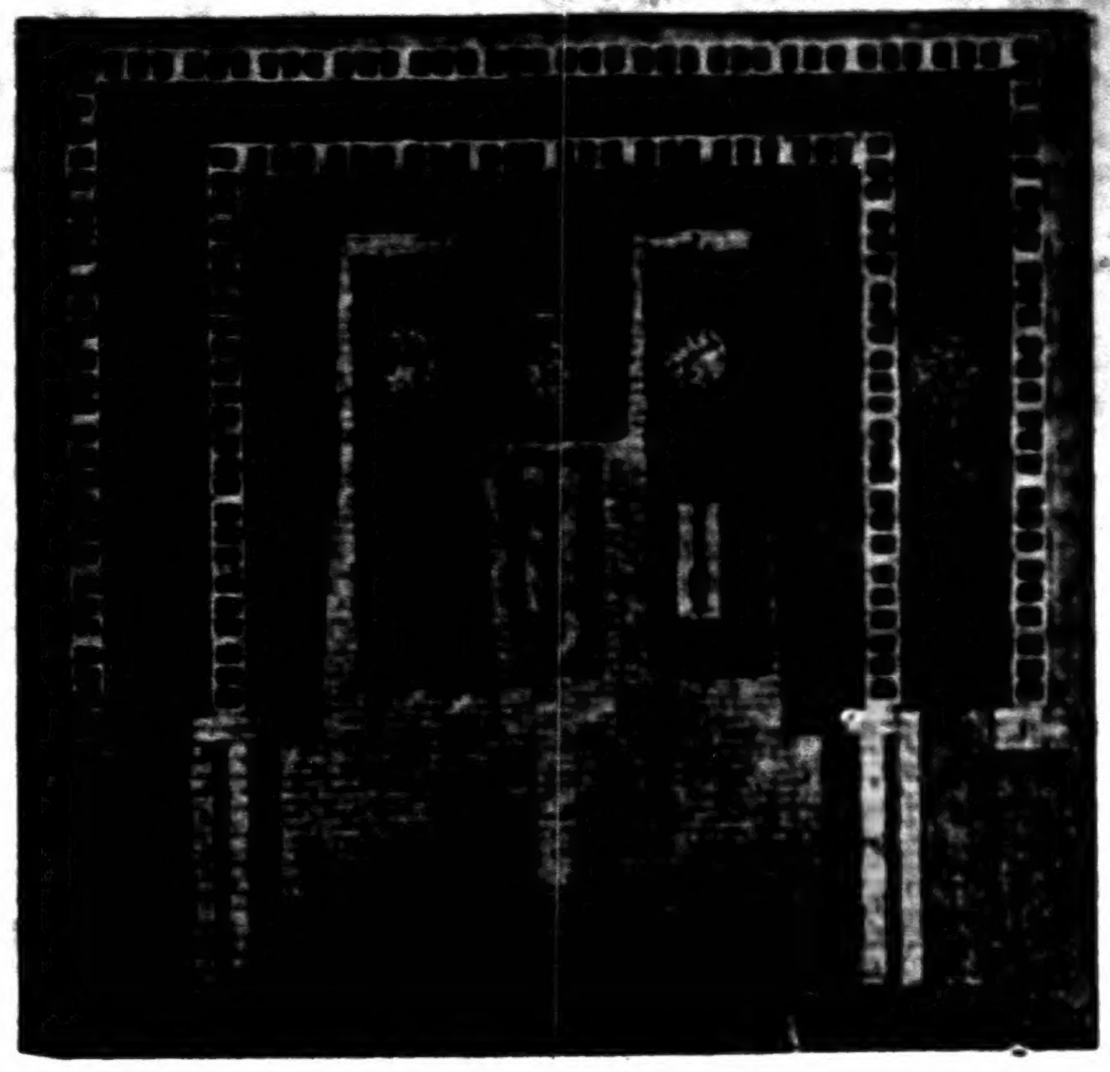
HOW STANDARD TIME IS MAINTAINED AT A MODERN WATCH WORKS.

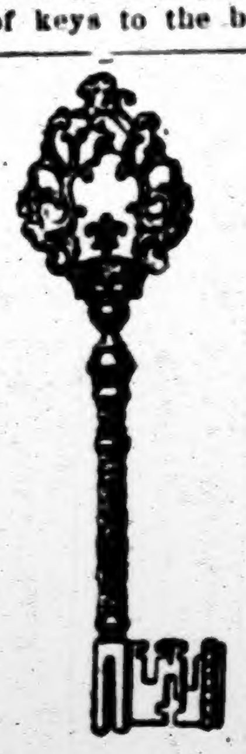


SECTIONAL VIEW THROUGH THE CLOCKROOM.

The building is designed to protect the clocks from disturbing influences that would cause variations in the time. Temperature changes and moisture are precluded by the double walls and ceiling providing an eighteen-inch air space between. Vibrations are avoided by placing the clocks on heavy masonry piers built on a bed of sand. The pair of clocks in front are the master clocks, which, by electrical connections, give the time throughout the works. The siderial clock to the rear which is checked, twice each week, by observing the transit of the stars, serves as the standard for the whole works.—Scientific American.

OLD KEYS WORTH $7000.

It may not be generally known that there are many key collectors in this big world of curio-hunters. Some of the keys of bygone ages are veritable triumphs of the locksmith's art. In Rome the bridegroom's presentation of a bunch of keys to the bride as she crossed his threshold, to invest her with the authority of the matron, was one of the most solemn rites of the wedding ceremony. Moreover, these symbolic keys had to be returned by the wife, who, when proving herself unworthy of the trust, was expelled forever from the home she had disgraced. On the other hand, the French widow of the Middle Ages, if left destitute, had the right to tear away the sacred keys of the house from her girdle and throw them in the grave of her deceased husband. By this action, commonly known as "throwing the keys in the pit," she publicly renounced all further ties and disclaimed the debts of the man who had left her unprovided for. From that moment she was left unmolested, for in those superstitious days no one would have dared to interfere with a woman who had thus freed herself from any marriage responsibility.



HERALDIC KEY.

We cannot but admire the work of the old locksmiths, who manipulated at will brass, iron and steel, so as to delineate the delicate traceries and fretwork of guipure and church windows. This metal craft had evidently a great fascination, since it can boast not only of several masters of renown, notably the celebrated Benvenuto Cellini and Antoine Jacquart, but also of a royal amateur, Louis XIV. himself, renowned for his mechanical hobby, and who has left to posterity several keys peculiar for their double L's surmounted with a crown, in great demand among collectors. Their reputation, greatly due, no doubt, to the position of the worker, pales before that of the master who executed the heraldic chef d'oeuvres, bearing the arms of the Strozzi family, recently bought for a wealthy connoisseur at the huge price of $7000.

Best Examples of Southern Architecture

Perhaps nowhere over the South can be found a town which more perfectly blends the relics of the old regime with the new than we find here in the quaint old town of Tuscaloosa, with its wide streets and their rows of massive oaks forming overhead a veritable canopy of verdant green, and lined with houses and grounds roaming about with the true Southern disregard of space. It is a town which to the historian teems with interest of the early days of the State, and it should teem with interest to the architectural student, for here we find a type of house of the Southern variety which in many ways is superior to the other multitude of charming old buildings which deluged the Black Belt and the South in general with their white becolumned porticos in the early part of the past century.—Architectural Record.

Mr. F. A. Gulledge, of Verbena, has received the following letter from Hon. W. H. Seymour, President, Alabama Division, Southern Cotton Association.

Montgomery, July 20, 1905
Mr. F. A. Gulledge, Verbena,

Dear Sir: Your reputation as one of the most progressive and public spirited men of your county, caused me to consult you about a matter in which I feel you are interested.

The Southern Cotton Association which has been in existence only a few months, has, it is conceded, already accomplished no little good, and has proven itself an instrument, susceptible of doing a great deal more.

In order to obtain the best results, however, I am convinced that it is necessary that the people throughout the cotton belt be kept in touch with each other, and be informed as to the true conditions that obtain with respect to supply, demand, acreage, condition, etc. In short, they must have all the information necessary for an intelligent marketing of the crop.

This can be done by means of an organ, located at some central point, say New Orleans, which shoulb be edited by the best talent obtainable. Such a paper, published weekly, and the subscription put at the low price of $1.00 per year, backed by the Association, and containing reports from all the various states, and other information of useful character to farmers would, in my judgment, be worth a great deal to producers, and it should have a clientele that would make the revenue derived from it as an advertising medium, sufficient to defray the expenses of the Association.

Now, my friend, consider this matter, read the enclosed circular letter, which contains an array of some of the facts that have encouraged us to proceed with this work, and if you think well of the proposition write me and tell me so, also how you think it would be received in your community.

It will not be established unless there are a sufficent number of replies advocating its establishment as to indicate absolute success.

The work may call me to your section some time this summer, and in the event it does I would be glad to meet you and discuss with you matters pertaining to it.

Respectfully yours,
W. H. SEYMOUR.

Mr. GULLEDGE ATTENDS A PICNIC AT TYUS.

Editor Banner—Your humble correspondent "rests himself to drop you a few lines to let you know he is well in mind but not in body" for the reason he has just returned from Tyus, Autauga county, eight miles southwest of Verbena, to which he had been invited to attend the picnic, and where he found a large crowd of the natives together with their guests from other sections of Autauga and adjoining counties gathered together to make July 22d, 1905, a day long to be remembered by those present, and for one only I can say that I shall ever remember it because of the sleepless night I am now spending locked in a room to myself wrestling with the results of an overcrowded stomach, besides just to think I could not eat all that fine barbecued meats, old fashioned home made light bread, cakes, pies, etc., not bought, mind you, but made with the hands of some of those pretty girls who compose a large percentage of the crowd, and I tell you Mr. Editor, if you don't want to get charmed you had better not go down on Autauga and Swift creeks, for I tell you the young, middle aged and old men stood on their "dew claws" while they watched those pretty girls trip the light fantastic to the sweet music dispensed by Henry Johnson and others of the string band. The order was of the best. The good people of the whole surrounding country had turned out in solid mass and no doubt the effect will be both favorable and lasting and it is my hearty desire to be permitted to attend such a gathering and dinner at least once a month during the balance of my life, for such things have a social effect not produced by hardly anything else. They bring together people who may have had past differences and yet upon this plane the hatchet is buried and all is forgotten.

This feast was the result of a tireless effort for ten days previous by the committee composed of T. J. Cox, G. W. Williams and John Stange, with the final efforts of W. H. Smith at the barbecue pit, and of the 12 or 15 carcasses furnished and cooked, not one ounce failed to not only be palatable but fine. All this was supplemented by the good women with large and well filled baskets the contents of which were "good enough for the gods."

I arrived on the ground at 10 a.m., found all in glee; left at 5 p.m., leaving them in the same frame of mind and with the understanding that the young people were to adjourn and meet later at the residence of a Mr. Morgan who lived nearby to continue the eating and dancing until midnight. This all brought to my mind that once upon a time I was young and suple and upon a certain occasion Tom Traywick and myself went "out upon the highway" and gathered together our hosts and he began to fiddle and we began to dance, and after this had lasted four and twenty hours I felt a stinging sensation in the bottom of one of my feet. I examined it and found I had not only worn out the outside sole and the middle and inside sole of my only pair of shoes, but my sock as well and had a blister the size of the bald of your thumb on the bottom of my foot, and yet in those days we did not consider we were on the extreme. Were you ever a country man, Mr. Editor? If not, lay down your job, go off out among the country people, work, eat, sleep and talk with them. Who was it that said "Let little children come unto me, for such is the kingdom of heaven." Methinks He was talking about or asking for the country people, for of such I feel the kingdom will have its full share.

F. A. GULLEDGE.
Verbena, July 22, 1905.

P.S. I send letter of W. H. Seymore, President of Alabama Branch Southern Cotton Association. The edition of the farmers paper at New Orleans is an indispensible thing and should, and no doubt will, meet with almost universal support by the farmers and those in the rural districts as well as the business men of villages, towns and cities of the South. CHILTON COUNTY SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The Ninth Annual Convention of the Chilton County Sunday School Association, held at Maplesville, July 22 and 23 was by far the most successful in the history of the organization. Fifty delegates were present from the following 20 schools:

Pleasant Grove, Shiloh, Sardis, Valley Creek, Mulberry, Macedonia, Cox's Chapel, Oden School House, Riderville, Maplesville, Pilgrim's Rest, Clanton Baptist, Verbena Beptist and Methodist, Salem, Mt. Carmel, Ebenezer, Alpine, Thorsby, Fair View.

Many visitors from adjacent villages and communites evinced unusal interest in the convention and gave the speakers the inspiration of a crowded house at each session. Judge Deason's absence on account of illness, was regretted, but the reins of government were placed in the very capable hands of Mr. F. M. Stillwell, of Selma, a prominent worker in the Dallas County Association, and Chilton is sincerely grateful to Dallas for lending her this able presiding officer, whose genial manner and thorough understanding of what was needed gave the proceedings the ease and smoothness of well ordered machinery.

Judge Joseph Carthel, the State Secretary, whose successful work has resulted in Alabama being the best organized State in the South, was present and gave the convention the strength and interest of his wide knowledge of this modern Sunday school movement. His earnestness and force, his clear demonstration of practical plans and methods makes his work valuable and helpful.

Mr. W. E. Holloway of Montgomery was present on Tuesday, giving an interesting description of his class of one hundred members, in the Court St. Sunday school. Mr. Holloway was instrumental in organizing the Association ten years ago.

The reports of the District Presidents show that some progress has been made toward the goal of our ambition to make Chilton a banner county. All of the Districts except Clanton, beats 4 and 11, have been organized and nearly all the schools in these six districts are evergreen. It is earnestly hoped that before the State Convention meets in April 1906, that all the districts will be organized and a convention held in every one.

A very interesting part of the program was an "experience meeting," so to speak, when the superintendents talked to us about their schools, told some of the difficulties they encountered, of many things that encouraged them and of the good resultant in their communities from the influence of the Sunday schools. Among those responding to this were Messrs. Groom, Fox, Collier, Strock, Milling, Adams, Broadhead, Wilkins, Miller and Glass.

Rev. Davis, the minister of the church wherein the sessions were held, made an instructive and entertaining talk Sunday afternoon, kindly supplying the place of an absent speaker.

Financially the Association is prospering. The sum of fifty dollars was pledged for State and county work, thirty dollars of this being paid the treasurer before adjournment. The officers elected for the coming year are:

President, T. U. Crumpton, Maplesville; Secretary-Treasurer, Mary C. Gibson, Verbena.

Executive Committee: Chairman, Dr. A. Horn, Thorsby; Tipton Mullins, Clanton; Dr. H. W. Caffey, Verbena; Judge L. H. Reynolds, Clanton; Judson Strock, Clanton; Vice Presidents, who are also Presidents of the Districts: No. 1 W. H. Shaw, Jemison; No. 2, G. L. Speer, Maplesville; No. 3, J. Bice, Thorsby; No. 4, E. B. Deason, Clanton; No. 5, Dr. H. W. Caffey, Verbena; No. 6, H. J. Grooms, Maplesville.

The citizens of Maplesville opened their homes to the delegates and visitors with such cordial welcome, such gracious hospitality that each one seemed an honored guest. Dinner was served each day at the church and the abundance of good things provided was further evidence of the hospitable intent of these good people. We heartily thank them for their very great kindness to the strangers within their gates, and especially do we assure Messrs J. W. Mitchel, T. U. Crupton and Mr. Geo. W. Fox of our sincere appreciation of their untiring effort to add to the welfare and comforts of the guests and promote the success of the convention.

The Cotton Association and Some of Its Work.

On January 23, middling cotton was selling in New Orleans at 6 9 16c per pound, which was less than the cost of production; and the tendency was still downward. There was still in the hands of the farmers and merchants some four or five million bales; and the cry of over production was doing service from the Potomac to the Rio Grande.

On January 24 27 the New Orleans Convention was held; and to avert what seemed an impending financial crisis, it recommended the holding of cotton, and also, as a temporary expedient, the reduction of acreage planted and of fertilizers used in the next crop. To carry out these recommendations was made the duty of the association. Contrary to expectations, the market was affected at once; and cotton began to advance. In less than two weeks it was selling for 7⅝ cents per pound. This was an advance of more than $5.00 per bale. Later it brought even a better price; and, that, notwithstanding the efforts of some, whose interests were subserved by low priced cotton, to stampede, and thereby, discourage, if not prevent, co-operation.

On May 30th, the association formulated and issued a carefully prepared report, which showed beyond doubt, that many farmers had respected the recommendation of the convention—notwithstanding reports to the contrary. At this time cotton was selling for about $10 per bale more than before the convention. The markets responded to the report by advancing the price of cotton about $2. per bale.

A few days afterward the government issued a report that was at such variance with that of the association as to depress the market. The association caused an investigation of this report. The next report by the Government was one setting forth true conditions; and cotton passed the ten cent mark.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

[illegible]

Washington, D. C., July 24, 1905.

The Republican administration is in a veritable [illegible] hole with never a ladder in sight, from the standpoint of "graft." Every department in Washington seems to be honey-combed with rottenness and graft. It is a lust of loot, a riot of rapacity and a fiduciary fandango, to a plumb finish.

As I have frequently written in this letter previously the whole tariff fattened gang begins to believe that this government was made for them and their especial benefit; that they are the Almighty's anointed and that the great common people of the country were intended to be hewers of wood and drawers of water for them. They steal the people's money and then look hurt and have the injured innocence appearance, if a Grand Jury or a District Attorney gets busy with one of them.

The lastest is the Government Printing Office, which has its story of graft or corruption requiring investigation and perhaps a dismissal or two. Where is this to end.

Must President Roosevelt devote his entire administration to discovering scandals in the departments? If so, it is a very hard fate for a man who is himself believed to be so upright. But if he has much more of this work to do, he may find it worth while to go behind all the trouble and inquire why it is that the Post Office Department had its Machens, Beavers and others, the Agricultural Department its Holmes and other departments their quota of grafters and thieves, and why he has had to dismiss eight army officers this year and bring to trial six more—all for embezzlement. It is the get-rich-quick craze which has stimulated by the Republican theory that governments exist to help people make money, either by creating new offices, obtaining colonial possessions, or by artificially raising wages and prices by means of protective tariffs.

In future when the history of this period of corruption and speculation in and out of the government comes to be written up, some decades hence, he will be but a poor historian who fails to perceive that the spirit of protection is at the bottom of it all

One Dollar Saved Represents Ten Dollars Earned.

The average man does not save to exceed ten per cent of his earnings. He must spend nine dollars in living expenses for every dollar saved. That being the case he cannot be too careful about unnecessary expenses. Very often a few cents properly invested, like buying seeds for his garden, will save several dollars outlay later on. It is the same in buying Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It costs but a few cents, and a bottle of it in the house often saves a doctor's bill of several dollars. For sale by Upchurch Drug co., Clanton, A. Horn, Thorsby.

KIDNEY TROUBLES

Increasing Among Women, But Sufferers Need Not Despair

THE BEST ADVICE IS FREE

Of all the diseases known, with which the female organism is afflicted, kidney disease is the most fatal, and statistics show that this disease is on the increase among women.

Mrs Emma Sawyer

Unless early and correct treatment is applied the patient seldom survives when once the disease is fastened upon her. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the most efficient treatment for kidney troubles of women, and is the only medicine especially prepared for this purpose.

When a woman is troubled with pain or weight in loins, backache, frequent, painful or scalding urination, swelling of limbs or feet, swelling under the eyes, an uneasy, tired feeling in the region of the kidneys or notices a brick-dust sediment in the urine, she should lose no time in commencing treatment with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it may be the means of saving her life.

For proof, read what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Sawyer.

"I cannot express the terrible suffering I had to endure. A derangement of the female organs developed nervous prostration and a serious kidney trouble. The doctor attended me for a year, but I kept getting worse, until I was unable to do anything, and I made up my mind I could not live. I finally decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a last resort, and I am to-day a well woman. I cannot praise it too highly, and I tell every suffering woman about my case." Mrs. Emma Sawyer, Conyers, Ga.

AIDS NATURE'S WORK

EFFECT OF ACETYLENE RAYS ON GROWTH OF PLANTS.

Grow to Twice Actual Weight of Those Exposed to Sunlight Only—Latest Victory For This New and Beautiful Illuminant.

The experiments recently made at Cornell University prove that the beautiful rays from the gas, acetylene, are as effective as sunlight on the growth of plants, and this may soon become a subject for serious consideration by all progressive cultivators of the soil.

The results of the experiments are astonishing, inasmuch as they show conclusively the great increase of growth attained by supplementing "The Light of Nature" with "The Light of Acetylene" during the hours in which the plants would otherwise be in darkness. For instance, a certain number of radish plants subjected to acetylene light during the night grew to twice the actual weight of the same number of radishes given daylight only, all other conditions being equal, and peas had blossomed and partially matured pods with the help of acetylene light, while without the added light not even buds were apparent.

Acetylene is already taking its place as an illuminant for towns from a central plant, for lighting houses, churches, schools and isolated buildings of all kinds, and it is being used successfully for many other purposes.

A striking and important feature of acetylene is the ease and small expense with which it can be made available compared with the great advantages derived from its use. The machine in which the gas is generated is easily installed.

A Steamer Among the Andes.

The steamer Inca, built at Hull, Enigand, for service on Lake Titicaca, the largest lake in South America and the loftiest body of water on the American continent. This lake lies between two cordilleras of the Andes, at an altitude of 12,900 feet above the sea. The boat was sent under its own steam to Mollendo, a seaport town of Peru, where it was taken to pieces and carried on lama back up the mountains. It made 3,000 separate packages and was conveyed 150 miles. A railroad has been built from the seacoast to the lake, and the boat is part of the system. Lake Titicaca is seventy miles in length and has several good sized villages on its shores.

A Young Michigan Giant.

Louis Mollenen, the tall Michigander, is only nineteen years of age and is still growing quite rapidly. He is now seven feet eight inches in height and weighs 370 pounds. As may be seen, he is well proportioned, and he is reputed to be as strong as an ox. He has worked underground as a miner ever since he was a small boy, and that rather unfavorable mode of living has not stunted him. His parents are undersized, his mother weighing less than a hundred pounds.

Odd Government Account.

Among the receipts in the French colonial budget there figures a sum of four lacs of sicca rupees, equavalent at the present time to about $133,135, paid by the British Indian government. This money is paid annually in virtue of a treaty made in 1815, by which France conceded to England the exclusive right to buy the salt manufactured in what remained of the French possessions in India.

One room at Tsarskoe, the Czar's palace near St. Petersburg, has walls of lapis lazuli and a floor of ebony inlaid with mother-of-pearl. Another has walls of carved amber, and the walls of a third are laid thick with beaten gold.

CHANGED HUSBAND.

Wife Made Wise Change in Food.

Change of diet is the only way to really cure stomach and bowel trouble.

A woman says:

"My husband had dyspepsia when we were married and had suffered from it for several years. It was almost impossible to find anything he could eat without bad results.

"I thought this was largely due to the use of coffee, and persuaded him to discontinue it. He did so, and began to drink Postum Food Coffee. The change did him good from the beginning, his digestion improved; he suffered much less from his nervousness, and when he added Grape-Nuts food to his diet he was soon entirely cured.

"My friend, Mrs. —— ——, of Vicksburg (my former home), had become a nervous wreck also from dyspepsia. Medicines had no effect, neither did travel help her. On my last visit home, some months ago, I persuaded her to use Grape-Nuts food. She was in despair, and consented. She stuck to it until it restored her health so completely that she is now the most enthusiastic friend of Grape-Nuts that I ever knew. She eats it with cream or dry, just as it comes from the package—keeps it in her room and eats it whenever she feels like it.

"I began eating Grape-Nuts food myself when my baby was two months old, and I don't know what I should have done without it. My appetite was gone, I was weak and nervous and afforded but very little nourishment for the child. The Grape-Nuts food, of which I soon grew very fond, speedily set all this right again, and the baby grew healthful, rosy and beautiful as a mother could wish. He is two years old now and eats Grape-Nuts food himself. I wish every tired young mother knew of the good that Grape-Nuts would do her."

The list of wounded numbers fifty-four, the following names having been ascertained: O. A. Nelson, —. Taylor, E. A. Starkewather, H. E. Wise, H. M. Stewart, —. Brockman, F. R. Connell, A. G. Burg, —. Pfleuger, R. Savage, —. Knoblock, C. Wilson, W. Hofreuter, L. A. Greis, O. D. Rich, H. C. Shepard, H. C. Dean, S. Eckell, W. M. Taylor, C. E. Miller, I. K. Strobel.

The Bennington at the time of the accident was lying in the stream just off the Commercial wharf at the foot of H street. The warship had received orders from the navy department at Washington to sail for Port Hartford, where she was to meet the monitor Wyoming and convey the vessel to Mare Island navy yard. Steam was up and everything was in readiness for sailing when, suddenly and without warning whatever, the starboard boiler exploded with a deafening roar. The explosion was terrific. People standing on the shore saw a huge cloud of white steam rise above the Bennington. Columns of smoke were hurled into the air for a distance of nearly twice the height of the spars of the vessel.

An Awful Disaster.

It was apparent that an awful disaster of some kind had occurred on board the warship. The ferryboat Ramona was coming across the bay at the time of the accident. Captain Bertelsen, of the Ramona, immediately gave orders to change the course of the boat, and instead of continuing his trip to the San Diego side of the bay he hurried to the aid of the stricken warship. The tug Santa Fe, the launch McKinley, the government launch General De Russey and a large number of other launches and water craft which were near the scene at the time also rushed to the assistance of the Bennington and endeavored to lend every assistance possible.

By the time the Ramona had arrived many of the sailors of the Bennington who had jumped into the bay to escape the scalding steam had been rescued and the removal of the wounded, which had already been commenced, was being conducted in perfect order. The crews of the Santa Fe, De Russey and other boats present lent valuable aid in picking up the wounded sailors and transferring them to the shore.

At the time of the accident Commander Lucien Young and Surgeon F. E. Peck were on shore. The two officers as soon as they learned of the disaster hurried to the water front where Commander Young immediately took charge.

On board the Bennington were presented terrible scenes. The force of the explosion had torn a great hole in the starboard side of the ship, and the vessel was already commencing to list. A section of the upper decks was carried away from stem to stern.

Blood and wreckage were distributed over the entire ship, the after cabin and the vicinity of the ship adjacent to the exploded boiler resembling a charnel house. Over it all hung the great cloud of white smoke.

The Work of Rescue.

The scene of hurrying ambulances, hacks and carriages of every description which had been summoned added to the excitement. Every physician who could be reached by telephone was called to the water front. Within a comparatively short time nearly a dozen physicians were on the scene and attending the wounded.

A dozen or fifteen were blown overboard by the force of the terrific explosion. Captain Wentworth, who was looking at the Bennington when the disaster occurred, says he saw human bodies hurled over a hundred feet upward. The air was black with the smoke which enveloped the ship. When it cleared away only a few men could be seen on the decks, while a number were floundering in the water. A boat was lowered from the vessel's side and most of them were picked up and taken on board. The shock of the explosion penetrated every section of the ship, blood and ashes being found as far as the stern of the captain's cabin. Portions of the upper deck were carried away and great damage was done in all sections.

Most of the dead were taken ashore where the undertakers and physicians were assembled, the former to take charge of the dead and the latter to minister to the needs of the living. The bodies of many of the men taken from the wrecked interior of the ship were mutilated almost beyond recognition. The faces of many were covered with blood and ashes. Commander Young, as soon as he reached the ship, gave orders that the airtight compartments be closed to prevent the listing ship sinking and that the magazines be flooded to avoid further explosions. Temporary quarters ashore were arranged for the wounded, and sixty citizens volunteered and hurried in launches to the relief of those on the ill-fated ship.

Some of the volunteers were unable to stand the sickening sight which met their gaze on the Bennington. As fast as the wounded could be removed they were hurried in ambulances, carriages, wagons and automobiles to the hospitals.

Removing Bodies.

For a long time the hot steam prevented access to the space between decks, where most of the dead bodies lay, and it was not until late in the afternoon that the last were removed from the boiler rooms. Several bodies were so tightly wedged in by a bulkhead that the wood work had to be hewn away to free them. Most of the bodies yet unidentified have been mangled beyond hope of recognition.

The boiler which exploded, it is said, was regarded as unsafe. Commander Young stated that during a recent return from Honolulu the steam pressure was kept reduced in that particular one.

When the explosion occurred the engineer was inspecting the boilers as a preliminary to the vessel's leaving port, and he was not seriously injured.

Officers and men who were able to assist in the rescue acted in a brave manner. Pumps were used to keep the water from the upper compartments, the magazine was flooded and men fought their way through the steam into the darkened hold to search for their comrades. In the worst danger, and when it was feared the ship would sink before she could be beached, the young officers and men stuck manfully to their posts.

Albert H. Ryan, of this city, who was rowing near the ship at the time of the accident, plunged into the water and was rescued by several sailors.

The ship's inner works are a tangled mass of machinery, and she probably will have to be dismantled in order to examine her injuries.

Lieutenant Yates, executive officer in charge of the Bennington at the time of disaster, was in the aft cabin. He rushed out to be met by a blinding scalding cloud of steam as it swept the vessel. Speaking of the occurrence he said: "I remained seated in my chair several seconds after it occurred, and did not know what had happened. I then rushed out, and the steam, even at the extreme part of the ship, was so dense that I could not get a breath of air until I ascended the rail."

Park Ducklings at Drill.

One of the prettiest sights to be seen in Central Park these days is on the small lake near West 103d street, where a proud mother duck is chaperoning her young family of six and putting them through various "stunts" known to duckdom.

She will sail straight down the lake with the six downy babies in single file behind her. Then a signal, a sudden turn and they gather around her, for all the world like fussy tugs around an ocean liner.

Mrs. Duck carefully avoids leading her brood near the curious small boy at the lake's edge, but she will swim close enough to grab bits of cracker thrown into the water for her. A few moments after she and the tiny babies appear a good sized audience is watching them from the shore. The little ones are already learning what they like best.—New York Press.

EMPERORS MEETING.

In Discussing Situation German Emperor Urges the Czar to Peace and Reform.

NO INTENTION OF MEDDLING

Gives His Views Only When Requested—They Will Not Interfere With American Conference.

Berlin.—The foreign office here is advised that a meeting between Emperor William and Emperor Nicholas took place on Monday off the Swedish coast near the Island of Bjoerkoe. Emperor Nicholas wrote to Emperor William several days before that if during the latter's yachting in the Baltic he should approach the Russian shore he (Emperor Nicholas) would be pleased to meet him. The German emperor replied that he would be glad to cruise to any convenient point, and the Island of Bjoerkoe was suggested. It is understood that the conversation was to be entirely personal and intimate, and therefore no minister from either government was to be present, although the Russian minister of marine was in Emperor Nicholas' suite.

Sequel to Correspondence.

The meeting is a sequel to the correspondence that has been going on between the two emperors concerning peace, in which Emperor William urged Emperor Nicholas to take steps towards peace. Emperor William was then co-operating with President Roosevelt seeking to bring the belligerents to a discussion of terms of peace, and in the present meeting the Associated Press is authoritatively informed Emperor William will continue to advise peace should the Russian emperor ask for his further views, and it would be very natural that Emperor Nicholas should do so as a development of the correspondence which had already taken place.

Emperor William went to the meeting, as the Associated Press is officially informed, prepared to say if he was asked that he thought Emperor Nicholas could attain a full understanding and reconciliation with the discontented portions of his people only through reforms. The German government is interested in seeing the neighboring country peaceful and prosperous, for it is toward the Russian empire that Germany's manufacturers look for great trade expansion in the future.

Is Not Interfering.

The German emperor is most reluctant to have either the Russians or others to think that he is volunteering suggestions regarding the internal affairs of Russia. He is not doing so, but will only give his personal views on their being asked for. Emperor William has the fullest information regarding the Russian situation, and may be able to give Emperor Nicholas statements of fact and deductions from them that are unknown to the Russian emperor.

So far as the rumors in other capitals that a scheme is afloat to combine several of the powers in giving Russia moral support against the Japanese negotiations soon to be opened at Portsmouth, N. H., concerning Germany are denied explicitly. Germany's policy of non-interference, as is often declared, remains the same.

Right Man Not Caught.

Gadsden, Ala.—There are no new developments in the Smith murder and rape case, except that a great number of suspects have been arrested, but so far the right person has not been caught. There is considerable comment upon the fact that the two sons of the dead woman have shown so little interest in the terrible manner in which their mother met her death. It was some time before they could be induced to come to town and look after her remains, and they did not attend the coroner's inquest, although summoned. The boys have left town, and their whereabouts are unknown. This has caused considerable comment of a very unfavorable kind.

The negro woman involved in the case states most positively that both these boys were out all night on the mountain with them, and if this is so they could not help but know something about the fearful death of the woman. It is said that these boys would go home drunk and beat their mother, and the doctor has been called in more than once to attend to the wounds of Mrs. Smith made by her sons.

Extra Session November 10.

Washington, D. C.—It is announced at Oyster Bay that the extra session of congress, which was to have been called first in March and then in October, is now set for November 10.

Washington, D. C.—Rear Admiral Dunlap, commandant of the naval station at San Juan, cabled the navy department Saturday that Private William A. Hurt, of the marines, fell off the city wall, crushing his skull and dying instantly.

Under a new law Illinois, during the next two years, will spend $50,000 in building good roads to serve as samples of what is desirable in that respect.

wife of Felix was a Jewess whom he had persuaded to leave her lawful husband. She, doubtless, was anxious to learn of this Jesus who had caused such a commotion among the people of her nation, and herein may have been the cause of the apostle's first invitation to the palace.

It is said that the greatest wonder on earth is man himself, and indeed I believe this to be true. Take, for instance, this man, Felix, and he is but the type of a numerous family. No man who walks the earth to-day who may not find a representative in some Bible character, and if you diligently study the different characters recorded in the sacred book you can easily prove the truth of this statement. Felix lived in sin. Paul knew his man, and he suited his sermon to his audience. I am not sure that that sermon would escape criticism in these days. I am of the opinion that many good souls would say it was not evangelical. He was invited to preach concerning the faith in Christ, and his sermon was on righteousness, temperance and judgment to come—topics that any good man of any faith might well discuss. Many might say, is that Christian preaching? I say it is, and more than that, it is the kind that this age needs, and we need it every day. If Paul had begun an argument respecting Christ's divinity, or resurrection, or any kindred topic, he would probably have had a most interesting discussion with Felix, but think you that he would have made him tremble?

Most men think that Christianity is theology. No; Christianity is morality in the light of eternity. And that is not the best preaching which delights us with its close reasoning and high speculation and profound theology; that is the best preaching which makes us, if we are living in sin, turn uneasily in our seats and tremble as we listen to its truths. The law is our schoolmaster to bring us to Christ, and it is only when conscience is aroused within us that we seek the grace which is in Christ and which came by Christ. The end of preaching is not to make men theologians, the end of preaching is to build up character, and while some of us may be far enough on the road to hear sermons on the deep things of God, I am not pessimistic when I say that, taking the world in its totality, most of us are still where we need to be reasoned with concerning righteousness, temperance and judgment to come.

"Preaching to the times" is a favorite expression nowadays. Its purpose seems to be that men are to be amused, as Felix had Paul in from the prison to amuse him. He and he alone preaches to the times who makes us restless by showing us the demands of God's eternal law and then points the way clear up to Calvary and to Him who said "Come unto Me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." These are eternal verities and they fit all times. All others change and pass away with the changing hour; social, political, aye, even theological questions have their days and cease to be, but the eternal need is forgiveness and the everlasting want, rest for the soul.

And so Paul reasoned of righteousness to a man living in sin, of temperance to a woman who lived to gratify every desire and wicked passion, and of judgment to come to two who never looked beyond the present world—the first steps, the first necessary steps to the pointing out of Him in whom alone is forgiveness and from whom alone we have the power to live so that at His coming in glorious majesty to judge the world we may not be put to shame.

And now, in the last place, we notice that this preaching was convincing. That is clear enough, for a man does not tremble without occasion. A man does not tremble in the presence of spiritual truth except his intellect has been reached and his conscience touched. Paul did his duty, but Felix shirked his and turned his back upon the truth. He trembled, but he did not move. Are there not many men like him with us to-day? "Go thy way," said he, "when I have a convenient season I will send for thee." Is not that what we often hear. But when do those who say so find that that convenient season ever comes? What do we think of the man who in matters of this world, is given to putting off and waiting to another time? Our worldly wisdom tells us that such a man will never come to any good and no one has any confidence in him. You see through him, and smile at all his excuses for delay, and think you that if a man cannot deceive his fellows in this respect he can deceive God and his own soul? The Bible knows of no time but now. "Now is the accepted time." And this is true not only of the greatest of all transactions—our acceptance of Jesus Christ—but of all the duties that devolve upon us as Christian men and women. We may have to-day an opportunity of doing good, or of receiving good. If we let it slip that door that opened to us will be shut, and it will never be opened again. Lost opportunities do not return. Others may come, but the lost ones come not again. Let us, then, seize every opportunity, let us realize that the present only is ours, and as we hear the word of life let us embrace it in its fulness and live in its strength.

Consequences of Neglect.

Fatal consequences follow not only positive wrongdoing, but simple neglect of duty also. The ten foolish virgins in the parable were guilty of nothing but neglect, yet their lamps went out and they were shut out from the wedding. The man with one talent did nothing but omit the thing he ought to have done, yet he was cast out. Those who shall stand on the left hand of the Judge of the whole earth in the last day shall be accused only of omitting to minister to their Lord in His affliction, yet they shall go away into everlasting punishment. It is fatal to leave things undone.

In the Soul's Recesses.

What we want is the clear eye to see the goodness there is among men, and the wise, skilled hand to draw it forth; for deep down in the recesses of the spirit is the angel of the Lord, cramped and chained indeed, but only needing the charmed word to invest it with authority and power.—John Page Hopps.

Where Women Predominate.

In all Quebec there are only ten more males and females. In Ontario, with large areas being opened up for settlement, there are about 10,000 more males than females. Manitoba is 22,000 females short. British Columbia is 50,000 short, while in the unorganized territories the females are outnumbered by two to one. All this goes to show that it is in the pioneer districts that the men predominate.

However, in spite of the balance of numbers against the women, there are in Canada 1,564,011 unmarried females of various ages. All things considered, it is unlikely that immigration as a purely matrimonial venture would be justified. In the early days of Canada's history, when shiploads of damsels were brought from France to espouse the king's soldiers, the experiment was scarcely a success.

Grammar by Rule.

The master who gives his pupils "simple rules" for determining questions which confront them, and particularly grammatical questions, is apt to find that such rules frequently disastrously fail to fit all cases.

Once an examiner was questioning the pupils of a country school. He wrote on the blackboard the sentence: "The fly has wings," and asked a class what part of speech each word was.

They parsed the "the" without any trouble.

"What part of speech is 'fly'?"

"Adverb," shouted all the class in unison. "What! Fly an adverb?"

"Yessir!" shouted the boys with great positiveness.

"What makes you think it is an adverb?"

"'Cause the master told us last week that all words that end in 'ly' are adverbs."

Carries $5,000,000 in His Pockets.

Even should the Sultan of Morocco be compelled to leave his country in a hurry as a result of present complications he will not do so in a penniless condition. Some time ago he sent to Paris a trusty messenger who invested nearly $5,000,000 in unset diamonds. These precious stones Abdul carries on his person constantly, although in such a country that is rather a dangerous thing to do.

DISFIGURING ULCER

People Looked at Her in Amazement—Pronounced Incurable—Face Now Clear as Ever—Thanks God For Cuticura.

Mrs. P. Hackett, of 400 Van Buren St., Brooklyn, N. Y. says: "I wish to give thanks for the marvelous cure of my mother by Cuticura. She had a severe ulcer, which physicians had pronounced incurable. It was a terrible disfigurement, and people would stand in amazement and look after her. After there was no hope from doctors she began using Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills, and now, thank God, she is completely cured, and her face is as smooth and clear as ever."

Caution to Purchasers of Winchester Guns

We find Winchester Repeating Rifles and Shotguns are being offered by certain of the trade, not customers of ours, at cut prices, and that such guns have been altered since leaving the factory, including the changing and obliteration of the factory serial numbers.

Not knowing to what further extent these arms have been tampered with, we take this opportunity of advising the public in general that we assume no responsibility whatever connected with any such arms, and caution all buyers to see that the numbers have not been changed or obliterated.

All genuine Winchester Repeating Rifles and Shotguns are numbered and all Winchester Single Shot Rifles are numbered, except the Models 1900, 1902, 1904, and the Thumb Trigger Model.

Linevitch An Old Fighter.

General Linevitch, the Russian commander, has been in the army about half a century. As early as 1859 he was fighting the war-like Circassians and the wild tribes of Dagestan. In the Crimean war he was twice wounded. He is extremely popular with the rank and file, who call him "Papa Linevitch." The general is descended from an old Polish family, is of noble birth, and well educated.

Edward Admires Roosevelt.

King Edward is an admirer of Mr. Roosevelt, and follows the American president's movements with interest. He was considerably amused when he read once that at the invitation of the pastor of a new Dutch Reformed church, at Washington, "Brother Roosevelt" delivered an impressive address. "Anyhow," exclaimed his majesty, with a laugh, "I shan't follow him in that line."

Explorer Held for Ransom.

The African explorer, the Marquis de Segonzac, who was sent by the Moroccan committee in Paris, partly for political reasons, to explore the region south of the Moroccan Atlas, and who was captured and held for ransom, was accompanied by two Algerian linguists. Several of the party took a different route. It is believed that the capture was made solely for ransom. Judging by the last letters received from the Marquis he was able to get much new and valuable information regarding the region he traversed.

AN OLD MAN'S TRIBUTE.

An Ohio Fruit Dealer, 70 Years Old, Cured of a Terrible Case After Ten Years of Suffering.

SIDNEY JUSTUS.

Sidney Justus, fruit dealer, of Mentor, Ohio, says: "I was cured by Doan's Kidney Pills of a severe case of kidney trouble, of eight or ten years' standing. I suffered the most severe backache and other pains in the region of the kidneys. These were especially severe when stooping to lift anything and often I could hardly straighten my back. The aching was bad in the day time, but just as bad at night, and I was always lame in the morning. I was bothered with rheumatic pains and dropsical swelling of the feet. The urinary passages were painful and the secretions were discolored and so free that often I had to rise at night. I felt tired all day. Half a box served to relieve me, and three boxes effected a permanent cure."

Caught Another Octopus.

The largest devil fish yet captured here was placed in the aquarium a few days since, says the Los Angeles Times. Its tentacles will cover a space of six or seven feet. The one that has been on exhibition for some months was put back into the ocean and given its freedom. The new tentacle which it was growing to replace one lost in capture had reached a length of about six inches.

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY
REVIEW OF REVIEWS

The more Magazines there are, the more Indispensable is The Review of Reviews

"Indispensable." "The one magazine I feel I must take." "The world under a field-glass." "An education in public affairs and current literature,"—these are some of the phrases one hears from noted people who read the Review of Reviews. The more magazines there are, the more necessary is the Review of Reviews, because it brings together the best that is in all the most important monthlies of the world. Such is the flood of periodical literature that nowadays people say that the only way to keep up with it is to read the Review of Reviews. Entirely over and above this reviewing section, it has more original matter and illustrations than most magazines, and the most timely and important articles printed in any monthly.

Probably the most useful section of all is Dr. Albert Shaw's illustrated "Progress of the World," where public events and issues are authoritatively and lucidly explained in every issue. Many a subscriber writes, "This department alone is worth more than the price of the magazine." The unique cartoon department, depicting current history in caricature, is another favorite. The Review of Reviews covers five continents, and yet is American, first and foremost.

Men in public life, the members of Congress, professional men, and the great captains of industry who must keep "up with the times," intelligent men and women all over America, have decided that it is "indispensable."

The Tarantula Killing Wasps.

The tarantula killer is a bustling, [illegible] creature. When running on the ground its wings vibrate continuously. When it sights its prey it flies in circles around it. The tarantula trembles violently; now runs and hides; now, rising rampant, shows signs of fight. The watchful huntress finds a favorable moment, darts upon its victim with curved body and thrusts in its sting if possible into the soft abdomen. Often the spider is at once paralyzed, but a second and even a third wound is sometimes necessary. The victor seizes its motionless prey with its jaws and drags it to a hole previously dug. She thrusts it in, deposits an egg upon it and covers it up. In this case the bulk of the tarantula insures sufficient food for the offspring, and one alone is provided, as seems to be the case with the cicada storing wasps. But the mud dauber and her ilk, which select smaller prey, garner many, rarely sealing a cell ere it is quite full.—H. C. McCook in Harper's Magazine.

How the Tibetans Dress.

Lay and cleric alike, the inhabitants of Lassa are entirely similar to those of the rest of Tibet. There is indeed but one difference even in the dress. In one province through which we passed the women use a turquoise studded halo as a headdress. In Lassa a fillet ornamented in the same way is bound close down over their hair, fluffed out on either side, and falls down over the shoulders. It is one of the most becoming ways of doing the hair that I have ever seen, and for a certain type the entire dress of a woman of Lassa would be a becoming costume for a fancy dress ball at home. The dress of the men and the women is very similar. There is a single undergarment and one heavy native cloth robe, dun or crimson in color, and usually patched, which both sexes pull in around the waist with a girdle, the men pouching it at the waist to form the only pocket that they use.—World's Work.

Earthquakes.

Earthquakes generally do their work with great rapidity, but there are exceptions. While Caracas and Lisbon were destroyed in a few minutes, the Calabrian earthquakes beginning in 1783 lasted four years. Earthquakes travel across the earth at velocities varying between several hundred and several thousand feet a second, the greater the intensity of the shock the greater being the velocity. The sea waves that frequently accompany earthquakes also travel at tremendous speeds. A submarine earthquake near the coast of Japan in 1854 gave rise to sea waves which traversed the whole breadth of the Pacific at the rate of 370 miles an hour. At Simoda, Japan, the waves from this earthquake were thirty feet high. At San Diego, Cal., they were only six inches high.

A Persistent Fighter.

The measures of Wilberforce in the British house of commons for the abolishing of the British slave trade had a hard struggle before they finally prevailed. On Feb. 15, 1805, Wilberforce moved "without entering into any argument" for a bill to abolish the slave trade after a limited time and for a committee to consider its propriety. He had been introducing such a bill almost every year for fifteen years, although his twelve resolutions against the traffic were carried in 1789 without a division. But year after year the bill came to wreck, either in the house of lords or the commons, suffering defeat in 1796 because several of its supporters had gone to see a new comic opera. It was doomed to disaster again in 1805, but finally triumphed in 1807.

The Mexican Bridegroom.

The bridegroom in Mexico finds marriage a very costly business. He is expected to buy the trousseau, and he is fortunate if he can satisfy the extravagance sanctioned by custom and prompted by ardent passion. Young men from the country are said to be often seen in the City of Mexico purchasing all sorts of finery for the ladies of their choice, and the spectacle they present as they consult the measurements, which they carry with them for all sorts of garments, is very amusing.

A Peculiar Animal.

Regarding some of the peculiar characteristics of that strange link between birds and beasts, the duck billed platypus of Australia, a writer says: "It makes its home like an otter in a bank, tunneling up from the entrance under water some thirty or forty feet, which its powerful forearm muscles make nothing of, to a place where it can find a dry and well drained burrow. Its food consists chiefly of insects, crayfish or 'yabbees,' which it bolts, hard shell and all. It will stay from ten to fourteen minutes at a time under water, searching the mud and stones for these delicacies with its ducklike bill. It makes a most fascinating little pet, becoming very tame and squeaking with delight when fed. Its antics are a constant source of pleasure, though if care is not taken it will overeat itself, seeming to have in captivity difficulty in digesting the hard crayfish shells. Its coat is, like the mole's, of an unusually silken and glossy texture."

The Longest Day.

June 21 is the longest day of the year, the day when the sun reaches its northern limit, the tropic of Cancer. At points on the line of the arctic circle there is the wonder of the midnight sun, and many tourists go long distances to witness the sight. It is singular how accurately the semibarbarous nations were able to observe and reckon. On Salisbury plain, in England, may be seen a cromlech erected by the druids. It is a circle of huge stones which once formed a temple, but the most interesting part of the structure is the sacrificial stone, which is a broad, flat slab so placed that the rays of the rising sun strike full upon it only on the 21st of June. The old guide who shows the place to visitors tells the story that a young girl once said to him, "I suppose you have seen it hundreds of times, haven't you?"

Wouldn't Be Reconciled.

Two of the most eminent lawyers at the Philadelphia bar were Benjamin Harris Brewster and his half brother, Frederick Carroll Brewster. Both had held the office of attorney general for the state, and the first had been attorney general of the United States. They had not been on friendly terms for many years. It is said that on one occasion a mutual friend tried to bring them together, and finally Frederick C. consented to bury the hatchet and sent Benjamin H. a card containing his name, with these words written underneath, "At home on Monday evening, May 1." By the same messenger Benjamin H. sent a card in return, which read, "Benjamin H. Brewster also at home Monday evening, May 1." This ended negotiations.

What Is the Meaning of "Vulgar"?

Sir Walter Scott's daughter once spoke in his hearing of something she could not endure because it was vulgar. "My dear," replied her father, "you speak like a very young lady. Do you know, after all, the meaning of this word 'vulgar?' It is only common. Nothing that is common, except wickedness, can deserve to be spoken of with contempt. When you have lived to my years you will be disposed to agree with me in thanking God that nothing really worth having or caring about in this world is uncommon."—Lockhart's "Life of Scott."

Baseball Players and Foot Racers!

Louis J. Kruger, ex champion long distance foot racer of Germany and Holland, writes, Oct. 27, 1901:

Indigestion Causes Catarrh of the Stomach.

For many years it has been supposed that Catarrh of the Stomach caused indigestion and dyspepsia, but the truth is exactly the opposite. Indigestion causes catarrh. Repeated attacks of Indigestion inflames the mucous membranes lining the stomach and exposes the nerves of the stomach, thus causing the glands to secrete mucin instead of the juices of natural digestion. This is called Catarrh of the Stomach.

Kodol Dyspepsia Cure

relieves all inflammation of the mucous membranes lining the stomach, protects the nerves, and cures bad breath, sour risings, a sense of fullness after eating, indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach troubles.

Plant City, Fla., July 25, 1905

Editor Banner—I desire to say a few words to the people of my old home by your permission, through the Banner. I am glad to see that the subscribers to the Banner are still increasing, it is what the paper deserves for more reasons than I will have space to give.

We have nothing of special interest in this section of Florida except the health of the people is good, no sickness in the country that I know. I gathered a wagon load of corn today dry enough to shell. I notice that farmers are gathering up beef cattle and shipping, and most of this beef did not cost the owner anything as it was raised in the woods without feed.

Nothing much said about politics in this country, it is all one way—Bryan Democrats, of course there are enough Republicans to hold the Federal offices, but they are very quiet, they do not blow as the Republicans in some other sections do, they have tried a few times and were blowed out, and it seems they are satisfied with the Federal offices.

I have been close at home most of the time since I came to this country, and I enjoy it. I have been invited, and will speak tonight in Plant City to the order of Patriotic Sons of America. I do not know much of the order, but they invited me and gave me the subject "Patriotism," and I am going to do my level best, sink or swim, survive or perish. I am all alone now, my wife and grand-baby are visiting up there, and I would be delighted to be there and shake hands with many of the friends for whom I still have a warm place in my heart. But I may never see them any more, and one thing I wish to assure them that all the little petty abuses that any of them may have heaped upon me on account of politics are things of the past with me, I put them behind, and I think only of the kinder and better things and all the people have my kindest and best wishes for their success and highest attainment for good in this lite, and happiness in the world to come.

Sincerely,
S. M. ADAMS.

P. S. I hope every yonng man in Chilton will preserve the article of Mr F. A. Gulledge in the Banner some months ago. S. M. A.

District 32.

Dear Editor—Please let me say a few words in your paper in regard to the piece which I saw written by "Old Fogey." and the answer to it written by Prof. Strock.

I am sorry that Mr. "Fogey" represented our children as being so ignorant, for I think we have as intelligent children in District 32 as could be found in any district in Coosa county or any other county, no matter how far into the "Backwoods" you were to go. I don't believe that Mr. "Fogey" could find any teacher in the "Backwoods" of Coosa that could do any more for our children than the teachers we have, and I won't believe it until he proves it. I know not how the schools were taught 25 years ago, for that was several years before I was born; but I do know that the schools taught now are far superior to the schools taught even when I first entered school, and the teachers are much better prepared for teaching than they were then.

I do heartily endorse the letter written by Prof. Strock, in answer to Mr. "Fogey," as I believe Mr. Strock is a a man whose whole desire is for the uplifting of the educational interest in our country.

We also have a seven months' school to begin in District 32, sometime in October, and we expect to have a large and interesting school. Good bye, Mr. "Fogey."

CLANTON, ALA.

Why do trials last so much longer than they did? asks the Law Journal. That they have grown more protracted cannot be doubted. Lord Justice Vaughan Williams is candid enough to admit that judges, as well as barristers, talk rather too much.

The North China Daily News is responsible for the statement that the provincial government are tampering in a wholesale manner with the currency. The old-fashioned copper cash with the square holes are being called in and melted down into ten-cash pieces containing only the amount of metal in four of the old pieces. There are said to be twenty mints at work, and large quantities of copper are being imported from Japan and the American Pacific coast. The profits of the transaction are enormous, and the customs having been ordered to accept the new coins, as also the tax collectors, they are readily taken by the people.

The terrific chastisement of Russia enforces at least this moral, that bad government at home is a condition most unfavorable for success in wars abroad, says the New York Times. There is no natural reason why an autocrat should not wage war with brilliant success—indeed, in history autocratic rulers have been great warriors. But if an autocrat is to make war it is in the highest degree necessary that his autocracy should be efficient, that he should be a man of first-rate capacity in civil business. The example of the Czar of Russia, whose Government is one of the very worst in the world, makes all that very plain, indeed.

The President is right. The nation with an efficient navy has the most effective guarantee of peace, opines the Nashville American. Most wars are decided by sea power. The fate of the Civil War was probably decided by the United States navy. Spain was defeated by Dewey and Sampson. The most decisive battle btween Japan and Russia has just been fought on water. The great power of England lies in her mighty navy. Many wars have been decided by sea fighting. A nation without a navy has small voice in the world's affairs. The United States needs no large standing army, but it will find a strong navy more effective in protecting its rights and interests and in making for peace.

Some important questions are raised by a writer in Harper's Weekly who considers, apropos of an article by Mr. F. C. Penfield in the North American Review, the subject of the future paying capacity of the Panama Canal. It is calculated that the minimum annual cost of maintaining and operating the waterway will be $13,000,000. If the same tolls are charged as at Suez ($1.70 per ton on vessel tonnage), a business of 7,500,000 tons—about the amount of England's annual tonnage that passes through the Suez Canal—will yield not more than $12,750,000 yearly, which will mean for Panama an annual deficit of almost a third of a million dollars. It should also be borne in mind that Panama's earnings from passengers can never be considerable.

Will some one who has a genius for statistics, and is not a liar, reckon up all the money that is spent in the United States for hospitals, old people's homes, orphan asylums, general charities, pensions of all kinds, military, naval and civil, together with the property and income of all aid societies—everything, in fact, which relates to the support of the delinquent and dependent, the aged and poor of every kind—and tell us how far these sums would go toward giving a pension to every man and woman in the United States past sixty years of age? inquires the Christian Register. It would certainly give every one a pension that would have an appreciable value in warding off cold and hunger. We believe that a truthful statistician, gathering all the facts, and making a fair division of the income and a fair estimate of the number of men and women more than sixty years of age, would make a good case for a proposal to pool all charities and give definite pensions to all persons of due age. The Chinese make the pensioning of the elders an obligation in every family. At sixty the father is compelled to go out of business, and his children are compelled to support him. This reduces competition, and lays upon those who are supported in their childhood the duty of returning the gift in the old age of their parents.

ALABAMA STATE EVENTS.

Items of Interest Gathered as They Transpire Over the Entire State.

An Alleged Bigamist.

Wetumpka, Ala.—A white man by the name of Caldwell is lodged in the Wetumpka jail on a charge which is an unusual one in Elmore county. Caldwell came to the Beatsville neighborhood some years ago, settled there and married an Elmore county girl. They are now the parents of an attractive child. Some time ago an advertisement giving the description of a man appeared in the Atlanta Constitution. As the description fitted Caldwell exactly, a neighbor answered the advertisement and it developed that the man's wife, the mother of two of his children, is living in South Carolina. Sheriff Robbins was apprised of the situation and acting with promptness drove over to Beatsville and returned with a prisoner charged with bigamy.

Shooting at Epes.

Livingston, Ala.—A report reached here Thursday night of a serious shooting at Epes in this county. One Dr. Cook shot and seriously wounded a Mr. Lewis of that place. The particulars of the difficulty are not given, but it is understood that Dr Cook was drinking and after having had some trouble with Mr. Lewis approached him again when the difficulty was revived. Lewis is reported to have been shot through, besides having received several blows from the pistol in the hands of Dr. Cook. Dr. Cook was held under a bond of one thousand dollars. The recovery of Lewis is considered somewhat doubtful.

Squadron Reviewed.

Montgomery, Ala.—The review of the First cavalry squadron, A. N. G., by Brigadier General Louis V. Clark, was the most brilliant military affair seen in Montgomery during the last three weeks, during which time the citizen soldiery of Alabama has been in full possession of the capital.

Reviews as a general thing are very prosaic affairs. The one of Thursday was anything else. There was a medley of color, of movement, and of martial things that would delight the hearts of the most practical.

A gay crowd assembled to watch the maneuvers. The sides of the parade ground were lined with Montgomerians of every class and description. Society and the military mingled and there was a generous outpouring of ex-Confederates, who came to see how the boys of today rode.

Building at Albertville.

Albertville, Ala.—Albertville's burned district is being rapidly cleared up and the work of rebuilding will commence in a few days. Several handsome brick stores will be built instead of the frame buildings destroyed by the recent fire.

Riggs Bros. are already at work with a large force of hands building a large brick store to replace the one burned recently.

J. P. Emmett is having excavations made for the erection of a mammoth threestory brick structure just north of the Bank of Albertville.

Conductor Arrested.

Decatur, Ala.—Acting under instructions issued from State quarantine headquarters, Chief Inspector of Quarantine Wallace effected the arrest of Southern Railroad Conductor Martin Payne at the union station here on Thursday afternoon. Payne was arrested on two warrants sworn out by Chief Inspector Wallace, one in Colbert and the other in Madison county. The warrants charge that Conductor Payne illegally ejected from his train Quarantine Officers Lem Jones at Leighton and John Almon at Huntsville. At the time the officers were in the discharge of their duty, acting under state law. Constable John B. Hinds served both warrants on Conductor Payne.

Local Southern Railroad Attorney S T. Wert was present at the station with bonds ready for Payne. Each bond was for $200. Payne was allowed to take his train on to Chattanooga after the warrants were served and the bonds properly filled out. The train was only delayed a few minutes.

End of the Artillery Encampment.

Montgomery, Ala.—Camp Robert F. Ligon, which has for the past six days harbored the First artillery, Alabama National Guard, ceased to exist at 4:50 o'clock Thursday morning. At that minute a bugle was blown and every tent in the camp was struck.

The men of the battalion and the camp were given a careful inspection by Inspector General R. F. Ligon and Captain J. C. Goodfellow. The camp was found to be cleanly and wholesome and the men and the equipment made a fine showing.

No Huntsville Quarantine.

Huntsville, Ala.—It is very improbable that Huntsville will quarantine against any of the districts infected with yellow fever. The plague does not excite terror here. During every epidemic in past years refugees have been welcomed here and no case of the disease has ever been communicated to resident citizens, although the fever developed among the refugees.

On Trial at Gadsden.

Gadsden, Ala.—The preliminary trial of L. H. Pinkerton and Oscar Brown, the two white men charged with the murder of Bill Smith, the negro barber, was commenced before Judge C. D. Clark Wednesday and is still on trial. There are some twenty-five witnesses in the case and so far only about ten have been examined. John R. Lowe, who is driver of the fire engine of the Gadsden fire company, was standing in his door when the shooting took place and swore positively that Pinkerton did the shooting. and G. W. Ensley, who was with Pinkerton and Brown, swears that Pinkerton did the shooting. No evidence has been brought out against Brown, who is defended by Colonel B. H. Nicholson.

Brewton Taking Steps.

Brewton, Ala.—A meeting of the Escambia County Board of Health was held here Thursday afternoon to discuss the yellow fever situation. and as a result the mayor and town council were requested to have the day and night marshals meet all trains and question passengers coming in and see that none are allowed to stop in Brewton who have been in the fever infected district.

There is no particular uneasiness on the part of the people here, but it is fully expected that they will assist in every way in putting the town in a good sanitary condition.

Farmers' Institute.

Auburn, Ala.—The third day's session of the Farmers' Summer School was marked by the record-breaking attendance since the establishment of the school three years ago. The actual number of farmers in attendance is 149. In addition to the representatives from thirty-three counties in the state there is quite a delegation present from the state of Georgia. The attendance includes representatives of fruit growing, stock breeding, truck gardening, and those engaged in the raising of the ordinary staples of cotton and corn. The county of Chilton is the banner county, with fifteen representatives present. Among many representative farmers present are J. M. Thornton, of Talladega; J. J. Robinson, Jr., of Lafayette; J. P. Maxwell, of Dallas county; Mr. Whitfield, of Marengo county; Mr. Dixon, Escambia county. A large representation is also present from Clarke county. The experiment stations at Athens, Albertville, Evergreen and Wetumpka are represented.

Queer Case at Girard.

Girard, Ala.—The judicial minds of Magistrates L. F. Knowles and Chas. Pittman, of this city, are puzzled over rather a queer case. John Griggs, a 17-year-old white boy, was arraigned before them yesterday on a charge of skinning a cow belonging to Miss Annie Hunt and selling the hide. He promptly pleaded guilty.

It seems that there is no law to cover this particular offense in the manner the magistrates would like. They reserved their decision for a few days. Homer Cheek, another boy was charged with the same offense, but his trial was postponed.

Hale Was Respited.

Montgomery, Ala.—Because it is definitely known that Wesley Hale, a negro condemned to die on the scaffold in Birmingham on August 4 will be a valuable witness in an important case now pending in Jefferson county, he was on Thursday given a respite of sixty days by Governor Jelks in order that he may testify. He will testify against Andrew Shelton, suspected of being an accomplice of Hale. The respite was recommended by Judge D. A. Greene and Solicitor H. D. Heflin, of the Jefferson county criminal court.

Decatur's Progress.

Decatur, Ala.—On September 1 the new Carnegie library, costing $10,000, will be opened to the public. The arrangements have already been made for securing the books. On the day of opening there will be appropriate ceremonies. This is one of the finest buildings in the city.

The work on the new opera house for New Decatur has been started. The building will cost $20,000. It is being erected by a private stock company and it is expected that it will be open to the public by September 1, next. The stage will be on the first floor and there will be a gallery and balcony. At the present time there is not an opera house in either Decatur or New Decatur.

Within the next few weeks the new city hall for New Decatur will be completed. The building will be two stories high, built of brick, and will cost $5,000.

Close of Convention.

Huntsville, Ala.—The Madison County Sunday School Convention adjourned Friday afternoon after a session of two days. Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: George T. Marsh, president; W. H. Pettus, recording secretary and statistical secretary; A. H. Turner, treasurer; executive committee, E. E. Pettus, chairman; N. M. Rowe, L. W. Prosser, A. M. Booth, S. I. Terry.

To Be in Shape Again.

Talladega, Ala.—The insurance companies have sent their adjustors and settled with the state for the losses sustained by the recent fire that destroyed the shops of the School for the Deaf and Dumb of this city.

Work was at once begun in tearing down the old walls and clearing off the new site for another building. The new building will be of brick, two stories in height, and 50x100 feet in dimensions. It will be built further back and made as near fireproof as possible.

Orders have been placed for new and improved machinery, which will be put in as soon as the walls are ready for it, and the hope is to have it as near ready as possible for the next session. Mr. McDonald says he hopes to have a model shop of it, since it has to be rebuilt.

Changes in Tuscumbia Offices.

Tuscumbia, Ala.—Two important changes on the Memphis division of the Southern railway have been announced, effective August 1. Frank A. Devere, chief train dispatcher, has been transferred to the Mobile division, of which he has been made trainmaster, with headquarters at Selma. Mr. Devere has been in the service of the Southern for seventeen years, most of which time has been spent in the train master's office at Tuscumbia, he having been train dispatcher for fifteen years, the last four as chief.

R. C. Bibb, local agent at this point, has been promoted to the Huntsville agency of the Memphis division, which ranks second to that of Memphis in importance and salary. Mr. Bibb came to Tuscumbia from Leighton less than two years ago and his transfer to Huntsville is the second promotion within two years. He is to be succeeded at Tuscumbia by S. H. Hunt, local agent at Scottsboro.

Big Farmers' Meeting.

Anniston, Ala.—In compliance with the call of Capt. James Crook, president of the Calhoun County Association of Southern Cotton Planters, there will be a picnic and grand rally at Oxford Lake on Saturday, August 12th, to discuss the present conditions and future prospects of the cotton crop in this and adjoining counties.

Harvie Jordan, of Monticello, Ga., president of the Southern Cotton Association, and one of the largest cotton planters in the south, will be present to address the people on the work of the association. Hon. Sydney J. Bowie has consented to address the gathering as will Captain Crook and others who are well conversant with the needs and conditions of the southern planters.

Played Old Joke on Him.

New Decatur, Ala.—J. B. Butler, a young man from New York, came here a few days ago to take the position of bookkeeper at Cathcart's saw mill. He told the boys about the mill that he had hunted big game in the Adirondacks, etc. The other boys asked him if he had ever hunted snipe. He said he had not, but would like to do so The other night a party was arranged, a hack secured and Butler was taken by the crowd to Blue Springs, about four miles from the city, where he was given the bag to hold. He got back to the city the best he could after the crowd had left him. It was about day, however, when Butler arrived in town. He never caught on to the joke, but said he did not care to stay in a place where brother hunters would run off and leave him to walk home. After arriving in town Butler caught the first train for New York city.

Florida Not to be Quarantined.

Montgomery, Ala.—Alabama will not quarantine Tampa or any section of Florida on the strength of the single case of yellow fever on record in that city. It is the opinion of Dr. W. H. Sanders, state health officer, that there is no urgent need to put a ban on the Florida city if there is no spread of the disease. Such a recommendation was communicated Friday to Governor Jelks in Blount Springs, and although there have been reports that Tampa would be restricted, no action will be taken on the part of the state.

Negro Endeavorers.

Montgomery, Ala.—At the second day's session of the Varick Christian Endeavor Society prominent visitors were present and made speeches. Bishop J. W. Alstrock, D. D. conducted the devotional exercises Thursday morning, assisted by Rev. William Finley, P. E., of Gainesville district, and Rev. M. S. Cast, the poet of the state.

Dies on Operating Table.

Selma, Ala.—J. T. Evans, Jr., fireman at the Estelle cotton mills, died of chloroform Friday night on the operating table of a local infirmary. The drug had been administered preparatory to an operation in a comparatively safe case, but appears to have been given in too great quantities. Deceased was 28 years of age.

Dies from Gas in the Well.

Greenville, Ala.—A negro named Ed Womack was preparing to blast a rock at the bottom of a sixty-foot well on the plantation of C. E. Hamilton, near town, and did not know of the presence of gas until he had been lowered into the well. He called to his assistant at the windlass to draw him up, but before he reached the surface was overcome by the gas and expired. He was a good negro.

DEATH LIST SMALLER

Work of Sanitation, Fumigation, Screening and Oiling Proceeds With Vigor.

Mississippi Is Drawing Lines Tighter, But Texas Raises the Quarantine Against State.

New Orleans.—The work of sanitation, fumigation, oiling and screening will continue daily until the city has been thoroughly screened and made mosquito-proof. The record for several days shows little change except in the reduction of the number of deaths.

The number of new foci is also again a source of encouragement showing that the spread is becoming slower and slower. A new complication was disclosed Sunday, when Superintendent Curran, of the New Orleans and Northeastern railroad, announced that two passengers who had remained the required length of time in the Slidell detention camp, and sought admission into Mississippi, had been turned back. If the Mississippi health authorities now refuse admission to holders of certificates of detention issued by the marine hospital service, it will result in the government abandoning these camps, and then travelers will have to either stay here or go to points in the north and east and spend ten days before they can return to Mississippi.

Troops Doing Guard Duty.

The location of the Louisville and Nashville camp has not yet been fixed but Dr. Guiteras hopes to get in communication with Adjutant General Fridge, of Mississippi, who is in charge of the state quarantine on the gulf coast, and finally arrange the matter. The Mississippi troops are now doing guard duty on the coast.

City Health Officer Kohnke, who is in immediate charge of the situation in the city, and who has been subjected to some criticism from various sources, at request gave out the following statement which shows how the authorities handled the infection as soon as it was discovered:

Tells of Discovery of Cases.

"The first intimation of yellow fever in New Orleans was had on July 13 when two physicians reported two cases of illness resembling in their judgment yellow fever, which cases were submitted to the president of the state board of health at his office. The health officer of the city was summoned immediately, and the cases reported, one being already dead at the time, were by him considered, for sanitary purposes, actual yellow fever and the premises were treated accordingly that is, the disinfecting methods employed were those against yellow fever infection The diagnosis of these cases being judged a matter for later consideration, the health officer immediately instituted an investigation of the neighborhood suspected of infection, and this investigation disclosed evidence pointing to prior cases in the same neighborhood.

"All means were employed against yellow fever infection wherever suspicion pointed. In a few days it was learned that several squares were infected, apparently to a degree justifying the fumigation of every house for the possibly existing infected mosquito. The neighborhood operated on is almost wholly inhabited by an Italian population, many of whom are intimately connected with the handling of bananas and the unloading of such cargoes from fruit ships arriving from Central American ports. Every means was employed from soft persuasion to brutal force to reach infected places, and the wholesale fumigation was in progress during a period of ten days or more, during which period an autopsy demonstrated the nature of the disease which must have begun at some time during the second half of May."

Removed Their Domiciles.

"From the infected neighborhood at varying times residents removed their domiciles to other sections of the city, and in this way cases of the disease developed in persons infected in the Italian districts, but residing in other districts at the time of the appearance of the first symptom. Today there are a few cases in persons not connected in any known way with the infected district and all cases of the disease known to exist are isolated, and subjected to the proper measures of prevention based on the mosquito law of yellow fever transmission.

"The spread of the disease has not been as great as was at first feared, and hope is entertained that it may be controlled. Besides the sanitary work done by the authorities in neighborhoods containing cases of the disease, the citizens generally are enthusiastically engaged in ridding this city of the yellow fever mosquito by the oiling of water surfaces, and the fumigation of dwellings of this being to render

Jackson, Tenn.—The notorious negro who has almost caused a reign of terror in Jackson the past three weeks by entering houses almost nightly at all hours is now in jail. His name is Joe Lewis, and he was captured at an early hour Friday morning by Walter Merritt, a young Illinois Central engineer, while the negro was crawling through the weeds in the yard of J. W. Martin to enter the residence. He was turned over to the police and later confessed.

FUSS AND FEATHERS

By NANCY WHITTAKER.

"DID you turn out the cow, and put the geese in the stable, Isaac?" said the Widow Havens to her son, as they sat down to the breakfast table one fine summer morning.

"Yes, mother," was the reply, "and guess I can master that old gander this time. I'm getting so big. You know he knocked me down with his wings the last time we picked 'em."

"Yes, I remember, and Squire Hoffman came right in the middle of it, and that calf and I, in my old ragged gown mortified to death, was hindered a whole hour, showing him the dairy and the garden. And now, Hannah," turning to her daughter, a pretty girl of sixteen, "if anybody comes to-day before we get through, tell them I can't see them; for I wouldn't be bothered with company when I am in such a plight. This old gown is all in slits, but I can't afford to spoil a better one. You may wash the dishes, Hannah," she continued, when breakfast was over, "and set the rooms to rights, and by and by put on the pot and get the dinner a-going; and by that time I hope we shall be through. Come, Isaac, we will go."

Now, everybody has seen feathers, but there are some who do not know where they come from, and softly repose upon their downy beds without a thought about the cruel way in which the best ones are obtained. They pick live geese feathers when they moult, without knowing what it means. I wish such a one could have seen Mrs. Havens and Ike marching to the barn, with a big basket, a cloth to tie over it, an old chair, and one of Ike's outgrown stockings to put over a goose's head, to keep her from biting while she is picked.

To see Ike run the whole flock up into a corner of the stable, catch one by the neck and wings, and then with his black eyes sparkling with delight, and his freckled face and suspiciously red head all aglow, with the triumph of a picture as he marched across the floor to lay it gently, but squawking terribly, in his mother's lap, was rather amusing.

Boys are cruel! there's no denying it; else they so love to catch geese and birds, and fish and game, just for the fun of it, sometimes letting them go, and putting the fish back in the water, because they do not want them, after the triumph of capture is over. Ike, who was a smart, mischievous boy of twelve, loved to do all these things, though he was not particularly ugly, and had really a very soft place in his generous heart.

But while Hannah in the neat white cottage is cooking the dinner, and Mrs. Havens in the stable is tearing the feathers in big handfuls from the poor goose—side, back and front, and Isaac climbing haymows hunting eggs, and getting up all sorts of pranks between whiles, another actor is on his way to the busy scene.

This was Squire Hoffman, a rich farmer, who lived two or three miles away, whose road to town took him very often past the Widow Haven's cottage. Being an observing man, he had noticed the neatness, and look of care and thrift that always surrounded it; and more than this, that the widow had handsome black eyes and trim figure, as she sat up stiffly in her pew of a Sunday, giving Ike an occasional nudge, or pinch, to keep him in order, yet all the time looking at the minister, and no doubt hearing all he said.

As the squire had been a widower several years, this must be excused, especially when we consider that his only daughter, Grace Hoffman, was about to be married, and go to a home of her own. As he was a good-looking, large-framed, big-hearted, benevolent-looking man, with three large farms and money in the bank, we must confess that he was considered a pretty good catch among the widows and maidens, if he once made up his mind to marry again.

And it was of this very thing he was thinking as seated on Selim, his handsome black horse, he rode toward town on this particular July morning.

"I really don't know what I had better do," he soliloquized. "There is Grace going to leave me, and I can't say a word against it, she has got such a noble fellow in the one she loves, and the very one I would have chosen for her. But there's nobody left but Aunt Dinah in the kitchen, good old soul, but just no company at all for me. And here I am, not fifty years old, and I may live twenty or thirty years yet, healthy as I am, and must I live all that time alone, with nobody to care for, and nobody to care for me? It's all nonsense. I declare I won't do it if I can find anyone to marry me.

"But who shall it be? There's the Widow Spriggins, good-looking, no children to bother one, smart, tidy and with a nice farm of her own; but such a temper, sharp as steel, and keen as a razor. I guess a little too keen for me. A man wants a little peace in the decline of his life, if ever; and he'd have none with the Widow Spriggins. Then there is Miss Molly Hopkins—a nice, likely pious woman as ever was, but very homely, and I don't fancy her one bit. And theres that young Widow Drake, pretty and languishing, and languishing all the time over at my pew, I do believe. But she isn't the kind for me. Dolly Weaver is a nice woman, but a little too old, and Polly Peppercorn is too young.

"But there is the Widow Havens, handsome as a picture, and neat and smart, and thrifty enough to pay her way twice over. There are those two young ones, to be sure, but they need not be in the way at all. Hannah is just such a girl as one likes to see around, busy as a bee, rosy as the morning, and cheery as a little canary, and, indeed, sings about as sweetly. I can see that Sam is casting sheep's eyes at her already, every time he comes home for a vacation, and I don't blame him a bit. They're not as rich as some, but we have enough, and who cares. I always did like that boy Ike. If his face is freckled, and his head red, he will make a smart man yet. He is chock full of fun and smartness, with steam enough to burst a common boiler. I want just such a boy on the farm all the time, to run of errands, get up the cows, feed the poultry, go to mill, drive horse to plow, and a hundred other things I don't think of just now. And that reminds me that I need just such a boy dreadfully, just now, to rake hay and do chores, while we are mowing. I wonder if the widow couldn't spare him a few days."

By this time the squire had got just opposite Mrs. Havens's barn, and upon the spur of the moment he rode right into the shed beside it, that faced the highway, intending to hitch Selim, and to go into the house to ask the widow for her boy. But just as he had dismounted, and was hanging his bridle over the hook, he heard a shout of laughter and the ring of voices close at hand. There was a window-hole close by, cut for ventilation of the stables, and looking through it he saw a sight that made him want to join in the chorus.

For there sat the widow in her torn gown, with a goose in her lap, busily ripping off the feathers in great handfuls, and with a handkerchief over her head to keep them out of her hair, looking smart, energetic and rosy, and ready to explode with laughter, while upon a hen-coop, near at hand, stood Ike, in the very act of delivering an oration. The fact was, the last time he went to town with his mother he went into the court-house, and listened to a lawyer's plea in a case in which he had been interested, and since then he had been full of it. And now he had just been and marked out a great image on the stable wall to represent the judge, and a dozen others, close by, of smaller dimensions, for the jury, while his clients, the flock of geese, were the plaintiff, and his mother, their tormentor, the defendant; and just then he was putting in the closing plea:

"Now, your honor knows that these poor clients of mine are all the more to be pitied, and have all the more need to have justice done them for being weak and simple folks, so gentle and lamb-like that they would never harm anything bigger than a fly, or a pollywog, while that wicked woman, the defendant"—and he pointed fiercely at his mother—"is strong and cruel as the grave. You have just listened, your honor, and you gentlemen of the jury"—and he gave his hand a lofty yet graceful wave toward them—"to the evidence just brought into court, and can you doubt that it is abundantly proved that she feloniously, and by force of arms, and with full intent, seized and overpowered them, every one of them, and ruthlessly tore the hair and skin from their backs—the feathers, you know—and deliberately and cruelly shut out the light of heaven from their eyes with an old blinder made of wool, and abused them in the most shocking and shameful way, for which wicked treatment she has made herself amenable to that statute enacted for the prevention of cruelty to animals. I leave the case in your hands, gentlemen of the jury, knowing that you will be sure to do justice to the cause of the oppressed, and see the laws of your country faithfully executed;" and, with a sweeping bow to judge and jury, the young orator jumped from his rostrum, or, in reality, turned a somersault from it, over to the stable floor, landing on his feet, amid cheers and bravos of one at least of his audience, and the squawks of two at least of his clients.

He rebounded like a shot at the sound of the applause, and looking up suddenly, there stood the squire in the doorway, laughing loudly at the amusing performance.

"Well done, my boy!" he exclaimed, heartily; "you acted it to perfection, and I'm sure you'll be equal to the best of them one of these days."

Ashamed and crestfallen to be caught, Ike slunk away, with his cheeks blazing and the freckles brighter than ever, while his mother's face flushed hotly, and straightened in an instant, for about the same reasons; and in her agitation and surprise she jumped up, and came near letting go the half-picked client. She sat down again, however, with a bow to the squire, that might be considered a very stiff and awkward one.

"I hope you don't think we pick geese here every day, squire," she said, "though I think you caught us at it once before."

"Yes, but it's work that must be done, Mrs. Havens. I hope, however, that my presence here will not be considered an intrusion. I had no idea of playing the eavesdropper when I rode into the shed just now, but, really, your young lawyer was so amusing that I couldn't help it. That boy will make a smart and talented man one of these days, Mrs. Havens, you see if he doesn't; and that reminds me that I called to see if you could spare him a few days. We want such a boy just now very much, and I will give him good wages."

"Well, that is just as you and he can agree. Our little hoeing and mowing is done, thank fortune, and he can go if he likes. He is a smart boy, if I do say it; but he has the queerest notions in his head. He and Hannah both take after their father, and love their books a little too well. They both read every spare minute, and Ike has a notion that he wants to go to college, like your Samuel. Now, with our poverty, the idea is preposterous; and yet here I have been like a fool all the morning trying to encourage and help him contrive how to do it, just to please him."

"And how was that?" said the squire, smiling, as he helped himself without asking to a seat on the milking-stool, in the most familiar and neighborly way.

"Well, in the first place, feathers are a dollar a pound, and Ike had a notion that there might be great profit in stocking the little farm with geese. Then when I raised some objections, he concluded that picking and selling berries, and catching birds and game, would do a great deal, and that by keeping school and raising strawberries we could do the rest, and school Hannah into the bargain. So we are going to set the strawberries right away, a plan I was willing to encourage, as I knew it might be very profitable.

"There, that goose is done, but where is Isaac, I'd like to know?"

And going to the door, she let out the goose and called loudly for the boy to catch another, as she explained to the squire.

"Pray, let him go, Mrs. Havens," said the squire, good-humoredly. "You are almost through, and I would just as lief catch you one as not," and suiting the action to the word, he walked over, and caught the smallest one, and laid it in Mrs. Havens' lap. Then he walked back, and, catching the old gander, the father of the flock, in spite of his loud and animated remonstrances, he went back, and sitting down upon the stool, laid him across his knee, and in spite of his naked head, and wrathful demonstrations, proceeded very leisurely and scientifically, to strip off his coat.

"You see, Mrs. Havens," he said, "that I am an old hand at the business, as my wife never did it, and so it always fell to me, or Dinah, or both. But the house became full of beds, and I soon tired of it, and sold off my flock."

"As I would mine if we didn't need the profits for clothes, and schooling for the children—especially if Ike has to go to college. I guess it will take a good many pounds of feathers to send him there," said she.

"Supposing I should tell you of a better way," said the squire, earnestly, and with a slight blush. "Here you have a snug little place that might bring a thousand dollars or so; and off there, I have more land than I well know what to do with. Now, my daughter Grace is about to leave me; and my home will be without a mistress, and myself without any congenial society. Now, I like you better than any other woman I know of, and if you would become my wife, and the mistress of my establishment, I think we could arrange matters nicely. Then you could sell this little place, and put the money in the bank, against the time Isaac would want to go to college, and Hannah, who is one of the sweetest girls I know, could live with us, go to school to the village academy, and be well provided for by us when she marries. Now, what do you say to my plan?"

"That I will consider it seriously," said the widow, with flaming cheeks, eyes cast down, and a very nervous pull at the feathers.

And Ike just at this juncture crawled out slyly from behind an old barrel, in the manger, crept cautiously out at the door, without being perceived by the blushing pair of lovers, and ran to the house, to tell the news to the astonished Hannah, with a good many eloquent additions and explanations.

The squire finally came in to dinner, and afterward pursued his journey to town; and the widow did think of it to such purpose that she soon after became his wife.

Her place was sold, as the squire proposed; Ike went to college, rubbed off the freckles, and eventually became one of the smartest lawyers in the State; while pretty Hannah married Samuel—the only son—and lived with the old folks at the homestead.—New York Weekly.

Not Intended For Use.

There are some things which no man can ever learn, no matter how intelligent and earnest a student he may be.

"My dear, you look perfectly discouraged," said little Mrs. Nash's most intimate friend. "What is the matter?"

"I am perfectly discouraged," said Mrs. Nash, tearfully. "You know that foot-rest with the handsome embroidered top that I gave George for Christmas? Well, I've noticed it had begun to look almost a little shabby, and I couldn't imagine why, for it stands away from the windows, and I've taken great care of it. And when I came down earlier than usual from putting Janey to bed last night, what do you suppose I saw?"

The friend shook her head hopelessly.

"I found," said Mrs. Nash, with bitterness, "that George Nash had taken that footstool out into the centre of the room, near his Morris chair, and had put his feet—with his boots on, too—right on it!"—Youth's Companion.

One Girl's Independence.

By Elizabeth Westwood.

A MEMBER of Vassar's graduation class, the daughter of a Chicago capitalist, is noted for her generosity and prodigal liberality. A short time ago, her father, who is self-made, began to fear that his daughter did not appreciate the value of money. She promptly wrote demanding that her allowance be stopped and set to work more as a joke than for any other reason, to see just how much she could do for herself. She had spent several years in Europe when a child, and spoke French and German with such ease that she always elected a course in one or the other that might prove a rebate on study expended in other directions. Consequently she secured several patrons in the city whom she visited weekly to converse amiably and instructively with her children in whichever language they choose.

At home she had an excellent French maid, whose operations she had often watched with interest. She put up a sign announcing "Shampoo at twenty-five cents, manicuring at fifteen cents; latest and most approved methods. Buy a book of tickets and save money." She opened a boot-blacking stand and impressed her lazy room-mate into service. They who had formerly slept until getting any breakfast was a gamble, now rose at dawn and disposed of long rows of boots.

The girl's father, among other things, was an officer of an express company. Weekly her laundry was franked home that her dainty garments might not be ruined in the college laundry. This suggested yet another industry. She became a laundress of turnovers and fine handkerchiefs. The ten-cent store furnished the outfit at a price that would have delighted the Salvation Army, and she made enough out of it to pay her bill at the grocery store—representing many a college spread. It happened to be near a basketball game. She rented a sewing machine and went into the flag business, making 80 per cent on each pennant. At the end of the month she sent her father an account of her career, which so pleased that gentleman—he had just won a victory over his board of directors—that he came on and took her and her friends to New York, where the time of their lives was theirs for the asking. His alarms were so successfully quieted that he begged her to give up business for the present and let him support her until she finished college.—Public Opinion.

Health Conditions In The Canal Zone

By Col. W. C. Gorgas, U. S. A.

I THINK it is fair to make this summary; that, taking March as an average, both in numbers of men and mortality, we have lost by death during the first year of our work 14.66 per thousand of our men (which, for 9,000 men, would mean 132 deaths); and we have sickness to the extent of 401 per thousand, which, for the whole force, would give 3,605 sick. Taking the French mortality for their first year, as showing what would have occurred with no sanitary precautions, we would have had, instead of 132 deaths, 620 deaths; instead of 3,605 sick, 5,850 sick. Now this, it seems to me, clearly means that our sanitary work for this first year has saved 488 lives and 2,238 cases of sickness.

Now, as to the measures that we claim to have been instrumental in this saving of human life, on the isthmus, we find, from reading of the experiences of our predecessors, that the two principal diseases to be feared are malaria and yellow fever; our measures, therefore, have been directed against these diseases. The authorities of the Panama Republic placed the sanitation of the towns of Colon and Panama in our charge. We have established health departments in these towns, cleaned the streets, collected the garbage, ditched and oiled all the districts possible, for the destruction of mosquitoes, covered all fresh water receptacles in the city of Panama, and fumigated the whole town from one end to the other for the destruction of infected mosquitoes.

At this writing, April 18, we have not a single case of yellow fever in the city of Panama, the last case having occurred March 23; and while it is premature to make any statement yet with regard to the extermniation of yellow fever, I personally believe that we have seen the last case of yellow fever in Panama.—Harper's Weekly.

Our Tonic Air.

One Reason Why We Have the Best Weather Service in the World.

By Gilbert H. Grosvenor.

WHEN the amazed European asks us what makes the sluggish mind of the immigration to stir and waken in the United States, and then to climb, at first hesitatingly, but soon with vigor and confidence to the top round in the ladder of success, we are accustomed to reply, "It's in the air;" and we are right. The spirit which fired our fathers to cross the wide Atlantic, and which in less or equal degree still animates the thousands annually seeking our shores, is fed and fanned by the cold winds from the northwest.

The cold wave is born in the heavens miles above our heads, usually over the Rocky Mountain plateau. Suddenly a mass of bitterly cold air will tumble down upon Montana. It rushes down as though poured through an enormous funnel. As it falls it gains momentum, and, reaching the earth, spreads over the Mississippi Valley and then over the Atlantic States, covering them like a blanket. It scatters the foul, logy, breath-soaked atmosphere in our towns and cities, and puts ginger into the air. We fill our lungs with it and live. New waves are always coming, following each other in regular procession like the waves on a sea shore.

It is fitting, then, that meteorology, the science of the weather, should be a distinctly American product and that the people of the United States should have the best weather service in the world. The United States Government spends $1,500,000 a year on its Weather Bureau, which is more money than all the governments of Europe combined spend for similar service. It has a staff of many hundred skilled experts and trained observers who, in all parts of the country, are constantly on the watch to see what the heavens will bring forth.—The Century.

The Outdoor Life.

By Grover Cleveland.

THOUGH the delightful and passionate love for outdoor sports and recreation is not bestowed upon every one as a natural gift, they are so palpably related to health and vigor, and so inseparably connected with the work of life and comfort of existence, that it is happily ordained that a desire or willingness for their enjoyment may be cultivated to an extent sufficient to meet the requirements of health and self-care. In other words, all but the absolutely indifferent can be made to realize that outdoor air and activity, intimacy with nature and acquaintanceship with birds and animals and fish, are essential to physical and mental strength, under the exactions of an unescapable decree—

"For the good God who loveth us
He made and loveth all."

Men may accumulate wealth in neglect of this law; but how infinitely much they will forfeit, in the deprivation of wholesome vigor, in the loss of the placid fitness for the quiet joys and comforts of advancing years, and the displacement of contented age by the demon of querulous and premature decrepitude.

A Warrior's Pastime.

One of the many interesting features in the issue of "Printer's Pie," just published, is a symposium on the "Pastimes of Popular People." Major General R. S. Baden-Powell writes as follows:

"Apart from playing the bassoon—which I look upon as giving, par excellence, the best exercise for the intelligence and temper as well as for the minor physical organs, both inside and out—the pastime which appeals to me more than any other is that of modelling in clay. It is a nice and messy pursuit, and yet very clean. It is fascinating, and at the same time restful. For a busy man it is accommodating, because he can take it up or leave it at any moment—in his room or office, or even, as I have done, in the train. It beats golf in the number of iron or wooden tools which can be used in it, but which are none the more necessary to success.

"Personally," adds the major general, "I like it because the results of my efforts far transcend and surpass those of anybody else—in their total absence of merit."—Dundee Advertiser.

ORIGIN OF EARTHQUAKES.

FRESH LIGHT ON OBSCURE AND MYSTERIOUS SUBJECT.

The Scientific Study of Seismatic Disturbances is a Development of a Single Generation—Observation Now Being Made All Over the World.

Details are too meagre to enable us to judge of the full extent of the calamity which has befallen Cashmere and the Punjab, but, if the reports from Dharmsala are correct, the present earthquake is one of the most serious in recent years, possibly exceeding in the aggregate of its casualties the disturbances in the Riviera in 1887, the Ischia earthquake of 1883 and the disastrous visitation at Manila in 1880, while it may equal the more recent earthquake in Japan in 1891, when nearly 7,300 perished, in Bengal and Assam in 1897, when the deaths numbered 6,000, and in Russian Turkestan in 1902, when upward of 4,600 were killed.

These great disasters, appalling though they were, fade into comparative insignificance when contrasted with earlier earthquakes of which more or less accurate records have been preserved. To go no further back in history than the close of the seventeenth century, the earthquakes in Sicily, which in 1693 killed 100,000 of the inhabitants, may be recalled; and the century which followed was full of like horrors. Nearly 200,000 perished at Jeddo, Japan, in 1703; 95,000 in Pekin, in 1731, 40,000 in Cairo, in 1754, 33,000 in Gautemala, in 1773, nearly 60,000 in two Peruvian earthquakes, and, of course, the great Lisbon disaster of 1775, when from 35,000 to 50,000 perished in a few minutes, will not be forgotten.

In the nineteenth century, in addition to those to which allusion has already been made, the record must include the destruction of Aleppo, with 22,000 of its people, in 1822, and the various South American and West Indian visitations, which cost many thousands of lives.

In the nature of things minute records of great earthquakes have been preserved from remote periods, but the scientific study of the subject is a development almost of a single generation. Until instrumental methods of measuring the force, motion and direction of the earth v perfected, the actual w which was done was litt descriptive. At present all over the world are beh tized and co-ordinated, a modern seismology has mu and many problems to solve cleared away many misapprehe and given the world a clearer n of the causes which produce th great disasters.

The delicate observing instruments show that, instead of being occasional phenomena, earthquakes are going on pretty much all the time; it is only when the displacements are violent and the motion communicated to the earth's crust extremely rapid that they become at all dangerous.

There are various originating causes; volcanic action is one, but those resulting from dislocations of the earth's strata—due to inequalities of stress, the result of the shifting of loads by the denudation on land and sedimentation at sea—have been by far the most numerous and most impressive. While volcanic eruptions have undoubtedly caused earthquakes, the greater number can be traced to no such origin, the areas of instability in the earth's crust, and therefore of earthquake frequency, being those which present the greatest differences of topographic relief, not the greatest number of volcanoes.

Sometimes these dislocations or slips occur on the surface, sometimes far below, and the location and magnitude of the disturbance are measured by the direction, force and rapidity of the vibrations in the earth. It is only necessary to note that most of the great earthquakes which have shaken Japan had their centers not on the land, where there are many volcanoes, but on the great slope of the sea bottom which leads down to the Tuscarora Deep, to indicate the reasons for the theory which associates these phenomena with purely geologic forces.

If earthquakes are no more than elastic wave motions in the solid crust of the earth, seismologists are right to concentrate their efforts upon the investigation and measurement of those motions. They have already achieved marvelous results in tracing to their sources the vibrations which the seismographs reveal and record, and they will doubtless throw fresh light upon a subject which has long been mysterious and obscure.—Philadelphia Ledger.

ALABAMA PRESS ASSOCIATION.

It was a happy circumstance that caused the Alabama Press Association to hold its thirty-fourth annual session at Coden, for a more enjoyable and profitable meeting could hardly have been held. The very atmosphere of the Gulf coast is redolent with goodwill and fellowship, while the open-hearted hospitality of the citizens of Coden, Sans Souci and Bayou-la-Batre makes a sojourn among them a delight from the moment of arrival to the hour of leaving.

Wednesday evening, July 19, the members of the Association [illegible] oused at the Bienville hotel [illegible] bile, and the Mobilians, with [illegible] iberal spirit which character [illegible] all their actions, at once set [illegible] out entertaining them, add a [illegible] easant evening was spent at Monroe Park, on the shores of the bay, "where the tide ebbs and flows twice in every twenty-four hours."

Thursday morning, a train on the Bay Shore road carried them the fifty mile run to Coden, where the reception committee piloted them to their several homes. In the afternoon the Association was called to order by Pres. Chas. H. Greer and business was commenced and carried through with an unanimity of feeling pleasant to behold. The various papers were of unusual interest, ably discussed and well received; a new constitution was adopted without a hitch and all went merry as a marriage bell.

On the morning of the second day Col. E. L. Russell came down and in his jovial manner made a short and happy speech to the Association, and he was then elected a honorary member.

The afternoon was a veritable love feast, the special feature of which was the presentation to Major W. W. Screws, of the Montgomery Advertiser, of an elegant silver service, a present from the members of the National Editorial Association, of which he was President last year. This was followed by a handsome silver loving cup, a tribute from the employees of the Advertiser, and the climax was reached by the presentation of a fine gold watch from Mr. Frank Glass. As each gift was presented the Association showed its appreciation by vociferously cheering the veteran editor of forty years continual service wtih the Advertiser, and Major Screws was so overcome with emotion that it was somewhat difficult for him to express his his thanks. It was a memorable occasion which will be cherished in the memory of all present.

C. H. Greer was re-elected President; Jacob Pepperman, Secretary, and the Association devoted itself to pleasure, but the beauties of Coden, Sans Souci and Bayou la Batre are deserving of a special chapter to themselves.

Editor Banner—Please say to my friends through your paper that I have decided to work as an evangelist in a tent for life. Tent will be 40x61 feet, with 7 feet walls, made of U. S. Army duck. I have taken subscriptions at Mountain Creek and Marbury and have gotten $93. Tent and seats will cost over $300. I will give $100; I yet need over $100. The person who gives most on tent by 6 p.m. on August 16, 1905, will have tent named for him. Also a life-sized picture of person paying most will hang just behind preacher's stand for 5 or 10 years. Every person's subscription will be autographed and placed in frame under glass and this will hang on right side of main entrance to tent. This will be kept as a keep sake for years. Let every lover of Christian work send his or her name. Will publish entire subscription list for the next two weeks. Send all amounts to me at Mountain Creek, Ala. Yours in Christ,

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

Special correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, D. C., July 31, 1905

Mr. President Roosevelt had another think coming to him, and he has announced that he will call an extra session of the congress to meet here in November 11 next, for the purpose of enacting some legislation anent the Panama Canal, railroad rate and rebate legislation reciprocity, tariff revision and a few other legislative chores. Probably he would like to hire the members of the congress out to cook or chop wood when they are not busy on his little dab of legislative work which he thinks they can perform in three weeks before the regular session begins on the first Monday in December following. As I have often remarked previously, the strenuous President does some things which are intensely amusing. He has cut out enough work for the congress to occupy it steadily for the next twelve months, yet he says he wants them to get very bus and get through with what he wants before the regular session begins. It is the prerogative of the President to call an extraordinary session of the congress whenever in his judgment, the exigincies or the necessities of the country demand it, but he can only send in a message to the congress telling it what, in his opinion, is the state of the Union demanding the legislation he asks or suggests, but he can't make them enact it. You can take a horse to water but you can't make him drink.

It is probable that the House of Representatives will get down to business at once on whatever the President asks them to, for the House is no longer a deliberative body, but is run by a few men. When they crack the whip the majority jumps. It is altogether different with the Senate. It is just like it to take a notion that there is something else of far more importance than the things the President asks, that should have its attention and they are likely to take up the whole of the extra session discussing it. The Senate cares about as much about what the President thinks on some subjects, as a cow chewing her cud thinks of the Nebular Hypothesis or the Semmes Hole theory.

There may be some legislation anent the Panama Canal early in the session, but when it comes to railroad legislation and the proposition to place all railroads rates in the hands of five senile bankrupt politicians who constitute the Interstate Commerce Commission, there is going to be some blood and hair and the gronnd "tore up" around the Capitol Building. The Heuse may get quick action and do whatever Teddy wants done in the way of rebate and rate legislation, but when the House bill reaches the Senate the fun will commence. After a few rounds the House bill will look like the last rose of summer hit with a brick. If there is to be any legislation whatever on this subject in the next session of congress, it will be a bill prepared by the Senate Committee that sat here this summer and took testimony, and that bill is not going to hurt any body in the railroad business very hard, and is not going to give to the Interstate Commerce Commission any greater power than it now possesses. Just put that prediction in your pipe an smoke it.

Chas. A. Edwards.

Public is Aroused.

The public is aroused to a knowledge of the curative merits of that great medicinal tonic, Electric Bitters, for sick stomach, liver and kidneys. Mary H. Walters, of 546 St. Clair Ave., Columbus, Ohio, writes: "For several months I was given up to die. I had fever and ague, my nerves were wrecked; I could not sleep, and my stomach was so weak, from useless doctors' drugs, that I could not eat. Soon after beginning to take Electric Bitters, I obtained relief, and in a short time I was entirely cured." Guranteed at Upchurch Drug co. price 50c..

It is the only remedy I have found that gives immediate relief." 25c, 50c and $1.00. Sold by Upchurch Drug co.

She is now six and we have kept it for her constantly, but, of course, she only takes it now when anything disagrees with her. A Warning to Mothers

Too much care cannot be used with small children during the hot weather of the summer months to guard against bowel troubles. As a rule it is only necessary to give the child a dose of castor oil to correct any disorder of the bowels. Do not use any substitute, but give the old fashioned castor oil and see that it is fresh, as rancid oil nauseates and has a tendency to gripe. If this does not check the bowels give Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and then a dose of castor oil, and the disease may be checked in its incipiency and all danger avoided. The castor oil and this remedy should be procured at once and kept ready for instant use as soon as the first indication of any bowel trouble appears. This is the most successful treatment known and may be relied upon with implicit confidence even in cases of cholera infantum. For sale by Upchurch Drug co., Clanton, A. Horn, Thorsby.

The Durability of Banknotes.

That Uncle Sam's notes stand a great deal of rough and careless handling is a fact that impresses itself upon any one who has ever chanced to note the manner in which the average cashier pulls and jerks the bills before he pushes them through the window to the waiting patron. A single treasury note measures 3 1-8 inches in width and 7 1-4 inches in length. It will sustain without breaking lengthwise a weight of forty-one pounds; crosswise, a weight of ninety-one pounds. The notes run four to a sheet, a sheet being 8 1-4 inches by 13 1-2 inches long. One of these sheets lengthwise will suspend 108 pounds, and crosswise 177 pounds. It will be observed that a single note is capable of sustaining, crosswise, a weight of ninety-one pounds, which is twice the amount by nine pounds of the weight the note can sustain lengthwise, while in the case of the sheet the crosswise sheet lacks thirty-nine pounds of double the sustaining power of the lengthwise sheet.

Durability of Woods.

Some interesting experiments have been made to ascertain which wood lasts the longest. It was found that birch and aspen decayed in three years, maple and red beech in five years and elm and ash in seven years. Oak, Scottish fir and Weymouth pine decayed to the depth of half an inch in seven years; larch and juniper were uninjured at the end of seven years.

EVER TREAT YOU SO?

Coffee Acts the Jonah and Will Come Up

A clergyman who pursues his noble calling in a country parish in Iowa tells of his coffee experience:

"My wife and I used coffee regularly for breakfast, frequently for dinner and occasionally for supper—always the very best quality—package coffee never could find a place on our table.

"In the spring of 1896 my wife was taken with violent vomiting, which we had great difficulty in stopping.

"It seemed to come from coffee drinking, but we could not decide.

"In the following July, however, she was attacked a second time by the vomiting. I was away from home filling an appointment at the time, and on my return I found her very low; she had literally vomited herself almost to death, and it took some days to quiet the trouble and restore her stomach.

"I had also experienced the same trouble, but not so violently, and had relieved it each time by a resort to medicine.

"But my wife's second attack satisfied me that the use of coffee was at the bottom of our troubles, and so we stopped it forthwith and took on Postum Food Coffee. The old symptoms of disease disappeared, and during the 9 years that we have been using Postum instead of coffee we have never had a recurrence of the vomiting. We never weary of Postum, to which we know we owe our good health. This is a simple statement of facts." Name given by Postum Company, Battle Creek, Mich.

SUFFERED FOR MONTHS.

Pe-ru-na, the Remedy That Cured

Miss Ella Off, 1127 Linden St., Indianapolis, Ind., writes:

"I suffered with a run down constitution for several months, and feared that I would have to give up my work.

"On seeking the advice of a physician, he prescribed a tonic. I found, however, that it did me no good. On seeking the advice of our druggist, he asked me to try Peruna. In a few weeks I began to feel and act like a different person. My appetite increased, I did not have that worn-out feeling, and I could sleep splendidly. In a couple of months I was entirely recovered. I thank you for what your medicine has done for me."—Ella Off.

Lawyers' Fees.

The vast majority of lawyers do no better than make a fair living, and, if an average could be made, it would be found that a large number must earn ridiculously small sums. An estimate recently made showing that there are and five lawyers in New York who make $100,000 a year, not ten who make $75,000, not fifteen who make $50,000, and not twenty-five who make $25,000, is probably not far wrong. "Above all things," a successful lawyer remarked not long ago, "never take a lawyer's word about his salary. He doesn't mean to prevaricate, but the appearance of prosperity is so large a part of his capital that 'bluffing' about his income is a natural habit. I can tell you what I make in a year, but I shouldn't expect you to believe it, and I shouldn't wish you to believe it, because it would probably be unconsciously exaggerated."

COTTON GOES HIGHER

No Doubt as to Strength of Market, Which Has a Good Undertone

NEW YORK IS NOW BULLISH.

Spinners Want the Stuff and It Has to Come at Big Prices.

New Orleans, La.—The cotton market has turned and is going up hill again. Prices opened slightly higher and much better with a good undertone to the market. While a few operators are on the fence, most of the opinions are bullish. The fears of an immediate stampede of the market are seemingly past due, to the good work of the bulls Saturday who responded well and blocked every move of the bears. The market now has another chance to assert its natural strength which it was not slow in availing itself of, as the advance set in early during the morning session and has held well. A few reports show improved conditions in the crop generally, but the bearish effect of these reports are more than offset by the good outlook for the demand.

The sentiment in New York was decidedly bullish Saturday, which was caused to a great extent by the reports from Liverpool and the good demand for cotton goods. Bradstreet's says in this connection that special activity is noted in cotton goods, which are in demand at high prices with scarcity of desirable makes reported.

The technical position of spots is unchanged and very little business doing. The holders still act firm and can well afford to do so, as there is no obvious reason why there would be much of a decline in the staple, as the spinners will surely come in the market with further demands and the holders can at any time let go of their cotton at a much higher price than was even thought of at the beginning of the season. The holders are preserving a much better front now than was shown when the price was between 8c and 9c.

A dispatch from Fall River says: There was a marked advance in the price of regular goods during the week and everything points to higher prices, both for raw and finished material.

Thorough Tests Made.

New York.—With no less than twenty-five cases of possible yellow fever detained under observation in the quarantine island on Saturday, Dr. H. A. Doty, health officer of the ports, said that twenty-four hours must elapse before it could be determined whether any suspects were infected with the dread plague.

Two sailors, both apparently seriously ill, were taken today from the steamer Seguranca, which arrived from Colon and were isolated in the pest house on Sinburne island. Eight more of the crew who had been ill during the voyage, but who were convalescent, and seven passengers, two from the cabins, all of whom showed increased temperatures, were taken to Hoffman island for detention until the results of blood examinations are known. In addition to these, two suspects were taken to Hoffman today from the steamer Eldorado from New Orleans, and six cases from the steamer Avona, which recently arrived from Colon.

Swafford, 12 acres, $500; Brantley Sanders to J. L. Langston, 30 acres, $100; Brantley Sanders to Langston & Swafford, 118 acres, $20,000; Joseph McCullough to W. L. Sanders, 437 acres, $30,000; W. Ensley, Ala.—D. W. Morris & Bro. have completed the sale of some valuable mineral property they had near Oneonta, in Blount county, on Friday. It is rumored that they intend investing extensively in Ensley real estate and improvements in the near future.

PEACE TERMS UNKNOWN.

Sato Knows Nothing of What Japan Will Demand.

New York—Aimar Sato of the Japanese peace delegation made a statement to the Associated Press Saturday night in which he denies that he has ever, in any interview, given any outline of the terms upon which Japan will negotiate peace or that he has announced that Japan will make any demands whatever. He said:

"I wish to be clearly understood that I have never given out anything that could be construed as a demand of the Japanese peace commission or anything that could be taken as a condition upon which Japan would enter into negotiations for peace. I wish also to deny that I am the spokesman for Baron Komura. Sensational articles have been published which are fabrications, and in which I have been misquoted. I don't know upon what terms peace may be negotiated. I don't know that the Japanese envoys will consider peace terms. I know of no humiliating or other demands."

WAR OFFICE PREPARING.

Linevitch Will Be in Good Condition if Peace Negotiations Fail.

St. Petersburg.—The intimation of Mr. Sato, Baron Komura's secretary, that Japan will claim full indemnification for the cost of the war, besides the Island of Sakahalin, has gained recruits for the war party from among the class which had hoped Russia would be able to offer the railroads to Port Arthur and Dalny, the Island of Sakahalin and other valuable considerations in lieu of a direct cash indemnity.

The war office is not slackening preparations for continuing the war in case peace negotiations are unsuccessful. The gap in General Linevitch's army at Mukden has been filled and the railroad is working to its full capacity carrying reinforcements to form fresh corps.

A dispatch from Irkutsk announces the completion of work on the trans-Baikal line.

VLADIVOSTOCK IN DANGER.

Japs Have Landed at Several Points and Are Working Inward.

Khersu, Manchuria.—The Japanese are apparently concentrating a considerable force far to the eastward with the aim of operating against Kirin and Ninguta and getting in between Vladivostock and the Russian Manchurian army.

It is reported that the Japanese have landed at several places in the Siberian littorel between Nicolaievsk Dekastries, and that the telegraph line to Nicolaievsk has been cut. These landings, however, are reported to be for small forces.

The rains are moderating and the roads are passable.

Officers Raid Still.

Huntsville, Ala.—Deputy Collectors Root and Anderson and Deputy Marshals Thompson and Arnold made a raid near Elkwood, Madison county, Thursday afternoon and captured a large illicit distillery that had just made a run.

The furnace had fire in it and the boilers were hot, but the operators had received warning of the approach of the officers and had made away with every movable article about the place.

T. W. Worden was arrested and a search of his premises revealed several gallons of fresh corn whisky. Worden was brought to Huntsville Friday night and committed to jail today after a hearing before Commissioner Greenleaf.

Official Changes.

Scottsboro, Ala.—Tax Collector Jim Ridley and Assessor Prince, who have filled their respective offices with credit, have wound up their business in full with the state and now retire to private life. W. A. J. Wann and W. D. Rorex, the new officers to the positions, will now take charge. All of the county officials were elected last November and shortly after assumed their respective offices except the collector and assessor, who under the law had their time of incumbency extended until the first of the coming month.

A Happy Reunion.

Lafayette, Ala.—The happiest reunion ever enjoyed by the Confederate veterans of Chambers county was held in this city Saturday. About two hundred and twenty-five were present, speeches were made, a big barbecue served and cigars by the citizens of Lafayette and all had a good time. The town was thronged with people, but the best order was maintained throughout the day, it being specially noticeable that there was no drunkenness nor profanity to mar the pleasures of the day for those grand old soldiers. Gen. G. P. Harrison, of Opelika, made the address of the day.

Professor Higley Dies.

Huntsville, Ala.—Prof. Irwin Buell Higley, a well-known and popular traveling man from Birmingham, died Friday morning in the McGee hotel, where he had been ill for several weeks. Professor Higley traveled for the Jesse French Piano company, and spent about half of his time in Huntsville. He was about 40 years old and unmarried.

APPROVAL OF TARIFF

Substantial Reductions in Several Most Generally Used Commodities.

NO INCREASES ACCEPTED.

All Roads Ordered to Sell Tickets and Check Baggage Where There is a Station.

Montgomery, Ala.—At a meeting of the state railroad commission Saturday, at which all the members were present, revised tariffs ordered by the commission at its July meeting were approved except that in no case where a new rate is an increase over the old will be accepted. Taken as a whole, there have been very substantial reductions in several of the most generally used commodities. The Louisville and Nashville, for instance, showing the following average reductions: Cotton, 25 per cent; fertilizer, 24 per cent; native hay and grain, 9.6 per cent; brick, stone, gravel and sand, 58 per cent; cement, 50 per cent; lime and plaster, 32 per cent; lumber, laths, shingles, staves and headings, 10 per cent; all these being on class rates.

On the call of the docket the Seaboard was ordered to stop trains at Armstrong until January; new rates on the Alabama Northern approved; the Tuskegee road was ordered to show cause why it should not reduce passenger fares; all roads were ordered to sell tickets and check baggage where there is a station, and the Southern was refused permission to cease stopping fast trains at Edwardsville. It was also shown that arrangements had been made for a depot at Rutherford, on the Seaboard.

New Tariff Order.

The following is the order putting the new schedule of rates into force, which is signed only by Associate Commissioners Tunstall and Sanders:

Before the railroad commission of Alabama, Montgomery, Alabama, July 29, 1905.

In the matter of revised tariffs.

In compliance with an order of this commission made May 6, 1905, requiring the railroad companies operating in Alabama to submit to the commission revised tariffs for the purpose of correcting "inequalities, inaccuracies, and discriminations existing in the rates applying in this state," the several companies have submitted their revised tariffs. These tariffs have been carefully examined and checked; and all proposed increases eliminated. With such eliminations, said tariffs are now found to be in compliance with the former order of this commission; and it is ordered that the same be, and they are hereby approved; Provided, that no increase of any rate in said proposed new tariffs is approved; but such increases are hereby disapproved and disallowed.

W. T. SANDERS.

British Squadron in the Baltic.

St. Petersburg.—The cruise of a British squadron in the Baltic sea being announced on the heels of the meeting between Emperor William and Emperor Nicholas as Bjorkee has created a great stir here and has given a new turn to conjecture about the purpose of Emperor William's trip to Russian waters.

The German Emperor is now credited in some quarters with a design to enlist Russia's support in securing for the Baltic the status of a mare clausum, and the immediate declaration that the British fleet intends to pass the Belts is regarded as Great Britain's cry of check-mate. Nothing official is obtainable concerning the cruise, the foreign office maintaining that it has not been apprised of its purpose, or the details of the programme, and it declines to discuss the subject seriously in the absence of further information.

To Have New Bridge.

Demopolis, Ala.—The city is going to have a new bridge built across the ravine on Franklin street, the old one having been pronounced unsafe. This is a pretty big job, as the span is quite long. The contract has not been given yet.

Cotton is beginning to open rapidly now and picking will begin in earnest in about fifteen days.

Cut on Face and Arms.

A mob formed to lynch Miller, but the sheriff landed his prisoner in jail here.

Along with this feeling comes always the perception that goodness is what I am made for. Not even a voice out of the sky could tell me more plainly that the Holy Being wills that I, too, should be holy. Along with the reproof comes the encouragement and along with the hunger for righteousness comes the promise that the hunger shall be satisfied.

To suppose the Creator indifferent to the moral character and welfare of His creatures is essential atheism; but, if not indifferent, He must have provided all needed helps to virtue. He must have given His creatures light to find the right way and strength to walk in that way. But, even if He were indifferent, we cannot afford to be so; for our highest interest is to be found in seeking the completeness of our own being in and the harmony or rightness of our relations with all other beings and with the laws and forces of the universe in which we find our place. Everything worth having or worth desiring is involved in character, in being simply and soundly right.

The world comes right when the man comes right. What it is to each one of us depends on what we are and how we take it. We make our own hells, we can make our own heavens.

"When the soul to sin hath died,
True and beautiful and sound
Then all earth is sanctified.
Upsprings paradise around."

A rough-cast man rose in a country meeting-house to tell his experience: "It was in the north country, when the snow lay deep on the ground, that the Lord God found out Jonathan Hinckley and converted his soul. And the leafless trees gave praise to God." Is there one among us who might not report to himself something like this happy convert's story? Who has not at some time felt sure of his place in the great order, and seen all the world irradiated with a light which really shone from within the mind?

If a man has lost his faith in God and still holds fast his own integrity, well for the man. But, in this very concern to be true to the highest law he knows, he is unconsciously a worshiper. Blessed is the man who hungers and thirsts for righteousness, for already he holds in his soul the richest of all treasures. We who believe in God need not be seriously troubled about the fate or state of honest nonbelievers, for we may count their very honesty as a sign of the real presence and the finest inspiration.

Once accept the principle of duty, and all life becomes an honorable discipline and a steady advance. There is no higher rank on earth or in heaven than the rank of personal goodness; and he who loves it, seeks it, and practices it for its own sake is surely moving, however slowly, toward the perfect life.

Here also is the cure, and the only cure, for our restlessness and self-dissatisfaction. "No man can serve two masters." But he who falls heartily in love with virtue is no longer distracted by a divided allegiance. He has nothing else to do but to occupy himself with learning and doing what is right and reasonable. Having settled the central principle and leading purpose of his life, every step onward and upward makes the next easier; and the law of habit continually operates to confirm this deep-heartvd choice. He is no longer driven by the lash of conscience; he is no more a servant, but a son, and the Father's house is his happy home.

Here too is the secret of victory over our trials and depressions. When shall we half realize the grandeur and glory of simple rectitude. Let me again repeat a tale of real life. Years ago, and far away, I knew a woman of most fine and excellent qualities whose deeply shadowed life was like a long crucifixion and martyrdom. In one of her letters she said, "My youth is gone, my hope is dead, and my heart is heavy; but I neglect no duty." In reply I sand: "If you could ask God for just one blessing, and could be sure of that one and never of another, would you dare pray that your youth might come back, or that your earthly hopes might be renewed? Would you not ask for a living principle within yourself that would make you neglect no duty? And can you not see that, in giving you the love of righteousness, He has really given you the best thing in all the universe?" In her next letter she wrote that this view of the matter was new to her own mind, but that she accepted it as true, and found in it strength to take up her burden—a burden carried, as I believe, with patience, courage, and constancy to the end, which was not far away.

There is one thing more to be said. He who really loves righteousness cannot love it for himself alone; he hungers for its triumph over all the earth; he longs for the banishment of every wrong. Hence his zeal for justice is sweetened with good will to men, so that righteousness becomes one form of benevolence. The right is always the good. Hence the ethical passion kindled from the heart of Jesus has flamed out in abhorrence of wrong and evil, and has lent support and vigor to every movement for reform and welfare. "It is a spurious virtue that can contentedly see vice thriving by its side." The gospel is no gospel if it does not turn the hearts of men toward each other as well as toward God. It is no gospel if it does not unite all believers in wise, well-considered, and earnest movements for the cleansing of the world and the better ordering of all human life. Righteousness is rightness. To hunger and thirst for righteousness therefore is all one with the prayer that God's kingdom may come, and that His will may be done on earth as it is in heaven.

"Never Refused God Anything."

Florence Nightingale said: "If I could give you information of my life, it would be to show how a woman of very ordinary ability has been led by God in strange and unaccustomed paths to do in His service what He has done in her. And if I could tell you all, you would see how God has done all, and I nothing. I have worked hard, very hard, that is all; and I have never refused God anything."

Do Not Delay.

To-day is a good time to mend your life where it has need of it. Take the step into your Father's service. Do it in genuine honesty and faith. Don't quibble with your doubts. Don't mistrust yourself. Don't forget that Jesus is looking on. Don't wait any longer. The door is open. You can enter. You can do it now. To-morrow may be too late.—Rev. I. Mench Chambers.

Napoleon the Statesman.

It is a lamentable fact that but one side of Napoleon Bonaparte is well known to the public. In the public eye he is merely seen as the archangel of war—a fighter of battles, and a master of military tactics. Viewed as a statesman, Napoleon shines as resplendent as he does whilst rallying the old guard or directing his legions. Thomas E. Watson, in his "Napoleon," has given the other side of the great Corsican. The chapter devoted to the First Consul shows Napoleon as the master of finances and the promoter of public works that are today models all over the world. Napoleon was a statesman as well as a warrior. He possessed constructive ability of the highest order. His genius shone all over the world as a great statesman after he had conquered his enemies. Perhaps he was deficient in the arts of the diplomat. This part of his adminstration was trusted to others who betrayed him. However, despite all of this, he wrote his name as a constructive statesman, and as one of the greatest financiers that ever lived.

When King James Saw the Lion.

Just 300 years ago this month King James I of England visited the lions then kept in London Tower—the show from which is derived "the lions" in the sense of the sights of a place. The king had had an area built onto their cages for fights with bears, dogs and bulls, but the two lions that entered it on this day simply stood blinking. Two "racks of mutton" and "a lusty live cock" were successively thrown to them and devoured. After this the king caused a live lamb to be easily let down to them by a rope, and being come to the ground the lamb lay upon his knees and both the lions stood in their former places and only beheld the lamb, but presently the lamb rose up and went unto the lions, which very gently looked upon him and smelled on him, without sign of any further hurt. However, a lion-and-mastiff fight that followed was better "sport."

Thousands of Women

ARE MADE WELL AND STRONG

Success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Rests Upon the Fact that It Really Does Make Sick Women Well

Thousands upon thousands of American women have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Their letters are on file in Mrs. Pinkham's office, and prove this statement to be a fact and not a mere boast.

Overshadowing indeed is the success of this great medicine, and compared with it all other medicines and treatment for women are experiments.

Why has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound accomplished its wide-spread results for good?

Why has it lived and thrived and done its glorious work for a quarter of a century?

Simply and surely because of its sterling worth. The reason no other medicine has even approached its success is plainly and positively because there is no other medicine in the world so good for women's ills.

The wonderful power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over the diseases of womankind is not because it is a stimulant—not because it is a palliative, but simply because it is the most wonderful tonic and reconstructor ever discovered to act directly upon the uterine system, positively CURING disease and displacements and restoring health and vigor.

Marvelous cures are reported from all parts of the country by women who have been cured, trained nurses who have witnessed cures, and physicians who have recognized the virtue in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and are fair enough to give credit where it is due. If physicians dared to be frank and open, hundreds of them would acknowledge that they constantly prescribe Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in severe cases of female ills, as they know by experience that it will effect a cure.

Women who are troubled with painful or irregular menstruation, backache, bloating (or flatulence), leucorrhœa, falling, inflammation or ulceration of the uterus, ovarian troubles, that "bearing-down" feeling, dizziness, faintness, indigestion, nervous prostration, or the blues, should take immediate action to ward off the serious consequences and be restored to health and strength by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Anyway, write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for advice. It's free and always helpful.

The Secret of Good Coffee

Even the best housekeepers cannot make a good cup of coffee without good material. Dirty, adulterated and queerly blended coffee such as unscrupulous dealers shovel over their counters won't do. But take the pure, clean, natural flavored LION COFFEE, the leader of all package coffees—the coffee that for over a quarter of a century has been daily welcomed in millions of homes—and you will make a drink fit for a king in this way:

HOW TO MAKE GOOD COFFEE.

Use LION COFFEE, because to get best results you must use the best coffee.

Grind your LION COFFEE rather fine. Use "a tablespoonful to each cup, and one extra for the pot." First mix it with a little cold water, enough to make a thick paste, and add white of an egg (if egg is to be used as a settler), then follow one of the following rules:

1st. WITH BOILING WATER. Add boiling water, and let it boil THREE MINUTES ONLY. Add a little cold water and set aside five minutes to settle. Serve promptly.

2d. WITH COLD WATER. Add your cold water to the paste and bring it to a boil. Then set aside, add a little cold water, and in five minutes it's ready to serve.

3 DON'TS
Don't boil it too long.
Don't let it stand more than ten minutes before serving.
Don't use water that has been boiled before.

TWO WAYS TO SETTLE COFFEE.

1st. With Eggs. Use part of the white of an egg, mixing it with the ground LION COFFEE before boiling.

2d. With Cold Water instead of eggs. After boiling add a dash of cold water, and set aside for eight or ten minutes, then serve through a strainer.

Insist on getting a package of genuine LION COFFEE, prepare it according to this recipe and you will only use LION COFFEE in future. (Sold only in 1 lb. sealed packages.)
(Lion-head on every package.)
(Save these Lion-heads for valuable premiums.)

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY
REVIEW OF REVIEWS

The more Magazines there are, the more Indispensable is The Review of Reviews

"Indispensable." "The one magazine I feel I must take." "The world under a field-glass." "An education in public affairs and current literature,"—these are some of the phrases one hears from noted people who read the Review of Reviews. The more magazines there are, the more necessary is the Review of Reviews, because it brings together the best that is in all the most important monthlies of the world. Such is the flood of periodical literature that nowadays people say that the only way to keep up with it is to read the Review of Reviews. Entirely over and above this reviewing section, it has more original matter and illustrations than most magazines, and the most timely and important articles printed in any monthly.

Probably the most useful section of all is Dr. Albert Shaw's illustrated "Progress of the World," where public events and issues are authoritatively and lucidly explained in every issue. Many a subscriber writes, "This department alone is worth more than the price of the magazine." The unique cartoon department, depicting current history in caricature, is another favorite. The Review of Reviews covers five continents, and yet is American, first and foremost.

Men in public life, the members of Congress, professional men, and the great captains of industry who must keep "up with the times," intelligent men and women all over America, have decided that it is "indispensable."

Long Winded Oratory.

It is no new thing for the house of commons to suffer from long winded oratory. As long ago as the sixteenth century Queen Bess soundly rated her lawmakers for not working more and talking less, and some years later Speaker Long actually succumbed to a succession of lengthy speeches. "The house is empty, and so be our stomachs," one impatient member declared. "I pray you, therefore, adjourn the debate for an hour." But the speaker declined to budge from the post of duty, with the result that he was taken ill and died shortly after. Brougham once spoke for six hours on end on law reform, Sheridan and Gladstone, both have records of five hour speeches, Mr. Biggar tied their record, and Palmerston once held forth for four hours and a half on Don Pacifico.

Discretion the Better Part.

"I'm perfectly convinced," said the ambitious young man, "that I can write the greatest novel of the period."

"Why don't you go ahead and do it then?"

"Oh, I wouldn't think of such a thing. I am happy now in my belief on the subject. Where's the good of my risking disappointment?"

The Only Way.

There is no way to maintain the health and strength of mind and body except by nourishment. There is no way to nourish except through the stomach. The stomach must be kept healthy, pure and sweet or the strength will let down and disease will set up. No appetite, loss of strength, nervousness, headache, constipation, bad breath, sour risings, rifting, indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach troubles that are curable are quickly cured by the use of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. Kodol digests what you eat and strengthens the whole digestive apparatus. Sold by Upchurch Drug Co

Death of Mr E. A. Knight.

On Saturday morning last Mr. E. A. Knight died at his home near Lomax froom blood poison. The mosquito theory in regard the spread of yellow fever seems be generally accepted as correct, d we can all keep a good look for the yellow one known as stegomyia fasciata, although, to the truth, all skeeters look and alike to me. I don't believe stegomyia is to be found in hilton county, anyhow, our piney ods breezes are too strong for . Clanton town council finally cided not to push the quarantine il further developments, which s a very good idea indeed, al- ough timely precautions are com- ndable. Our sister city, Thorsby, s extended an invitation to refu- s to make that thriving town ir resting place, evidently they ad the stegomyia but little

During the last three weeks the hilton Warehouse Company has e to work with a will, and con- derable progress has been made. large gang of men were employed der Peyt Aldridge and the side ck laid, connecting with the in lines at the north and south ds. Work on the ginnery is be- g pushed under the superinten cy of of G. A. Conville, and building will soon be ready for 10 gins of 80 saws each, giving capacity of 80 bales per day. The ning machinery is all of the lat- pattern and up-to date in every pect. Two 50 horse power en es will be put in, geared seper- tely, so if by any mischance one ld break down, the other will eady for use and there will be stoppage.

The foundations for the ware- e are being excavated, and rk on the walls is to be started soon as possible. The walls and r are to be of concrete, and ybe the roof also, at all events building will be entirely fire- of, no wood being used what- r. Judge Reynolds says that n if the warehouse should be ed with cotton and it should be sumed by fire, the building itself ld not be injured. At the rate ings are being pushed, all will be readiness for the fall trade.

At last Clanton is in a fair way have a good public school build g, the property of the town. The Mayor and Council have purchased two acre lot at West Clanton, and ll probably buy two more acres, d a school building will at once erected. It is to be of two storys x class rooms on the first floor, d music room and art room, with large hall, fitted with stage, etc., stairs. The building is to be mpleted by October 1, It now hooves the school patrons to get gether and select a good teacher. This is a fair division of labor—the n furnishes the school house, patrons select the teacher, and Board of Education will turn him the public money.

Answer to School Girl and Reply to Judson Streck.

Editor Banner—Please allow me space to say a few words on the same subject "School Girl" wrote July 13, concerning our school house, and advised children to learn fast and appreciate the nice school building and march to the front to keep the great enemy, ignorance, away, which was good advice. and wrote nothing I disliked, but merely took it as a starting point to make our school patrons think how far we are getting behind. Our country is divided into about four parts—Methodst, Baptist, nothingness and another ism I have no name for, and each side thinks his way is right. Our dear Saviour says there is not but one way that is right. As long as we stay in this condition we will not have much success in schools. Now, to Mr. Judson. I did not say that the Coosa people run their schools too long but I do say that they get more out of schools than we do here, for they don't have so many kinds of societies to interfere with schools as we do here, but I have always heard that a hit dog would halloa. Mr. Judson did not say what part of Foge 's letter hit him. It might have been that he sold his books at an enormous price, or he might have been a school officer at the time these new school laws were passed. But if his part of the cake is large enough and got enough sugar in it to authorize Old Fogey's student to come over from Coosa to decide the dispute we will begin to get him up.

Now, Mr. Judson, 25 years ago people taught school in winter and midsummer. Now let me cite you to District 32 in our next school and see if the school don't start with only a few that are able to send to school, and a whole lot of children in the field, and in the spring they are at work the same way, which if schools were divided and taught as they were 25 years ago all can get a chance at them. How much better proof would you want than this, and did not the old man tell you where District 32 was when he asked you, "By gannys, Strock, I want you to answer Old Fogey's letter?" You said you did not like to hear people run down their home and praise some other place, but Old Fogey is willing to give every-one credit for what it is worth and nothing more. Now, some of Old Fogey's ideas. Some people think that other societies are worth more than schools, but I say if you will educate your children they are apt to be successful in all their undertakings an useful in religious societ es.

Old Fogey.

Editor Banner—Please allow me space in your valuable paper to say a few words. There is a lot of sickness here and some few deaths have occurred.

District 32.

Editor Banner—Please let me say a few words in your valuable paper concerning Fogey, as I see he has failed to show up this week, I suppose he is backed up. Mr. Fogey's ideas are good in some parts of his arguments, and if I understand him he says there are students in the backwoods of Coosa that are far ahead of any that is in District 32 that had not been in school elsewhere. But I think we have got some of as good scholars living in District 32 as there are anywhere, now if I understand Mr. Fogey, the professor, we, the friendly writer, need not bet too much sorghum syrup that he can't do what he says he can, for I was partly raised in that country and old Coosa is coming to the front in school. They teach, winter and summer, and I want to say that qualification is worth as much as education in teaching school, and I do believe that changing books is a great blunder in children learning and is a big expense to the people. So I had had better hush before I get myself into the quarrel. But it seems that Fogey's opponent gets off the subject.

Farmers are beginning to pull fodder and cotton is beginning to open here. Good luck to the Banner and its readers. Come again, Fogey.

Vida.

Vida is a lively little town on the M. & O. railroad, just 30 miles from Montgomery. We have a new church very near completed and we have preaching regular on the first Sunday and Sunday school every Sunday. We have two good stores, one run by A. M. and J. C. Gentry, the other by the Cruise & Splawn Lumber Co. Mr W. L. Roper has just completed the finest artesian well, with a fine two inch stream of water flowing from it; the overflowing stream was found at a depth of 157 feet. Mr. Roper is a small man but he can go down and get you good water.

J. C. Gentry is visiting friends at Active.

Crops are fairly good in this section, though we want rain.

B M. Gentry has gone to Jemison on business.

Mrs. B. M. Gentry has the prettiest flower yard in Autauga.

Prof. L. E. Byrum has a full school at this place and he knows just how to handle it; no better school in the country.

We hope to see a long letter from F. A. G. every week, we like to read his letters.

The farmers of this section are still thriving, all are busy gathering fodder.

The Blue Darters have played several games of ball this season and have not lost a single game. Some of our boys were a little doubtful as to whether we would win the game with Clanton, but their doubt is all over now, for we went to the Clanton boys' ground on the 4th inst. and won the game by a score of 16 to 3. The feature of the game was that Clanton's best batter went to the bat four times and struck out three times. We did not do Clanton boys like we did the G. B. boys, we did them lots worse. We were to have had a game with the Bates team on the 5th, but they failed to show up. Our next game will be at Billingsley on Aug. 12, with the Vine Hill boys. We hope it will be more interesting than the past games we have played.

Our crops are suffering for rain very much, I don't think we could possibly make over a half crop this time; most of the farmers are busily engaged pulling fodder.

The singing school at Concord is progressing nicely under the management of Prof. Johnnie Gore.

The Holiness campmeeting held by Rev. L. P. Adams and Henry Roddy, came to a close last Sunday night after a continuation of 16 days, with the understanding that another would begin at the same place on July 21, next year; may God send the time when our land will be filled with such meetings and preachers who are filled with the Holy Ghost that are able to explain and preach the Gospel to a dying people.

Messrs. John Armstrong and John Wyatt are sick with fever; we hope to hear of their immediate recovery.

Mr. Peyton Easterling fell from a wagon last Sunday and broke one arm; we are glad to know that he is improving nicely.

Killed by Circular Saw.

Gadsden, Ala.—News of a horrible accidental death at Maple Grove, in Cherokee county, reached Gadsden early Saturday morning.

From the best information at hand it seems that Mell C. Towers, son of C. C. Towers, was working in the saw mill of Mrs. C. C. Towers near Maple Grove, and late Friday afternoon he was busy in the saw mill dust pit, and when he got ready to leave he very thoughtlessly raised up his full length, his head striking the rapidly revolving saw. When his head came in contact with the saw it was split open and his eyes cut out. He fell to the ground with an agonizing cry, and his horror-stricken fellow-employes ran to his assistance. He was tenderely picked up and taken to his home, where medical attention was given him, but he was beyond all earthly aid.

Sheffield, Ala.—The city council has just declared quarantine against all points infected with yellow fever.

Sylacauga Endorses Quarantine.

Sylacauga, Ala.—At a meeting of the mayor and board of aldermen held Friday afternoon, the action of Mayor S. P. McDonald in establishing quarantine against Montgomery, New Orleans and all infected points was fully indorsed and the mayor was directed to put inspectors on all passenger trains on the Louisville and Nashville and Central of Georgia railroads, which has been done.

This action on the part of the city officials has not been felt in a business way, as all trains are allowed to run on regular schedule.

Negro Frightened Away.

Sheffield, Ala.—A bold and daring attempt at robbery or crime was committed at the home of R. R. Hill on Nashville avenue, this city, when a negro attempted to get in the room of Miss Hill.

The young lady heard the noise at her window, which awakened her, and she screamed at once for her brother, who was in another part of the house. Even then the negro continued to effect his entrance to the room, which had a screen window. However, some ladies in the adjoining house heard her screams for help and came to her rescue, which frightened the negro away, and he made good his escape.

Successful New Industry.

Gadsden, Ala.—The first run of soil pipe by the Coosa Pipe and Foundry company was made last Thursday afternoon with six floors in operation. The cast was a decided success in every respect and was made after everything was placed in readiness. Morris Bush, the energetic manager, and Robert Campbell, the superintendent and pioneer pipe maker of Gadsden, were both present and had everything in ship shape for the run, which was made without a hitch of any kind and a perfect lot of pipe was the result.

Returning to Montgomery.

Montgomery, Ala.—It can be truthfully said that this city has entirely resumed its normal condition and every vestige of panic or fear has subsided.

In fact it was reported at the Union depot Saturday that a great many people, mostly women and children, who left three days ago had come back to their homes.

Freight Train Is Ditched.

Montgomery, Ala.—A freight train on the Pensacola division of the Louisville and Nashville was ditched Saturday morning about three miles from the Nadawah. All the crew escaped injury except Ely Matthews, a negro brakeman, who was caught beneath a freight car. It is believed his injuries will prove fatal.

Aerialist Meets With Accident.

Sheffield, Ala.—Prof. Samuel Whittaker, who exhibited at the world's fair in St. Louis his daring ride 350 feet down a wire in a solid sheet of flame, met with a serious accident at Rustic park, Sheffield's summer resort. The negro who holds one end of the canvas let one end fall and precipitated Professor Whittaker to the ground, causing a serious injury to his hip.

Census Is Disappointing.

Sheffield, Ala.—Prof. A. J. Iro has completed the school census of Sheffield and is tabulating the result. His work shows a population of about 5,000 inhabitants for the city, less than was anticipated.

To Hold Court in Huntsville.

Huntsville, Ala.—Judge David D. Shelby has practically decided to hold a special term of United States court in this city for a few weeks, beginning August 28. Assistant District Attorney N. L. Steele is here making preliminary arrangements for the court's special term. The docket of this court is crowded.

Petition Is Refused.

Mobile, Ala.—The board of health at a meeting Saturday refused the petitions of pupils in New Orleans asking for permission to come to this city to enter school here.

UNCLE SAM IN CHARGE

President Is Requested by Louisiana Officiasl to Take Speedy Action.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT CAUSES EXCITEMENT.

Quarantine Now Practically Extends as Far North as St. Louis—Forty More Doctors Needed.

New Orleans, La.—With no intention of admitting the fever situation to be beyond control, but in the hope of reviving confidence here and elsewhere in the south, official and business interests decided Friday to send a request to President Roosevelt to have the United States government assume full charge of the struggle now in progress to wipe out the yellow fever from New Orleans and Louisiana. Public sentiment approves the action taken. The expectation is that within the next two days Surgeon General Wyman, with all the resources of the government, will be enlisted actively in the campaign.

The action taken was the result of a meeting held late Friday at the cotton exchange. President A. Britton presided. There were present Mayor Behrman, Chairman Janvier, of the citizens' committee; President Souchon, of the state board of health; President Kohnke, of the city board of health, representatives of each of the exchanges and commercial bodies; Surgeon White, of the marine hospital service and a number of representative citizens. In conferences which preceded the meeting, Presidents Souchon and Kohnke had given to Mayor Behrman their cordial assent to the proposed action.

Serious, But Not Hopeless Situation.

All of those present participated in the discussion. It was the consensus of opinion that while the situation had grown serious, it was not hopeless. This view was concurred in by Dr. White. At the same time it was believed that if government control was resolved upon there would be an immediate restoration of confidence throughout Louisiana and the other states in the south where there has been criticism of the local authorities for not sooner making public the existence of the fever.

It was also the belief of those present that General Wyman would be able to send a force of physicians to New Orleans thoroughly equipped for the handling of a yellow fever situation because of their experience in Cuba, Mexico and at different points in the United States and that the government would have the facilities for enforcing a scientific campaign not possessed by the local authorities. When the local officials first took charge of the situation it was confidently hoped that the fever could be stamped out with a reasonable delay, but the progress has not been as expected, and so frightened have become the people in the south over the increase in the number of cases that New Orleans is threatened with a serious paralysis of her trade by reason of the radical quarantines that are now being instituted.

At the conclusion of the meeting it was announced that the following resolution, offered by Mr. Janvier, had been adopted, Mr. Farrar alone voting in the negative:

"Resolved, That this meeting indorse the proposition to ask the United States government to take control of the yellow fever situation in New Orleans and Louisiana, and the governor of the state and the mayor of th ecity be requested to take immediate steps to carry this proposition into effect; and that the hearty cooperation of the state and city governments, state and city health boards, the New Orleans Medical society and of the people generally, be pledged in such action as may be taken by the government."

Immediately after the meeting adjourned a telegram signed by the mayor and the other interests represented at the meeting was addressed to Governor Blanchard, telling him of the action taken and furnishing him with a copy of the resolution. The governor was asked to forward a request to President Roosevelt directing the United States public health and marine hospital service to take charge at once. Prompt action was urged upon the governor.

Sent to Jail.

Ensley, Ala.—Albert Peterson, a negro accused of shooting another negro about ten days ago at Averytown, was ordered to the county jail for safe keeping pending a preliminary trial by Justice of the Peace J. M. Donaldson Thursday.

Union Springs Quarantined.

Union Springs, Ala.—Up to this time Union Springs has not quarantined against Montgomery and in consequence of the fact a number of surrounding towns that have quarantined against the capital city have also quarantined against Union Springs and therefore caused some inconvenience to the traveling public, as this is the crossing point of four trains each way, twice a day on the Central of Georgia railroad.

Mosquitoes Cause Yellow Fever.

Washington.—The public health and marine hospital service has issued a circular on the prevention of yellow fever. The directions given look to the suppression of the mosquito as the only means of preventing its spread.

"No mosquitoes, no yellow fever," is the motto announced in big black letters at the top of the circular.

The document continues as follows:

"The infection of yellow fever is carried by mosquitoes and by no other means is the infection spread.

"Persons take the disease by being bitten by mosquitoes that previously have bitten a yellow fever patient.

"The mosquitoes to become infected must bite a yellow fever patient during the first three days of his attack. These first three days, therefore, are the most important for preventing the access of mosquitoes to a fever patient.

"It is often difficult to decide during the first three days whether a patient has yellow fever, hence the necessity in threatened communities of placing a mosquito bar immediately around every patient who has a fever of any kind, and for three days at least."

The necessity of drainage and screening is dwelt upon with much emphasis.

The postoffice department is sending 15,000 copies of the circulars to postoffices of the following states:

Louisiana, Texas, Mississippi, Tennessee, Alabama, Florida and Arkansas.

The circulars are sent out in bundles of 15 to 25 for distribution in the various towns by the local boards of health. They will be posted in conspicuous places.

Editor Killed.

New York.—Robert Criswell, editor of a weekly publication, who was arrested recently on a charge of criminal libel, preferred by Representative Joseph L. Rhinock, of the Covington (Kentucky) district, was killed Thursday night by an express train at the Seventy-second station of the subway. The libel charge against Criswell grew out of the publication of articles reflecting upon Mr. Rhinock and censuring Representative Nicholas Longworth of Ohio for having introduced Miss Alice Roosevelt to the Kentucky congressman during the visit of the President's daughter in Cincinnati. Criswell was arrested July 12 and was held in $1,000 bail for trial. The accused man published an apology in a subsequent issue of the paper.

A Spectacular Raid.

Chicago.—Lake Michigan furnished one of the most unique and spectacular gambling raids ever attempted in this country Thursday. The police and gamblers raced around the lake, first into Michigan waters, then close to the shores of Illinois, and then into the jurisdiction of Indiana. Fourteen marine gamblers were arrested as they floated ashore in a launch at South Chicago. The others escaped to Indiana harbor, Indiana. Chief of Police Collins announced two days ago that he would no longer permit the operation of the floating poolroom, the City of Traverse.

It was the expectation of the authorities that the betting fraternity would leave Chicago on the City of Traverse, but instead of this a small excursion steamer which carried them to the City of Traverse, lying at anchor within the jurisdiction of Indiana.

Cold Deal for Revisionists.

Washington, D. C.—The coming reciprocity conference under republican auspices in Chicago is getting the cold shoulder from the leading republicans.

The revisionists are discouraged over the outlook. Members of the cabinet, who were invited to attend, have hastened to decline. The secretary of commerce and labor and the commissioner of corporations were asked to come, but both side-stepped with alacrity. Farther than that, it is said, the department of commerce and labor declined to assign any of its experts to assist the statisticians of the conference.

Cleaning Ensley.

Ensley, Ala.—The good effects of the work being done in Ensley to clean up the city and bring about better sanitary conditions are already being felt.

The mosquito has almost been exterminated except in a few isolated sections, and the authorities are going after them with all the known remedies available.

Knoxville Invites Refugees.

Knoxville, Tenn.—By official action of the city board of health, Knoxville has invited all fever refugees, whether suspects or not, to come within its gates. It has been proven in years gone by that yellow fever can not propagate in this altitude.

More Fire in Decatur.

Decatur, Ala.—Fire Saturday night at 10 o'clock caused a loss of more than five thousand dollars by the total destruction of A. G. Bethard's planing mill. The family lived about the mill and they escaped in their night clothes. The fire is supposed to have originated from the boiler room from fire left there after work hours. There was no insurance. A horse belonging to Mr. Bethard was roasted in the flames.

FAMOUS OLD ARTICLE

Reprinted by Russian Press. Russia in Favor of Its Alliance Views.

AUTHOR WAS SENT INTO EXILE.

Editor of Novoe Vremya Says the Article is Worthy of the Closest Scrutiny.

St. Petersburg.—The republication here Sunday by the Novoe Vremya, of an article written in 1859 by Alexander Hertzen, the Russian author and political agitator, in which strong plea is made for a Russo-American alliance, and in which the American and European systems of government are compared favorably to that of America, is not without interest, and is of considerable significance, particularly in view of the general political situation and the fact that Russia is today upon the point of establishing a general assembly and granting the country some sort of constitution.

The presence of the Russian peace plenipotentiaries in the United States also adds significance to the republication of the article, as likewise does the Novoe Vremya's relation with the government. The Novoe Vremya is fully aware that the relaunching of Hertzen's ideas is acceptable to the government, and in fact the printing of it may be called semi-official.

Was Exiled for Views.

Hertzen died in Paris January 21, 1870, after many years of exile because of his advanced ideas, which were not acceptable to the Russian government. During his exile he published in London a newspaper of liberal tendencies called Kolokol (The Bell), and in which he carried on a relentless propaganda for the constitutionalism of Russia. The circulation of Hertzen's works in Russia was prohibited until within the past few months, when the ban was removed.

The opening paragraph of the article published by the Novoe Vremya is a strong and logical plea for an alliance between Russia and America, quoted by Hertzen from a Philadelphia newspaper printed in 1853 and citing physical and political reasons therefor. The idea of a possible alliance is one of the principal themes of the article, which, continuing, says that Russia should free herself from old-world prejudices and fallacies, and turn to her great neighbor across the Pacific and learn a good lesson from her political and commercial success.

Best and Most Natural Ally.

"Russia having reached the Pacific," says the article, "there stands between the two nations only the broad ocean, but naught of antiquated prejudices of envy. If Russia can free herself from the St. Petersburg traditions her best and most natural ally is the United States of America."

Hertzen notes a lack of sympathy on the part of other European nations for Russia, and refers to America's kindliness to that country.

"Both countries overflow with strength, energy and the spirit of organization," continues the article. "Both are without pasts and both began their national lives by breaking with traditions."

Hertzen commends America's handling of questions of state, declaring that American institutions fulfill all the demands of the democratic republic. He eulogizes the American constitution and the electoral system, saying that Russia should study these carefully and follow many of the features thereof. He says that the European system of government means war, misery and poverty, and asks why Russia follows Europe.

The Novoe Vremya, referring editorially to the article, says that it is worthy of the closest scrutiny.

Injury May Result Fatally.

Bessemer, Ala.—James Brown, a white miner, was possibly fatally injured by an explosion of gas in the Virginia mines near this place Thursday night at 10 o'clock as he entered a room some distance down the main shaft.

He had entered the mines as usual with a light on his cap. He had a safety lamp, but without warning there was an explosion of gas overhead and the man was horribly burned and bruised about the face and head.

He lives at the mines and has a family. Reports from his bedside are very unfavorable and it is believed that he can not survive the shock and injuries received.

The accident is being investigated by the state mine inspectors. The injured man has a wife and two or three children. Full particulars could not be learned.

Fired By Lightning.

Bethpage, Tenn.—The large barn of W. F. Moss at this place and its contents was destroyed by lightning during the thunder and rainstorm Friday morning. The barn and contents was valued at $500; no insurance. The dwelling occupied by Thomas Moncrief was also struck by lightning, but no serious damage was done. A large gray horse of Ernest Key, valued at $100, was killed by lightning.

DR. WYMAN'S REPORT.

Battle With Yellow Fever Will Cost $2,000 a Day.

Oyster Bay.—In answer to President Roosevelt's direction that he be furnished with a report on the yellow fever situation in Louisiana, particularly in New Orleans, Surgeon General Wyman, of the marine hospital service in Washington, Friday evening telegraphed the President that he was making arrangements to undertake government control of the fever situation as requested by Governor Blanchard. Dr. Wyman's telegram, which the president directed to be made public, is as follows:

"Washington, August 5.—The President: Replying further to your telegram of 4th, submit the following report:

"Service has had skilled officers in New Orleans since first knowledge of the fever. Under the law they are there to see that the interstate quarantine regulations are enforced and to offer assistance in their enforcement. Detention camps have been established and are in operation to permit exit of people without endangering others and train inspectors are placed by the service on all trains leaving New Orleans. Our skilled officers in New Orleans have been and are materially aiding the local authorities in the suppression of the disease. Before formally assuming charge in accordance with the request I have deemed it necessary to curtail unnecessary expenses. Surgeon White in his telegram today estimates the same at $1,500 or $2,000 per day.

"The epidemic fund will not stand this expenditure. I have wired Surgeon White arrangement that the government should maintain and pay for medical and executive control, but that the labor of caring for patients should be borne by the city itself. This has been the rule heretofore. I am proceeding on these lines. Will report further.

"WALTER WYMAN,
"Surgeon General."

The President was induced to direct Surgeon General Wyman to take charge of the situation, not only by the telegram received from Governor Blanchard, but similar telegrams from other sources. Among those received was the following from the mayor of New Orleans:

"New Orleans, August 4.—Hon. Theodore Roosevelt: Officials and all business interests in this community united in urging Governor Blanchard to request the President of the United States to instruct United States marine authorities to assume control of health situation in New Orleans for the eradication of yellow fever. Mindful of the signal success which crowned the work of the federal authorities in battling with the disease in Havana and elsewhere and confident that their signal work will prove equally effective here, I cheerfully join in Governor Blanchard's petitioning for your executive interposition in behalf of the people of New Orleans.

"MARTIN BEHRMAN, Mayor."

Selma Issues Pamphlet.

Selma, Ala.—Meeting of the auxiliary committee of public safety composed of five citizens from each ward was held at the city council chamber Saturday morning and a temporary organization formed, which will be completed on Tuesday evening at 6:30. The chairman for each ward, who is a member of the board of health, was given authority to fill any vacancies that might occur. It was decided to have about ten thousand pamphlets printed giving instructions and educating the people as to the necessity of exterminating the mosquito. These will be ready for distribution Tuesday evening. The meeting was quite an enthusiastic one and there is going to be a systematic, careful warfare waged against the stegomyia faciata and his ilk.

Justice McClellan's Views.

Montgomery, Ala.—The Age-Herald, in its Montgomery correspondence on Sunday morning, printed a full and comprehensive statement from Chief Justice Thomas C. McClellan, giving the side of the supreme court on the capitol improvement and extension disagreement. It goes over the whole ground and quotes some of the highest architectural authorities of the country on the two-story plan, as adopted.

In this statement the chief justice discussed the history of the movement so far as the supreme court is concerned and tells of what has been done and how it was brought about. He relates much that has not yet come out and shows why the supreme court judges felt that they were right in the plans agreed upon. Some of the criticisms of the judges are handled in a way to make mistake of meaning impossible and the people of the state have been put into possession of the entire situation so far as the court is concerned.

Convened Monday.

Knoxville, Tenn.—The court of chancery appeals convened Monday with Judges Barton, Taylor and Wilson presiding. The dockets are as follows:

McMinn county, Monday; Carter Hawkins, Tuesday; Campbell and Hamblen, Wednesday; Jefferson, Thursday; Anderson, Friday. Knox county will consume Aug. 14 and 15, while Aug. 22, 23 and 24 have been assigned to Hamilton county.

E PEACE ENVOYS

ed and Were Presented
Each Other by President Roosevelt.

UFFET LUNCHEON SERVED.

ny on Board Mayflower Rendered as Natural and Easy to Avoid Embarrassment.

ster Bay, L. I.—Final arrangements were completed Friday for the ption by President Roosevelt of Russian and Japanese peace en-he reception, which was a formal ting to the representatives of the ligerent powers by President sevelt on behalf of the United es government, took place at 30 p. m. on the cruiser Mayflower, finest vessel of her class in the y. It was attended by a notable onstration in honor of the distinguished guests of the country who e been designated by the emors as their representatives to the shington peace conference.

The cruiser Mayflower arrived here cast anchor in the lower bay early day afternoon. She is in command Commander C. M. R. Winslow, the sident's naval aide, and carries a complement of 250 men.

rce Represents State Department.

As was expected, the Sylph, the sident's naval yacht, with Assist Secretary of State S. H. H. Peirce some of the guests invited to the eption of the envoys, arrived Satday morning. Secretary Peirce, in absence of Secretary Root, repreted the department of state.

Russian and Japanese plenipotentiaes and their suites left New York turday morning, the Japanese at 9 clock and the Russians at 10 clock. The trip to Oyster Bay was de in sister cruisers, the Chattaooga and the Tacoma. Thus they not meet until they reached here were formerly presented to the esident of the United States.

The cruisers arrived in the outer y, that bearing the Japanese envoys out 11:45 o'clock, and that bearing Russian plenipotentiaries an hour so later.

Japanese Came First.

President Roosevelt went aboard Mayflower at 1 o'clock. As soon his flag was displayed the Japan plenipotentiaries and their suite oceeded in launches from their uiser to the Mayflower, and were received on deck by Commander inslow and his officers. After being presented to the President in the ain cabin by Assistant Secretary of tate Peirce, the Russian plenipotentiaries, accompanied by their suite, arded the Mayflower, and in the me manner were received and preented to the President.

The envoys of the two powers were then presented formally to one another, when every effort was made by President Roosevelt and Assistant Secretary Peirce to render the ceremony as natural and easy as possible in order to eliminate any embarrassment.

These ceremonies concluded, a luncheon was served. In order to avoid any unusual questions of precedence, the luncheon was a buffet collation. Thus was avoided the seating of the guests at the table with the President. The party in attendance at the luncheon numbered about twenty-five.

Shortly after the luncheon President Roosevelt took leave of the envoys and returned to shore in a launch. His flag was lowered as he left the ship's side.

From the Mayflower the Japanese envoys and their suites were conveyed to the dispatch boat Dolphin, which were anchored near by; the Russian envoys and their suites remained on the Mayflower. On these ships the two sets of envoys were conveyed to Portsmouth, N. H., where the sessions of the peace conferences are being held. Soon after the departure of the guests the Mayflower and Dolphin weighed anchor, and started on their journey convoyed by the cruiser Galveston.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt on Friday informally entertained Sergius Witte and Baron Rosen, the Russian emperor's plenipotentiaries to the peace conference.

Troy, Ala.—J. N. Grant, of Coffee county, near Tennille, was brought to Troy this morning before Commissioner Tutwiler by Deputy Marshal Collier charged with illicit distilling. The case was continued on account of the absence of the two most material witnesses.

Germany breeds 250,000 canaries every year.

Marion Quarantined.

Marion, Ala.—The mayor and council of Marion have issued a proclamation quarantining the city against all places infected with yellow fever. Dr. McCollum will inspect all trains coming to Marion. The health of Marion was never better, but the officials deem it wise to use prompt precautions.

McDermott Killed in Saloon.

Birmingham, Ala.—Joseph McDermott, a horse trader, who lives on Twenty-fourth street near Avenue A, was shot four times, three in the body and once in the hip, and almost instantly killed at 9:30 o'clock Friday night in Dusenberry's saloon on Twentieth street and Avenue A, by G. W. Jackson, one of the city guards, who lives 304 1-2 South Twentieth street.

McDermott died a few moments after he was shot, and his body was taken to Lige Loy's undertaking establishment.

While attempting to escape down Avenue A toward South Nineteenth street, Jackson stumbled and was arrested by Martin Eagan, a lieutenant on the police force. Jackson was taken to the city jail, where he was detained without bond.

Tidwell Paroled.

Montgomery, Ala.—The governor has paroled J. H. Tidwell, a white convict of Montgomery county, sent up for grand larceny. He says:

"This man was convicted and sentenced to serve a term of one year and one day on the charge of grand larceny. Since he has been at the penitentiary he has suffered the loss of one hand. I thought that maybe since he was crippled in this way while in service of the state, that perhaps he ought to be given his freedom before the expiration of his term for which he was sentenced. A parole is therefore ordered dependant upon his future good conduct."

Athens Man Dies.

Athens, Ala.—Mr. Bergo Hagan, brother of Dr. W. J. Hagan and Mrs. C. E. Frost, of this place, was found dead in bed in the Parschall house, Tuscumbia, Friday morning. He was a traveling man, representing a Nashville drug house, and worked in the city of Tuscumbia on Thursday, retiring as usual in his usual health Thursday night, occupying a room with one of the proprietors, and during the night Major Crowe, who was occupying the room with him, heard him making a noise as if having a nightmare, and went over and shook him and spoke to him, and he seemed to quiet down and the major returned to his bed, and Friday morning discovered Mr. Hagan dead.

Colonel Snodgrass Is Dead.

Scottsboro, Ala.—Col. D. N. Snodgrass, one of the most prominent and influential citizens in the county, died at 10 o'clock Friday night at Gross' sanitarium on July mountain, of valvular heart trouble. Colonel Snodgrass was a member of the large mercantile firm of Snodgrass & Co. and probably the largest Tennessee river planter in north Alabama. His death was a great shock to his family and relatives. He was about 60 years of age and a member of the Methodist church. Arrangements for the burial have not been made.

Engineering Corps in Florence.

Florence, Ala.—The engineering corps which has been making the first survey for the Tennessee industrial railroad, from Dixon, Tenn., to Florence, has arrived in the city, having finished the survey. So far no intimation has been given as to what road is back of the project, but Chief Engineer Farrer stated that the line would positively be built. The survey, which enters Florence from the west, runs through fertile country and the road when built will undoubtedly be a paying proposition.

Chautauqua Not Afraid.

Talladega, Ala.—One of the chautauqua artists, G. Paul Smith, of New York, the protean entertainer, who arrived Saturday evening, August 5, previously wired Manager Vandiver to know if yellow fever would stop the session of the Alabama chautauqua assembly, and was it safe to come to Talladega on account of the fever. The manager answered him that he could come on with safety, as the yellow fever scare was all nonsense, so far as a city in the mountains was concerned.

Fever Decreasing in Panama.

Washington.—Governor Magoon's report for July of the situation on the isthmus shows an improvement as compared with the preceding month. During July there were 29 cases of fever.

STATE HAPPENINGS

Of General and Local Interest as They Occur.

Will Have New Line.

Opelika, Ala.—It was officially announced in this city today that contracts had been let and preparations made for constructing an electric car line between this city and Auburn, for which ten miles of track will have to be laid.

The capacity of Opelika electric plant will be increased threefold to furnish power for the road and light and power for Opelika and Auburn. The company is capitalized at $300,000. Work of construction is to begin within thirty days.

Shot by Policeman.

Ensley, Ala.—James Mann, a bartender in McVay's saloon on Seventeenth street, was shot twice by Police Officer G. D. Nelson at 1 o'clock Thursday morning in the saloon.

Mann was not seriously wounded. One shot entered the chin and glanced downward and made two or three separate wounds in the neck. The ball finally lodged against the collar bone. The other shot entered the hand, making a painful but not dangerous wound.

On Serious Charge.

Gadsden, Ala.—Harrison Tarvin, of Ohatchie, Calhoun County, was arrested and brought to the city Thursday by Deputy United States Marshal W. S. Standifer and arraigned before United States Commissioner Pickard on a serious charge. It is alleged that while Tarvin was a passenger on the steamer Alabama a few days ago and while under the influence of whiskey he proceeded to break up and destroy some of the property on the boat which the United States government requires the boat to carry, such as saws, axes, etc., and it was charged that he threw some of them into the river. He waived preliminary examination and was bound over to the United States court at Anniston in the sum of $1,000, which he made and was released.

Anniston's Station.

Anniston, Ala.—The Anniston quarantine station has been reorganized and placed under the local supervision of W. S. Thrasher, of Montgomery, J. H. Achor, formerly in charge, having been dismissed from the service on a charge of ineffciency. Mr. Thrasher holds his position under W. R. Brassell, state supervision of quarantine examinations, and Secretary to Dr. W. H. Sanders, state health officer.

The local force has been enlarged and Mr. Thrasher now has representatives over the following trains: S. W. Cooper to Atlanta over the Southern; Louis Gelbke to Cartersville over the Louisville and Nashville; I. W. Breaziell, from Heflin to Atlanta over the Southern; W. H. Jones from Rome to Decatur; S. H. Pearce from Anniston to Rome.

Will Build Big Warehouse.

Albertville, Ala.—A stock company composed of W. W. Currey, Dr. A. L. Holliday, J. F. Hooper and Roberts Brothers, a number of Albertville's prominent business men on Thursday purchased fourteen lots, two blacksmith shops and some other property opposite the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis depot, and will begin at once the erection of a mammoth stone fireproof warehouse. They will be ready for the fall trade and expect to do a big business.

Awarded Prizes.

Auburn, Ala.—In order to promote interest in the raising of agricultural products and in cultivation of accurate knowledge and scientific appreciation of judging stocks, chickens, corn, etc., the college offered a number of valuable prizes at the recent meeting of the Farmers' Summer school. These prizes were competed for by gentlemen from all over the state and the interest was marked. There were fifteen competitors for the best ten ears of corn and the splendid specimens of this staple product showed the fine possibilities of the state along this line.

Little Girl Drinks Carbolic Acid.

Scottsboro, Ala.—A most distressing accident occurred late Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mr. Tom Judge in Wood's Cave, three miles south of Scottsboro, in which a little girl was killed. It seems that Mr. Judge, the father of the child, had a sick horse, and in doctoring the animal had occasion to use some carbolic acid. Afterwards he set it aside, and little Mary, his 4-year-old daughter, got it and drank the contents, or a part—enough to kill her. She lived four hours and died in great agony.

Lineville, Ala.—Lineville has the finest non-railroad depot in the state, perhaps in the United States. That qualifying phrase non-railroad depot is put in because Lineville's depot, which is now completed, is over eight miles from a railroad.

A patriotic citizen of the town put the thought in practically the same form when he said: "Lineville has the finest depot nine miles from a railroad of any town in the country."

Farmers Awarded Prizes.

Auburn, Ala.—In order to promote interest in the raising of agricultural products and in cultivation of accurate knowledge and scientific appreciation of judging stock, chickens, corn, etc., the college offered a number of valuable prizes at the recent meeting of the Farmers' Summer school. These prizes were competed for by gentlemen from all over the state, and the interest was marked. There were fifteen competitors for the best ten ears of corn, and the splendid specimens of this staple product showed the fine possibilities of the state along this line.

Coffin Found on Veranda.

Anniston, Ala.—Thursday morning Mr. Payne, who lives at Pleasant Gap, near here, found a little coffin on his veranda, together with a tree to which was tied a rope pictured on paper, with some threats to take his life if he did not leave the place by a certain day. Mr. Payne being a highly respected citizen and inoffensive in every way, is alarmed over the occurrence. Three negroes were arrested as the suspected guilty parties and were given a trial in justice court, but for the lack of evidence were acquitted.

A Gift to Florence.

Florence, Ala.—At the August meeting of the city council James A. Andrews made the city a gift of ten acres of land to be used as a park. The land is beautifully wooded and lies at the junction of Cypress and Cox's creeks. It is just across the Cypress creek from the pumping station of the Florence water works and is a very popular resort for picnic parties and the like. The grounds are about three miles north of Florence a little off the Jackson road and the only condition connected with the gift was that the city keep the short stretch between the Jackson road and the grounds in good condition. The gift was accepted by the city.

Illicit Outfit Captured.

Anniston, Ala.—A finely equipped moonshiner's outfit was captured five miles north of Edwardsville Thursday by Deputy Revenue Collector A. G. Montgomery, Deputy Marshal W. S. Standifer, George N. King and W. E. Burton. The outfit consisted of a 140-gallon galvanized iron still, a wood cap, a stone furnace, six fermenters, 250 gallons of rum, 150 gallons of spirit of beer and several minor utensils used in the manufacture of the rum. Jim Thomas, a white man, was arrested as the alleged operator of the still, and was tried before Commissioner Randolph Thursday afternoon and bound over to the United States grand jury in the sum of $150.

May Build Pavilion.

Demopolis, Ala.—There is a move on foot looking to the building of a pavilion here to be used as a skating rink and for other purposes which may come up, such as public speaking, church suppers, dancing, etc. A petition is being circulated asking for funds for this purpose, and it is being liberally signed. It is the intention to build it on the city's lot on Commissioners street, just north of Bluff Hall. In the event it is built, the use of the pavilion will be free.

Funeral of Jas. S. Kelly.

Anniston, Ala.—The funeral of Jas. S. Kelly occurred at the Baptist church at 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon, conducted by Rev. W. R. Ivey. The church could not hold the large crowd of friends that gathered to pay a final tribute of love to this grand old man. The services were solemn and impressive, and beautiful were the words spoken of the consecrated life and noble work of him who rests from all his labors.

West Point, Ga., Quarantines.

Mobile, Ala.—West Point, Ga., has quarantined against Louisiana and all infected territories. Persons from such sections will not be allowed to stop within the city limits without proper health certificates.

Anniston, Ala.—Grier Lisle, the negro who fell from a moving freight train between Cooke Springs and Birmingham Saturday evening, was brought to this city by his wife Thursday night in an unconscious condition.

Motherhood From the Woman Suffragist Point of View

By Laura Clay.

IN THE eulogy of Frances E. Willard by Senator Beveridge, on the occasion of the unveiling of the Illinois statue of her in Statuary hall at the nation's capital, he says: "The mother of all mothers, the sister of all wives, to every child the lover, Frances E. Willard sacrificed her own life to the happiness of her sisters. For, after all, she knew that, with all her gifts and all the halo of her God-sent mission, the humblest mother was yet greater far than she."

Why should such an estimate of herself be imputed to Frances Willard? She was above all a Christian, and this is not a Christian idea. When Jesus answered the woman who blessed the mother who bore him, he said: "Yea, rather blessed are they that hear the word of God and keep it." There is, then, something possible for womanhood more blessed than to be even the most exalted mother. For mere motherhood is a physical function, and such a function cannot be the highest achievement of a being endowed with intelligence and soul. How clearly this would have appeared if the orator, instead of the name of Frances Willard, had used that of George Washington or Phillips Brooks and said: "The humblest father was yet greater than he!"

Perhaps this extravagant praise of the "humblest mother" was given because the question of "race suicide" is now so much discussed. But if there is danger of race suicide at all, it is not from a deficiency of that motherhood which is so humble that it aspires to little more than to bring children into the world, and takes no thought of the conditions which surround them. Statistics show where the dangers lie when they tell such a dreary fact as that one-half the children die before they attain the age of five years.

The noble understanding of Frances Willard, illumined by her great mother heart, apprehended and taught that the world needs a womanhood sufficiently elevated to be capable of rearing children in health and virtue, and to be possessed of the self-respect to desire their share of political power to enable them to seek out and secure better conditions in which to rear their children than those that now prevail. She besought for mothers the boon of a voice in the laws in those words of hers, chosen to be inscribed on the pedestal of her statue: "I charge you give them power to protect along life's treacherous highway those whom they have so loved."

"Our Uncle Sam"

"Vague Loyalty," Compared with Feeling For Other Countries.

By Dr. Talcott Williams.

THE Frenchman, when called upon to repond to the toast in honor of his native land, pictures to himself a feminine figure, and glows with enthusiasm for La Belle France. The German speaks of his fatherland with mingled affection and that respect for paternal authority which is never entirely absent from the German conception of government. The mind of the Briton turns to his mother country with the love born, to a great extent, of a wonderful reign animated by the spirit of a great woman. But the American—the American speaks of Uncle Sam. If he has any feeling of affection for this abstraction it is a very mild one. Any idea of paternal authority is even more slight, and probablpy no one ever thought of an American administration mothering any one.

We think of Uncle Sam as a benevolent relative who has a mild feeling of affection for his nephews and nieces, but, like other uncles, expects them to hustle for themselves. He gives us a Christmas present once in a while—river and harbor bills, to make water flow in some places where nature never intended that it should—but in general he doesn't expect any one to look to him for guidance and support, and the last thing he would expect would be immediate and unquestioning obedience.

Along with this feeling for Uncle Sam goes a cousinly feeling for his nephews and nieces, and a readiness to welcome new cousins, provided they exhibit a capacity to hustle for themselves, though we have now come to the point where there is a serious doubt as to how many new cousins it is wise to receive.

..Wealth is a Trust..

By Bishop Potter.

ACCORDING to the teachings of the New Testament, we must believe that wealth, whether it be given to us in the form of beauty, material wealth or genius, is merely a trust. If you think back to the days of your childhood you will remember many of your schoolmates who started in life on what seemed to be an equal footing. As you think of them now, some of them have succeeded while others have failed, and you find yourself unable to explain the reason. That power which has enabled these people to succeed is a gift.

If you are heir to a great estate you are not free from responsibility, as many are inclined to believe. You are merely a steward, and must use your wealth for the good of others. I do not mean that we should have community of interests.

The great danger of all wealthy organizations, whether religious or not, is that they will become exclusive. That they will bar the poor and create a monopoly for the rich. There are two kinds of churches. One is open to all. The other makes use of the law of exclusion as well as that of inclusion. I was once pastor of such a church. When I was rector of Grace church the sexton once ordered from the building a poorly dressed woman who was praying in one of the pews. When I remonstrated with him, he replied: "Why, if we permit it, they will soon be praying all over the place." I want to see an open door and a welcome for all. Let a man worship in his shirtsleeves if he wishes.

Woman's Best and Sweetest Part

By Queen Alexandra, of England.

QUEENS must do all in their power to prepare their children for the exalted positions which they will be called upon to occupy. It should be their task, however difficult it may seem, to comfort the afflicted and unhappy. That is the best and sweetest part they can play, and for myself I have no wish to play any other.

In the troublous times in which we are living it is impossible not to be affected by the dissatisfaction of the masses, which is in many ways natural enough. Believe me, if the social problem ever can be solved, it will be by reason of the goodness of women, by mutual love and a common reverence for the right for justice and charity. Your talk, as men, is of war, but we women speak of peace—peace in every nation, peace between all nations.

I was educated in the school of a king who was before all things just, and I have tried, like him, always to preach love and charity. I have always mistrusted warlike preparations, of which nations seem never to tire. Some day this accumulated material of soldiers and guns will burst into flames in a frightful war that will throw humanity into mourning on earth and grieve our universal Father in heaven.

THE Birmingham News recently issued a "10 to 1" special edition, giving facts about the Birmingham district generally, and making the assertion that one dollar's worth of property in the district now will be worth ten dollars in less than ten years time. The wondefful progress of the mineral district, not to mention the State generally, that has been made of late years justifies this prophecy, and with further development it will probably come true. The great need at the present time is more labor throughout Alabama—mines, factories and fields are awaiting an increased population and many thousands of workingmen can find comfortable homes and profitable employment at good wages.

STATE NORMAL COLLEGE AT TROY.

Among the educational establishments of Alabama, the State Normal College at Troy, while the youngest (with the exception of the Girls' Industrial School at Montevallo) of the State institutions, is already taking a foremost place. The school was organized in 1887, and last year had an enrollment of 433, one of the largest in the State.

The college makes a specialty of training teachers for the public schools, and some of our friends, who have been students there, declare the course of study is most thorough. The course embraces Pedagogy and Methods, Civics, Mathematics, Languages, Science, Manual Training, Instrumental and Vocal Music, Art and Elocution, and with a strong faculty of fifteen specialists, each and every course is thorougly carried out, giving the student every opportunity of perfecting himself.

To the young people who are ambitious of attaining a foremost place in the ranks of the educational instructors of the State, a session at the Troy Normal College will prove of inestimable value. The location is healthy, and of easy access and the expenses are moderate, ranging from $125 to $150 per annum. Last year more than thirty counties were represented, and its graduates are highly thought of and secure desirable positions.

Under the presidency of Prof. E. M. Shackelford the Troy Normal College is making an enviable reputation, which we have no doubt will not only be maintained in the future but enhanced.

CODEN-BY-THE-SEA.

Alabama has not a very extensive coast line, but for pure enjoyment that part of it which borders the Mississippi sound cannot be excelled anywhere. From the borders of Mobile bay to the Mississippi line is but a short distance, but that distance embraces the purest air, finest fishing, boating and bathing, and withal the very best people on earth. If you cannot enjoy yourself there. life is not worth living, and you may as well quit.

Take a Bay Shore train at Mobile and an hour and thirty minutes run will take you to Coden-by-the-Sea. which, when it becomes better known, is destined to be the most popular resort on the gulf coast. The depot is almost on the banks of the pretty bayou, which looks cool and inviting in the morning sun, while but a short distance ahead the waves of the Sound are lazily rolling in. A couple of minutes walk takes you to the hotel Joullian, a comfortable hostelry where you can make yourself at home at a very moderate rate. Across the bayou you can see shady Glenwood Park and the cosy homestead of Capt. P. F. Alba. Stores? O, yes, there are two storehouses in Coden, but you didn't come here for shopping.

Get hold of one of those weatherbeaten fishermen and let us go out fishing in Portersville bay, where the fish are so thick they fall over each other trying to get at the bait. I couldn't begin to tell you of all the kinds of fish that may be caught, but one native gentleman (at least he had summered on the coast for thirty years) told me that he thought every kind of fish that was found anywhere else was to be caught in the Sound, and perhaps he was right. Sailing on Portersville bay, like everything else on the coast, is done in a lazy kind of way, the breeze is light and the water smooth, and

"That queer sort of up and down motion

is hardly perceptible, although the stormy winds do blow sometimes and then is a good time to stay ashore. If you fall overboard it don't matter, you can walk ashore, as there is no great depth of water in most places; but you'll get damp and a mouthful of salt water, and that will give you an appetite for the fish they are frying in the boat, for every boat carries its cooking apparatus and the fishermen, everyone of them, are born cooks.

The sun is pouring down, but there is such a delightful breeze that keeps one cool and in a pleasant frame of mind. Over there is Coffee island and further off we get a glimpse of Petit Bois island and Dauphin island. But 'bout ship, boys, let's get ashore, we want to go further down the coast.

Just as we are nearing the wharf, passing the mouth of the bayou, I learn the following:

LEGEND OF BAYOU CODEN.

In days of yore, no matter when,
When the coast was the home of the noble red men.
A tribe was encamped at Bayou Coden.

And fairest of all the Indian maids
Was Ko-de-na. the sprite of the forest shades,
And sad was her heart as she roamed the glades.

Fair was her form, but sad was her tone
As she told her tale to the waves alone
How her heart was lost to a brave that's gone.

He had scorned her love, and in deep despair
The bayou she sought, for peace was there.
And why should she linger her pain to bear?

As twilight gathered and night came along,
The wind was high and the waves were strong
As sadly she chanted her own death song

Then she plunged 'neath the waves, and ever since then
As the sun sinks to rest, may be heard again
Her mournful death song at Bayou Coden.

I never heard the song myself, but perhaps I wasn't there at the right time, or didn't get at the right place.

Crossing the bayou at the bridge, the road skirts the very edge of the water, while on the landward side numerous cottages dot the roadside, many of them of considerable architectural merit, and all of them built for the convenience and comfort of their owners. About a mile down the road and we reach the land of content, the abode of peace, and the laziest spot on earth, where care is unknown, and one gets too lazy for anything. It is in the air, and the monotone of the waves as they break on the shore all help to lull one into a dreamy state, and a blissful delusion that here is the El Dorado we have been seeking, "Here we rest." The breeze blows a little softer at San Souci, the waves are a little pleasanter at San Souci, while the bathing is par excellance at San Souci firm, sandy bottom, free from shells and all other nuisances.

SAN SOUCI,

A TRIP TO COOSA.

Editor Banner—Early Friday morning, 28th inst., William Rutland, Tom Traywick, William Long and myself left for a general tour of southwest Coosa county, where we all spent the happiest days of our lives, viz.: from childhood to manhood. We found this same so-called backwoods full of fine crops and the people in good cheer. The academy at Providence in which is located Proctor Masonic Lodge, receiving a thorough painting by your towusman, Robert Lake, and a promise by the good people that their church should be treated likewise, all of which is to their credit. We visited many points of interest to us. To specify one or more—the old mulberry tree, where we, as children, used to pluck the luscious fruit on Sundays; the old wash hole, near which was a nice sandbed in which we used to all wallow and play; our old big boiling spring where we many times have gathered to enjoy "Adams' ale" together with the big jug sweet cider for which we were noted. I viewed the big flat rock across which the spring path led and upon which one of my brothers lost his life in a wrestle, and upon which I used to spend hours with my brothers and the little negro children. It was upon this same rock I learned to double rap and backstep; it was just over the hill east of the house where mother, God bless her memory, took Ellis and myself for correction for some of our misconduct. She sat us down on a log in the woods, she cut a couple of beautiful red switches, sat down by us and while she trimmed the tiny knots from them to keep them from bruising our tender skins, she prayed earnestly for us, but later she did her whole duty, and I tell you of the two the prayer was the most effective. Then talk about the tender feeling of her mother for her offspring, it has no equal. Then we visited our neighbors at their homes, and while they might have lacked a little in style they made it all up in a hearty welcome and lots of good grub. Then from another viewpoint they are way ahead of the highly enlightened county of Chilton, over each place passed a telephone wire and if you need a doctor, a coffin, box of matches or anything else, you have only to call at the first house and call up "central," he gives you your man and all is well with you. This, mind you, is in the "Backwoods of Coosa county," but this telephone line pervades every nook and corner of old Coosa, while Chilton has, I suppose ¾ of a mile of 'phone erected by her citizens. Then Hull Bros., of Schley, have erected a line from their store to Knight's Ferry and invites us to join with them, and if no one else will give a cent I will build it to Verbena. Who will join me?

On the 29th we went to singing convention near Rockford, where good music, good eating, good horses, mules, buggies and carriages as well as good men and pretty women were the rule and not the exception. On our returning to Chilton we were greeted by our friends E. L. Manning, W. B. Jones, T. L. Robinsoh and others where they too were met to hold an all day singing with dinner on the ground; with a hearty invitation to partake of their feast, we accepted, and it being the noon hour Rev. Mr. Thomas invoked divine blessing, after which all were filled and besides plenty to spare. Then I said in the language of good old Simion, "Let thy servant depart in peace for mine eyes hath seen thy salvation."

Before concluding will ask your indulgence while I say a few words about a tender subject to some, viz.: stock law. Now, it is my observation that where there is stock law there is a great lack of pride chargeable mainly to the men folks. Now, I am now, and always have been, favorable to stock law, provided it is by populr consent. While I have said, can and will yet say many good things for Coosa county people, I must, and do charge them with dereliction of duty. 1st. To the public for not removing their old fences, clearing up and cultivating their land out to the bed of the public roads, instead of allowing them to grow up in bushes, vines and briars to the exclusion of the traveling public. 2d. To allow their private roads to become almost impassable; their yard fences to rot and fall down, and if stock is allowed to go out in winter the flowers and shrubery of the yard are eaten up. If this is invariable in stock law districts I say God forbid that we should ever have it, but I say there is no use of this and I urge all who favor stock law to bear this in mind: The man who so far forgets his home as to neglect it to that extent which I see some do and too, while he puts on a fine appearance (away from home) with his horses, buggies and good clothes and a strong bank account, he is not worthy of a good woman, and if I were a nice woman and was so mated I would keep a kettle of boiling water and when my hard efforts were thus treated I would scald everything in sight including the old man.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

Special correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, D. C., Aug 7. 1905

The call for the extra session of 59th congress will compel the organization of the House of Representatives three weeks earlier than it otherwise would have been organized, and if a delay was all that would retard the legislation that the President asks for, he would get some action inside of the three weeks before the beginning of the regular session.

It is practically a foregone conclusion that your "Uncle Joe" Cannon will be reelected Speaker and the old officers of the 58th congress also reelected. So far as the Democratic minority is concerned, there is not the shadow of a doubt that the Hon. John Sharp Williams, of Mississippi, will again be the caucus nominee for Speaker, which carries with it the floor leadership during the life of the 59th congress, and there could not be a better selection. The record made by Mr. Williams as the floor leader in the 58th congress was an enviable one and deserves the highest consideration at the hands of the National Democracy. When he took that place he found the democracy in the House in a demoralized condition; broken up into factions and quarreling among themselves, a veritable mob. He turned a mob into an army with banners in three short weeks and won a signal victory from the cohorts of triumphant Republicanism. Every man on the Democratic side then had the most implicit confidence in him, and the men who are the real leaders on the Democratic side lined up behind him, and the most of them staid there to the end of the congress. The only trouble with the Democratic party is that the members of it in the congress of the United States think they are all leaders and become jealous if any other man presumes to suggest policies to them. Many of them, in the presence of the master mind of Williams, swallowed this resentment, acknowledged the superior leadership of Mr. Williams and followed him gladly. There always are a few kickers and recalcitrants in every body of men and the 58 congress had its share in the minority membership. The majority of the kickers and soreheads were those members who failed to get the committee assignments they desired, when those assignments were at the disposal of Mr. Williams. He could not of course, give every man the best committee assignments in the House, and there you are. It may have been a mistake for Mr. Williams to allow Uncle Joe Cannon to push off on him the committee assigoments of the Democratic members, which always has been the prerogative of the Speaker and hitherto exercised by him and the responsibility accepted by him as well. Some people said it was a game played by the Republicans to get the Democratic membership embroiled, having it pulling in all directions, and have fun with it. If they figured it that way they reckoned without their host, for they not only did not pull in all directions, but as I remarked previously, they lined up behind John Sharp, at least the vast majority of them and pulled with him steadily to the end of the session.

Take Kodol After Eating.

After a hearty meal a dose of Kodol Dyspepia Cure will prevent an attack of Indigestion. Kodol is a thorough digestant and a guranteed cure for Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Gas on the Stomach, Weak Heart, Sour Risings, Bad Breath and all Stomach troubles. L. A. Soper of Little Rock, Ky., says: "Kodol Dyspepsia Cure deserves all the commendation that can be given it, as it saved the life of our little girl when she was three years old. She is now six and we have kept it for her constantly, but, of course, she only takes it now when anything disagrees with her. We feel grateful for the benefit derived from its use and would not be without it." Sold by Upchurch Drug co.

Rheumatism.

When pains or irritation exist on any part of the body, the application of Ballard's Snow Liniment gives prompt relief. E. W. Sullivan, Prop. Sullivan House, El Reno, O. It is the only remedy I have found that gives immediate relief." 25c, 50c and $1.00. Sold by Upchurch Drug co.

Public is Aroused.

The public is aroused to a knowledge of the curative merits of that great medicinal tonic, Electric Bitters, for sick stomach, liver and kidneys. Mary H. Walters, of 546 St Clair Ave., Columbus, Ohio, writes: "For several months, I was given up to die. I had fever and ague, my nerves were wrecked; I could not sleep, and my stomach was so weak, from useless doctors' drugs, that I could not eat. Soon after beginning to take Electric Bitters, I obtained relief, and in a short time I was entirely cured." Guranteed at Upchurch Drug co, price 50c.

A Warning to Mothers

Too much care cannot be used with small children during the hot weather of the summer months to guard against bowel troubles. As a rule it is only necessary to give the child a dose of castor oil to correct any disorder of the bowels. Do not use any substitute, but give the old fashioned castor oil and see that it is fresh, as rancid oil nauseates and has a tendency to gripe. If this does not check the bowels give Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and then a dose of castor oil, and the disease may be checked in its incipiency and all danger avoided. The castor oil and this remedy should be procured at once and kept ready for instant use as soon as the first indication of any bowel trouble appears. This is the most successful treatment known and may be relied upon with implicit confidence even in cases of cholera infantum. For sale by Upchurch Drug co., Clanton, A. Horn, Thorsby.

Mrs. W. A. Whitewell, Emory, Tex., writes: "My child had chills and fever for four years. We tried all kinds of medicines, and finally an acquaintance of mine recommended Herbine. We used three bottles, and the child is now completely cured. You have my permission to publish this testimonial, as I cheerfully recommend Herbine to all mothers having children afflicted as mine."

ALL DUE TO ALGEBRA.

A STORY SHOWING HOW THOSE WHO WILL CAN SUCCEED.

Real Life History of a Young Man Who Was a Bootblack a Few Years Ago and is Now Receiving a Salary of $6,000 a Year.

How often we hear men who really enjoyed good opportunities complain that they never had any chance. And what a rebuke to them it is when some poor boy starting with nothing works his way up by his own effort. A college education is a good thing to have, but it is by no means essential and where a boy has any real desire to know something he will find no difficulty in educating himself, in this country. The case told of in the following extract from the Washington Post well illustrates this truth.

There is a young man now receiving a salary of $6,000 a year who a few years ago was a bootblack in New Haven. His rise is due to his own desire for knowledge and to the interest taken in him by a member of the Yale faculty. The opening scene occurred while waiting for a train, observed a bright-looking Italian boy with a shine box slung across his arm seated on the station steps, earnestly poring over a book.

He approached the youngster and asked him if he would like to shine his boots. The bootblack went to work vigorously, placing the book on the ground close by, where he gave it an occasional sharp look while shining with the vigorous and skilled hands. The professor noted his alertness, and asked what book it was that proved so interesting, expecting to hear that it was a thrilling tale of "Old Sleuth," or something of the sort. He was surprised when the shiner replied with unconcern that it was an algebra.

"So you are studying algebra, are you?" said the professor.

"Yes, sir, and I'm stuck. Do you know anything about algebra?" responded the youth, both sentences in the same breath.

Now this professor was one of the notable mathematicians of Yale, and it sounded queer in his ears to be asked if he knew anything about algebra.

"Well, I know a little about it. What's the matter? Perhaps I can help you."

By this time the shoes were shined and the boy placed his book in the hands of the man to whom intricate mathematical calculations were not difficult at all. It was but the work of a moment to clear the mind of the aspiring young calculator and he fairly danced with delight.

"Why, I've been working at that for two days," declared the young man. "I thank you very much, sir."

"Now, I'll tell you what to do," said the gentleman, offering the boy his card. "When you get stuck again, you write to that address and I'll see that you get straightened out. Remember, now." And the professor rushed off to catch his train.

Not more than thre days elapsed before the mail brought a letter stating that the bright-eyed bootblack had again "got stuck" with his mathematics. And the return mail brought the much-needed help. A few more days and another application come. This kept up for a time, and then the professor began to advise the young man how to improve his condition.

"Leave the bootblacking and get a job in a blacksmith shop or some place where you can learn the use of tools," was the instruction. The boy went over to East Berlin and secured a place in a big shop there. The correspondence and the instruction continued. A letter brought the injunction: "Save your money." The reply came back: "I am saving every cent I can."

This went on for three years, and that blacksmith's apprentice had come to know a good deal about figures. He was a skillful manipulator of all the tools of his trade, and then came a proposition that gave the young blacksmith the happiest moment of his life.

The professor invited him to come to New Haven to become his special papil, without expense except for his board. The young man felt no hesitancy in accepting it, and the way that he went to work, now that he was relieved of the nine hours in the shop each day, gave the best evidence of how well he appreciated what the professor was doing for him. He was not a student of the university, but the influence of the professor obtained some privileges for him that were valuable. He became not only a skillful mathematician, but a remarkably skillful manipulator of apparatus.

At the end of two years there was an opening for the young blacksmith-mathematician. The General Electric Co. wanted a young man of just his talents and training, and when the professor recommended him a favorable offer secured his services. The young man went to work just as he went at the algebra five years before, with a vigorous determination to master all the difficulties in his path, and he did so. In two years he was receiving a salary of $6,000 a year.

It would be a delightfully imaginative ending of this story to say that the professor had fallen sick, and is in need and that the young man is supporting him. But that isn't the case at all. The professor is quite well and is attending strictly to business at the old stand.

CONNING TOWER CHANGES.

Delicate Machinery to Have a Central Nest Near Battleships.

Profiting by the lessons of the naval battles between Russia and Japan, the Bureau of Construction of the Navy Department, Washington, has determined upon a departure in battleship construction that is even more radical than the proposed installation of the turbine engine and that is the abolition of the conning tower on warships of all classes and the substitution therefor of an armored nest nearer the vitals of the ship, and worked by a new system of reflection by mirrors. It may not be a complete abolition, but it will be enough of a change to revolutionize the general method of directing a warship in action, which up to this time, in all navies of the world, has been from the main conning tower, which in a merchant steamship would be the pilot house, and from an elevated tower amidships which is equipped with electrical signals to keep the officer who is in command of the ship informed as to the position of the enemy, the roll of the ship and all the other technical details vitally necessary for successful gunnery.

The experts in the Bureau of Constructon, who keleps themselves informed of the most minute details in target practice by the navies of the Old World, and of results in actual warfare when they get the opportunity, have learned that in the battle of Port Arthur and in the battle of the Sea of Japan the Japanese gunners, under orders, of course, adopted an entirely new and, as events proved, a most effective form of attack, in training their 4-inch and 6-inch guns on the conning towers of the enemy's fleet. This did not interfere with the fire of the larger guns intended to disable the enemy by throwing projectiles against the parts of the hull where the impact would shock or disable the engines or steering gear.

The Japanese were keen enough to realize that if the brains of the ships, which must be in the conning tower, were paralyzed, the vessel would be helpless. This was learned after a shell, accidentally, it is certain, destroyed the conning tower of the Czarevitch. She was out of action from that moment.

The Japs kept the secret to themselves, but thereafter their gunners made special efforts, and in the battle of the Sea of Japan the disabling of these armored nests, which were in effect the headquarters of the directive officers, were attacked with merciless persistency. The Russians never discovered what their antagonists had accomplished until the whole fleet was annihilated or made useless.

If the Japs fooled the Russians, they did not fool the keen-witted observers in Uncle Sam's Navy Department, and that is why the new battleships which have been projected will appear without the familiar conning tower and the war vessels already in commission will be altered to conform to the innovation.

The Kearsarge, the Illinois, the Wisconsn, thel Maine, the iMssouri and the Kentucky will be changed, it is said, as rapidly as the new plans can be put into operation.

It is not desirable, an official explained, to change the position of the conning tower itself. It is necessary that this be retained at the bridge, where it affords an excellent lookout for the captain and the man at the wheel. But it is the extensive apparatus which it contains and which performs such an important function in the management, control and efficiency of the ship, that is being considered and which it is suggested should have more complete protection than is now afforded.—New York Press.

Musical Motors.

An American is said to have invented a musical instrument, which, if it ever became popular, would revolutionize our streets. It is nothing less than a machine which combines the qualities of the organ and of the Eolian harp, and it is made in two sizes; one small, to be fitted to the frame of a bicycle; and the other larger, to be attached in front of a motor-car. The inventor claims that the wind blowing through the instrument will produce such a concord of sweet sounds that neither the cyclist nor the motorist will ever be wearied on a journey, but will ride and drive in ecstacy, entranced with their own music. Moreover, the complaints which have hitherto been made of the harsh jingle of the bicycle bell, and of the raucous bellow of the motor's horn, will no longer have any justification. The cycle and the motor will be announced by fairylike melodies, which will soothe the pedestrian, and almost reconcile hi mto being run over. The idea is ingenious, but we doubt whether it will ever become popular in this country. The weight of such an instrument cannot be inconsiderable, and its chief drawback is that the music is not under the control of the rider and driver. A gramophone attachment would be simpler, and would have the advantage of proclaiming the owner's musical tastes, differentiating the admirers of Brahms and Wagner from the man devoted merely to the "Spring Chicken."—London Globe.

TRANSPORTING SXPLOSIVES.

An Expert Opinion on a Question Raised by the Harrisburg Disaster.

The danger connected with the transportation of dynamite and similar explosives has been shown not only by the recent accident near Harrisburg, but by numerous others, in this and in foreign countries. The prevailing ideas which are suggested as remedies for this menace to life and property in transportation are based on various safeguards surrounding the material, and on special care in handling the explosive in transit.

Senator Elkins has prepared a bill which is intended to regulate the transportation of high explosives on railroads and he intends to introduce it at the next session of congress. This provides for greater care in the placing of cars containing such materials in the train, requires them to be marked in some conspicuous way, and when not in transportation to be sidetracked outside of city limits. While such a law may be of some benefit in reducing the danger, it cannot prevent it. The middle of the train length would ordinarily be regarded as the safest place for a car of explosive material, but in the Harrisburg accident it proved to be the very worst place.

We have not yet seen the suggestion that the risks can be greatly lessened if the amount of the explosive which is transported be reduced. It is believed that this can be done to a large extent by requiring the explosive to be manufacturered on the ground at all works which may make use of any large quantity of it. It is a simple process to make nitroglycerine at the works where it is to be used and combine it with the infusorial earth, or sawdust, in the manufacture of dynamite. The glycerine could be transported in tank cars and the acids and other separate ingredients as ordinary freight without special danger. In order to carry out such a plan it would only be necessary to provide convenient methods of making nitroglycerine and dynamite in the field, and if this is done it would reduce to a large extent the risk due to the transportation of high explosives in large quantities.

Several contractors on rock and tunnel work in this country have manufactured their own explosives near the point of operation, and some provision in the proposed law requiring this to be done at all large works would remove at once a greater part of the danger due to the transportation of this material on our railroads.—Railway Age.

Reports from Spain say that Senor Balsora, an employe in the Government telegraph department, has been making some highly successful experiments with torpedoes whose course is directed by means of the wireless telegraph. In a recent communication to the Paris Academy of Sciences Professor Chareau announced that he found radium rays will counteract the poison of serpent venom. Viper or cobra poison, he said, loses its virulence after fifty or sixty hours of exposure. Victims of cobra bites, however, usually die in a few minutes; hence radium can hardly be considered an antidote.

The price of radium has increased owing to the difficulty of obtaining further supplies. The consequence is that research work has almost ceased. Sir William Ramsay states that $100 a milligramme or at the rate of $3,000,000 an ounce, is now demanded. An expert is of the opinion that not more than a half ounce of radium has been manufactured since Professor and Mme. Curie discovered it.

The Plea of "Nolo."

The straight and simple lines marked out for her family by Mrs. Lane were a source of great satisfaction to her and of considerable amusement to her neighbors.

"There is nothing more tiresome and ill-bred than fruitless argument," announced that determined woman to one of her friends, whom she counted an agreeable person, but lacking in spirit, "and we have made a rule never to have it in our family."

"I don't see how one can always avoid it," said the meek-spirited neighbor, "when all the members of a family have different opinions."

"It's no harm to have opinions if you keep them to yourself," said Mrs. Lane, indulgently, "but I'll tell you how we manage. For instance, at the table; of course if one of the children makes a statement which I cannot indorse, I simply say, 'That is pure foolishness. Let us hear no more of it.' But if one of the other children attempts to start an argument, why, then I have to be more firm, and send him or her from the table. Of course my older son and daughter have come to years of discretion, and never think of transgressing the rule."

"But do you and Mr. Lane always think alike?" ventured her friend.

"Not always," said Mrs. Lane, frankly, "but we pursue the same system with each other. If I express an opinion from which Mr. Lane differs, I say pleasantly, 'You remember our little rule, my dear,' and naturally he stops at once. And if he expresses one from which I differ, I just smile across the table at him and say, 'As I cannot subscribe to that, and we must bear in mind our rule, will you kindly say no more, my dear.' You see, it's a simple matter, if each one will do his or her part, and it does so greatly add to the peace of a household!"—Youth's Companion.

No Loophole.

A New Hampshire lawyer, for some years judge of the police court in Concord, was a natural peacemaker, and always endeavored, says the Green Bag, to smooth over any slight differences between persons brought before him.

On one occasion, when the charge was for technical assault, it came out in the course of evidence that the parties were neighbors, and had formerly been on the best of terms.

"It is a pity," the judge said, persuasively, "that old friends, as you seem to have been, should appear before me in such a way. Surely this is a case which might be settled out of court."

"It can't be done, judge," answered the plaintiff, seriously. "I thought of that myself, but the coward won't fight."

THE PULPIT.

AN ELOQUENT SUNDAY SERMON BY THE REV. ST. CLAIR HESTER.

Subject: The Witness of Good Works.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—At the annual Guild service in the Church of the Messiah the rector, the Rev. St. Clair Hester, preached on "The Witness of Good Works." For the text he chose I Peter ii:11: "That whereas they speak against you as evil doers they may by your good works which they shall behold glorify God." Mr. Hester said:

The value to Christianity of the evidence of good works cannot be gainsaid or withstood. It speaks for itself and with a power and effectiveness no words can have. In the presence of such a demonstration of its truth, argument, advertisement, exalted claims, eloquent commendation are beside the work, are not needed, are of small use and minor importance. A great ship steams in from the sea and we may view her as she lies still and quiet in her berth, but upon her decks and sides there are signs of the rough voyage upon her prow and funnels is the salt thrown there by the high breaking waves. Men may say of her she is too large, badly proportioned, improperly constructed, her machinery is not of the latest pattern; they may criticise and accuse and point out defects, but there is no denying that she has plowed the surface of thousands of miles of deep water and brought her precious cargo of freight and passengers safe and undisturbed to their destination.

This symbolizes in a way the position of the Church of God in the world today. And it describes after a fashion, too, the singularity, the unique prominence of the Christian among the all sorts and conditions of men constituting what is known variously as society, the public, the body politic. Never mind what the world may have or find to say against you, my Christian friend, if you do well, this well doing disarms suspicion, gains the mastery over falsehood, silences misrepresentation and supplants enmity with good will. If your works be good you do not need to have recourse to eulogy, notoriety-seeking or noise; the world has need of them; men have an instinctive respect and appreciation of everything conducive to the common benefit, they will win their way, they will secure their place, they, the works, not you, will exact deserved recognition. A tree may be despised and spoken evil of, but if the fruit be healthful and sweet, pleasing to the taste, a change in the estimate of it is sure to come. By their fruits ye shall know them is a true principle which calumny and envy cannot down, and from whose righteous judgment there is no appeal.

St. Peter in this text was writing to Christians and churches existing in Gentile or foreign countries and among peoples of heathen religions. Their lot was anything but pleasant, their safety anything but assured. The Christians of those early days were commonly accused of being disturbers, innovators, mischief-makers, of being lawbreakers and traitors to Caesar, of being atheists and blasphemers of the popular idolatry. Because the popular hatred of them they were compelled to meet secretly, to exclude outsiders from their places of worship, and this led to reports that they indulged in wild, obscene orgies. Because of the phrase "drinking of the precious blood" used in connection with the communion service, it was said that they killed infants and drank their blood in their private assemblies. They were under constant suspicion and surveillance. Their enemies were ever on the alert seeking to discover faults and inconsistencies, to uncover them in some wrongdoing. St. Peter hopes and believes that this close observation of the lives of the followers of Christ may lead to the undeceiving of their enemies as to their true character, and that from this better understanding there may come a disposition to investigate, to come closer, and, finally to embrace their holy religion. He is confident that prejudice aside and knowledge in its place can result in only this—its glad and willing acceptance.

What an opportunity then in view of these circumstances and what an inducement to live exemplary lives—that others, even their bitter enemies and severest critics, might be brought to know the only true God and Jesus Christ, whom He did send. The apostle's counsel is to this effect—be true to thy cause and to thy God, be good and do good, not merely because it gives you peace of mind and joy of soul, not merely because it is to your highest and best interest—this would be looking on the side of self only—he eliminates all selfish taint from his counsel by putting emphasis upon the educative effect of Christian conduct upon the sentiments and convictions of hostile and heathen neighbors. This is your chance, he intimates; this the means—your good works—impress them, win them, help them, in this way, by this means.

All these considerations, this motive, these means are of present moment, of up-to-date interest and may be of present application. Though living in a nominally Christian age and land, practically the Christian is still surrounded by an envious, evil-speaking, backbiting world. They who are not with us are as critical, as watchful, as eager to find wherewith to accuse, embarrass, expose as ever in the days of the apostle. Not only our own souls, not only our morals and principles are in our keeping, but the safeguarding and growth of the church, the purification and moral uplift of society, the putting down of iniquity and sin and yes, verily, the Christianization of the home, the family, the community, the city, the salvation of the world. Every Christian is as a city set on a hill—not to be hid—and men will be won to Christ in proportion as each and every Christian feels a responsibility for the unchurched masses, for those not in the Good Shepherd's fold, and just in proportion as each and every one comes up to the measure of his responsibility. Translated into modern application, the apostle's meaning to you and me is this: "You Christians, so regulate your desires and take account of your ways that your life will be becoming and worthy of your calling, and thus the heathen, the indifferent, the estranged and prejudiced people around you, prejudiced against Christ, will be prepared to receive the Gospel when it is urged upon them." INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR AUGUST 13.

Subject: Josiah and the Book of the Law, II. Chron. xxxiv., 14-28—Golden Text, Psa. cxix., 16—Memory Verse, 31—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

I. The book of the law discovered (vs. 14-18). 14. "Brought out the money." It would seem that the book of the law was found by the high priest in the treasury where the money was kept. "Found." This expression indicates that the allusion is to something already known, not to anything that had come to light for the first time. "Book of the law." The name given to the five books of Moses. The book of the law cannot mean anything else, either grammatically or historically, than the Mosaic law, "the Pentateuch," so designated in Chronicles, Ezra and Nehemiah. The temple copy, deposited, according to Deut. 31: 26, by the ark of the covenant, which had been lost under the idolatrous kings Manasseh and Amon. "Given by Moses." This statement has led many to believe that it was the ancient autograph copy which came from the hand of the great lawgiver. This, Kitto thinks, was one reason why its discovery made such an extraordinary impression. 15. "Delivered the book." Shaphan was the private secretary of the king and had charge of his books and records. The book found was a parchment roll. Books were few and precious.

16, 17. "Brought—word back." Before Shaphan delivered the new found book to the king he reported to him concerning the business on which he had been sent at first. He told the king that they had faithfully performed the work committed to them and that the money had been properly paid out. 18. "A book." Shaphan had already read the book, or portions of it (2 Kings 22: 8), and no doubt fully understood its character, but he did not tell the king that it was the book of the law; he spoke of it as a book and allowed the king to form his own opinion as to its importance. "Read therein" (R. V.) That is, Shaphan read portions of the book. Of course he read at the king's command. Josiah was anxious to know the truth and the nature of the law he had been trying to obey.

II. The effect on the king (vs. 19-21). 19. "King had heard." Those who hear God's word so often can scarcely conceive the effect the reading of the law would have on this young king as he listened to it for the first time. "Rent his clothes." Brought face to face with the awful curse of God, pronounced nearly a thousand years before on the nation, for the very sins which had characterized the reign of his father and grandfather, amazement took possession of him. He rose from his throne, rent his clothes, humbled himself before the Lord and wept (2 Kings 22: 19). He rent his clothes partly in grief and horror, like Reuben (Gen. 37: 29) and Job (1: 20); partly in repentance, like Ahab (1 Kings 21: 27). 20. "King commanded." The king appointed a delegation of five to inquire of the Lord. This was a truly honorable and imposing delegation, and was indicative of the king's profound earnestness and anxiety. 21. "Go, enquire." The king saw that this was a matter of great importance, and he desired to know from Jehovah Himself exactly what to do. He felt a deep anxiety for himself and also for his people—the ten tribes as well as the two. "Great—wrath." He heard its distant rumblings like the coming of a fiery lava flood, in the hoards of the Sythians, enforced by the prophecies of Jeremiah and Zephaniah. "Our fathers," etc. Amon and Manasseh had led the people into gross sins. In the light of the law he had just heard read Josiah saw that the nation was doomed.

III. Huldah's faithful message (vs. 22-28). 22. "Huldah." All we know of this celebrated woman is recorded here and in the parallel history of Kings. But this short narrative has immortalized her name. Probably the two prophets, Jeremiah and Zephaniah, were absent from the city. But God is not straightened in His instruments. He can use a woman to speak for Him as well as a man, an humble person as well as an exalted one. Huldah had the full prophetic gift, and spoke as boldly, confidently and promptly as would Isaiah or Jeremiah. "Keeper of the wardrobe." There seems no doubt that the robes here alluded to are the robes of the priests, which are called by the same Hebrew word in Exod. 28: 2-4 and many subsequent passages. "In the college." "In the second quarter." R. V. This refers to a part of the city of Jerusalem which was known by that name. 23. "Tell ye the man." Her answer to the deputation was fearless, and seemingly abrupt. 24. "Bring evil." The judgments of God. "This place." Jerusalem. "All the curses." See Deut. 27: 14-26; 28: 15-68.

25. "Have forsaken Me." This was the gist of their offense, the thing that was unpardonable. Against this were all the chief warnings in the law (Deut. 29: 25-28, etc.) and the prophets (Judg. 10: 13; 1 Kings 9: 9; Isa. 1: 4; Jer. 1: 16, etc). It was not merely that they broke the commandments, but they turned from God altogether, and "cast Him behind their back." "Shall not be quenched." For such a state of things there is "no remedy" (2 Chron. 36: 16), and this was the state of things reached by the Jews. 26-28. The prophetess in these verses sends a personal word of comfort to the king. Because he had humbled himself and in a true spirit of repentance had wept before the Lord because of the wickedness of his people; therefore the Lord would show mercy upon him, and he should be gathered to his fathers in peace and not see the evil that was soon to come upon the nation.

British Postoffice Rules.

The rules of the British postoffice are presumably liberal regarding what may be sent by mail. But there is, of course, some red tape, as this wail from a person who wished to send a copy of a will by mail goes to show. He writes: "The postoffice allows you to do a good deal that you never want to do. You may, for instance, send a live bee by post; you may even, 'with the special permission of the postmaster general,' send what the Postoffice Guide describes as 'any living creature.' But if you try to send a copy of a will to America your troubles begin. It seems absurd that while, apparently, a baby can be sent by post a will can not. But, as the postal assistant pointed out when the would-be sender of the latter article returned for the third time to the office with the thing done up right at last, 'You see, it isn't printed matter, and it isn't exactly manuscript, and it isn't commercial. That's where the difficulty comes in."

Free to Kiss.

An Irish judge stated that if any woman were brought before him on a charge of slapping or scratching a man's face because he had attempted to kiss her he would at once dismiss the charge. He, however, only awardthe charge. He, however, awarded one shilling damages against a man who had kissed a widow without getting scratched.

Places Made for Them.

It is the amiable custom of the house of lords to preserve, duly "docketed," places in their cloak room for young peers awaiting their coming of age. To show how thoughtful they are in this respect there is a place reserved for the baby Marquis of Donegal against the arrival of his 21st birthday.

But twenty years ago I had kidney trouble so bad I could not work. Backache was persistent and it was agony to lift anything. Gravel, whirling headaches, dizziness and terrible urinary disorders ran me down from 168 to 100 pounds. Doctors told me I had diabetes and could not live. I was wretched and hopeless when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, but they cured me eight years ago and I've been well ever since."

Wright Lorimer.

Wright Lorimer, the star and producer of the big Biblical drama, "The Shepherd King," said to be the largest and most expensive theatrical production ever attempted in this country, is a native of Massachusetts. He received his preparatory education at the Worcester (Mass.) academy, and his collegiate education at Colgate University, afterwards taking a special course in English literature at Oxford University. Mr. Lorimer declined a chair of English literature at the Stanford University and determined to make the stage his field of action. His first appearance on any stage was made as a super with the Dearborn Stock Company in Chicago. "The Shepherd King" is said to be the only successful Biblical play of modern times, being in effect a dramatization of the book of Samuel.

Queer Blunders in Titles.

Some queer blunders are made in addressing royalty and other titled personages. Lady Dufferin, in India, was once addressed as "Your Enormity." An Abyssinian missive came to Queen Victoria, addressed to the "Queen of Kings, Empress of the Great Red Sea." Her Highland tenants used to say: "Come awa' in and sit doon, Queen Victoree."

Bishop Charles C. Grafton, one of the acknowledged leaders in the "High" Church doctrines of the Episcopal religion, has established a monastery for members of the Benedictine order, of Fond du Lac, Wis.

FEAR FOR NIAGARA.

IMMENSE VOLUME OF WATER DIVERTED FROM FALLS.

Commercial Enterprises Are Making Heavy Drains on This Famous Show Place—Its Tremendous Electrical Power the Inducement.

Niagara Falls, August 7.—The volume of water being diverted from the historic Niagara Falls is reaching such proportions that the people of the State are trying to pass laws which will prevent the possibility of a practical wiping out of this sublime natural spectacle.

Water sufficient to develop nearly five hundred thousand horse-power continuously, twenty-four hours per day, for industrial purposes, is now being taken from the river above the Falls, and further developments requiring more water are contemplated.

Probably the largest user of the electricity produced by the waters of the mighty river is the concern which by the five or six thousand degree heat of the electric furnace brings lime and coke into unwilling union, thereby producing what is known as Calcium Carbide.

Dry calcium carbide is lifeless as so much broken rock, but in contact with water it springs into activity and begets abundantly the gas Acetylene. The light resulting from the ignition of acetylene is the nearest approach to sunlight known.

These facts, though of comparatively recent discovery, were soon seized by men with an eye to the commercial possibilities and to-day calcium carbide is being shipped everywhere and used for dispelling darkness in buildings of all descriptions, from the ordinary barn of the farmer to the country villa of the wealthy, as well as for lighting the streets of a large number of towns.

Acetylene can be easily and cheaply installed, and the manufacture and sale of acetylene generators has become a business of recognized standing, has assumed large proportions and is steadily growing.

Alfonso Turned Flip-Flaps.

One evening when the young King of Italy was the guest of King Edward in Buckingham palace Alfonso thought things were moving rather slowly. With the view of livening up the spirits of himself and his fellow guests his juvenile majesty proceeded to turn flip-flaps down a corridor, to the immense delight of every one present. After the laughter has subsided Alfonso justified himself by quoting the opinion of Horace, "Dulce est desipere in loco," which he translated thus liberally: "It is delightful to play the fool at a fitting time."

THEY SHOOT WHERE YOU HOLD

Truths that Strike Home

Your grocer is honest and—if he cares to do so—can tell you that he knows very little about the bulk coffee he sells you. How can he know, where it originally came from, how it was blended—or with what—or when roasted? If you buy your coffee loose by the pound, how can you expect purity and uniform quality?

LION COFFEE, the LEADER OF ALL PACKAGE COFFEES, is of necessity uniform in quality, strength and flavor. For OVER A QUARTER OF A CENTURY, LION COFFEE has been the standard coffee in millions of homes.

LION COFFEE is carefully packed at our factories, and until opened in your home, has no chance of being adulterated, or of coming in contact with dust, dirt, germs, or unclean hands.

In each package of LION COFFEE you get one full pound of Pure Coffee. Insist upon getting the genuine. (Lion head on every package.)
(Save the Lion-heads for valuable premiums.)

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS

The more Magazines there are, the more Indispensable is The Review of Reviews

"Indispensable." "The one magazine I feel I must take." "The world under a field-glass." "An education in public affairs and current literature."—these are some of the phrases one hears from noted people who read the Review of Reviews. The more magazines there are, the more necessary is the Review of Reviews, because it brings together the best that is in all the most important monthlies of the world. Such is the flood of periodical literature that nowadays people say that the only way to keep up with it is to read the Review of Reviews. Entirely over and above this reviewing section, it has more original matter and illustrations than most magazines, and the most timely and important articles printed in any monthly.

Probably the most useful section of all is Dr. Albert Shaw's illustrated "Progress of the World," where public events and issues are authoritatively and lucidly explained in every issue. Many a subscriber writes, "This department alone is worth more than the price of the magazine." The unique cartoon department, depicting current history in caricature, is another favorite. The Review of Reviews covers five continents, and yet is American, first and foremost.

Men in public life, the members of Congress, professional men, and the great captains of industry who must keep "up with the times," intelligent men and women all over America, have decided that it is "indispensable."

A Queen's Cold Cure.

"You have a cold, eh?" said the physician. "Well, suppose I give you the same prescription that Queen Elizabeth used?"

He took down an ancient folio.

"Dr. William Bulleyn's prescription for a cold, which Queen Elizabeth used all her life, was this," he said.

"Takes nutmegges, the root called dornike, which the apothecaries have; setwall, gatangall, mastike, long pepper, the bark of pomecitrone, of melon, of sage, hazel, marjorum, dill, spiknard, wood of aloes, cubebe, cardamon (called graynes of paradise), lavender peniroyalls, the bone of a hart's heart grated, cut and stamped, and beat your spices grossly in a mortar. Put in ambergrice and musk, of each half a dram. Distil this in a simple aqua vitae, made with strong ale, in a serpentine. To tell the virtue of this water against cold, phlegme, dropsy, heaviness of mind, coming of melancholy, I cannot well at the present, for it is too great."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Little Stories Heard on the Corner.

The last chapter of the celebrated dog case took place, Monday, in the County Court, before Judge Reynolds, thus finishing the round of all the courts—justice' court, circuit court and county court. The case was settled between the parties and Dr. Campbelle and Mr. Robinson no more will dispute about "Hamp" and "Frank."

First bales are being reported—Montgomery received its first bale last Friday and it brought 15½ cents per pound. Selma got its first Tuesday and it was sold for 16½ cents per pound. This is a right good start, who will bring the first to Clanton?

At the Farmers' Summer School at Auburn, J. N. Dennis of Clanton was awarded third prize for judging beef and dairy cattle, sheep and hogs, and second prize for the best ten ears of corn raised on his own place.

"The Ideal Home," which must be a Christian home, was the theme of Rev. A. C. Swindall's discourse Sunday night at the Baptist church and it was a most interesting sermon.

Mr. H. N. Mullins, of Maplesville, sold 46 bales of cotton, Tuesday, at 10 40¢ per pound.

it's to see

Whatever's the cause of the row?

It's the marshal a hunting a cow.

's a bowdydo a regular riot,
I wonder what trouble's afloat?

The marshal is after a goat.

h a racket there is, a squeak, squeak,

And everyone dancing a jig.

Was the marshal a chasing a pig

There's no mistake about it, we ve been having a thorough clean- up and Clanton is now as clean s pink, that is so far as our esent sanitary (or insanitary) ditions will allow. But it is od work so far, and now it is rted should be kept up. The e is not far distant when Clan- will be compelled by the force circumstances to adopt a system sanitation, and to furnish a ter supply. At the rate the wn is growing, these are neces- ties of the immediate future and ould receive the consideration of e citizens, as well as the study of e mayor any council.

"Let me sell you a quart of Rye, a gallon if you like," was the ewhat startling expression ard in our prohibition town the her evening, and there stood Bill Mullins at his storehouse door with quart measure in his hand solicit g customers for "Rye." William a good church member, and a tter opponent of all blind tigers, d to think of him openly trying sell "Rye" demanded investiga- n. Marshal Ed Smithermen was sy chasing hogs, and Sheriff Morgan was off after a negro, so ey were out of the question, but impromptu investigating com- ittee looked into the matter and und the "Rye" alright, but it was sack, and the committee retired gusted at finding it was a dry e of dry Bill Mullins.

The Court of County Commis- ers have been in regular session ce Monday, and will probably journ this (Thursday) morning addition to the usual routine iness, a bridge was ordered to built over Walnut creek at ddox's mill.

An important part of the pro edings was the consideration of a mber of plans for he extension the court house and the enlarge- ent of the jail. The following chitects appeared before the Board and submitted their plans: W. Chamberlain & Co., of Bir- mingham; The Bruce Architectural Co, Birmingham; Mr. Weathers, New Orleans; Mr. Youngblood, San Antonio, Texas.

After consideration, the Board decided to accept the proposition of W. Chamberlain & Co., and gave them to Aug. 25 to complete the plans on which date the Board will meet to arrange for advertising for bids from contractors. The plans proposed will lengthen the court use about thirty feet, with an trance from the side, opposite The Banner office, and the cost is t to exceed $7,000 for both court use and jail. The jail is to be ised about six feet, which will low for better ventilation and nitation. At the court house the ccomodations for the grand jury will be greatly improved, as will so those for the petit jury's up- irs. All the work is to be finish- d by fall term of court. There is w about $8,000 in the treasury, d there will be no occasion for a ecial tax to cover the expense.

THE BANNER BOY.

Jemison, Aug. 14, 1905

Editor Banner—I want to say a few words through your paper in regard to the telephone. Mr. Gul- ledge said in his letter that there wasn't but about ½ miles of private telephone in the county. I want to say to him that if he will come to Jemison he can call me up at any time, as we have a good line from Jemison to my place, a dis- tance of four miles, and it cost $75.40; part of it has been paid by subscription, balance I have paid myself, and I wouldn't be without it for $100. We also have the wire and insulators in the depot to ex- tend it five miles farther, and if nothing happens we will be con- nected with Bibb county telephone at Randolph in a short time. I have been over in Bibb and they have something over 500 miles of telephone of this kind over there; it is a blessing to every country, and why not Chilton go to work and build lines all over our county? I think that our line is the first free line in the county. If we need a doctor from Jemison, all we have to do is to call him on the 'phone and he can get here while we would be getting there. I have studied the business for about twelve months and have written to several parties for plans and ma- terial required to put up a line and if any one or parties want to put up a line I will give them any in- formation I can and will furnish material at cost to any line in the county. Our line cost $75.40 with boxes and batteries at each end of wire, and our boxes are of the kind that others can connect with ours all O. K.

We are having abundance of rain; cotton crops in this section are damaged from red rust, and is beginning to open slowly. Corn crops are very good; peas and all minor crops bid fair to make a good yield. Cotton crops, I fear, will be cut very nearly half from last year. I want to leave off the crop subject and say something of the good spiritual things we are having in our midst,

Last Friday evening closed a ten day's singing school, conducted by Prof. W. H. Robinson, and I want to say just here that it was one of the grandest schools ever taught in this part of the country, and one of the most pleasant and enthusiastic schools I ever visited. There was something like 50 average pupils, Prof. Robinson has gained for him self a large number of friends on account of his faithfulness and kindness toward his pupils, and I am sure the entire community has his warmest love for their kindness toward him I want to thank the good people of this community, especially the good ladies, for their good dinner spread on the last day of school. We pray God's blessing upon our good brother, and grant, our Father, that all his musical life may be spent as pleasant as the ten days that he spent with us. After thanking our brother and the good people for their faithfulness toward the good work they were enlisted in, the parting hand was extended first, by the class, then by the entire congregation, while we sang, "Blessed Home," in Singing for Joy.

Hurt by Explosion.

Birmingham, Ala.—Five men were horribly burned Saturday morning in an explosion in the slag pits of Robert Vance & Co. at the Sloss furnaces in North Birmingham. The injured are Robert Vance, his son, head, arms and eyes burned; J. B. Edney, body injured; J. H. Prayter, colored, may die, and Cornel Walker, colored, slightly injured.

Elder Vance had been endeavoring to blast a ledge of slack, two attempts having proven unsuccessful. He poured half a keg of powder into the still warm drill hole, causing a terrific explosion, which hurled the men to the ground and shook many houses in the vicinity. The injured men were brought to Birmingham and carried to an infirmary. Their condition is serious. Four may lose their eyesight, and the flesh is peeling from their bodies in flakes.

Got Moonshine Still.

Anniston, Ala.—United States Marshal Gardner, of this city, arrested Forney Mays and John Floyd in Clebrune county, fifteen miles south of Edwardsville, Thursday for illicit distilling. The still was in active operation and the operators were an easy prey. It is alleged the plant is owned by Jim Floyd, a brother of the man arrested. The latter will doubtless be apprehended later. The officers captured only a small amount of whisky, but 400 gallons of beer came into their hands. The two men were brought before United States Commissioner George B. Randolph, of this city. Being unable to make bond, which was fixed at $500, they were remanded to jail.

Dies of Lockjaw.

Scottsboro, Ala.—Joe Whirneant met with an accident last Thursday that cost him his life. He was driving a yoke of oxen and engaged in hauling logs. He went to strike one of the oxen with his long whip and the lash of the whip cut him under the right eye, making a painful wound, but he paid little attention to it at the time. His face began to swell, however, and lockjaw set in, which resulted in his death after twelve days of intense suffering. During this time he took no nourishment of any kind. He was 22 years old and a powerful man physically, and it took five or six men to hold him in bed when he had convulsions.

Burned at Stake.

Sulphur Springs, Tex.—Tom Williams, a mulatto negro, about 6 o'clock Friday morning made an attempt to assault a young white girl in a pasture near this town. Three hours later he was a blazing mass in the public square at Sulphur Springs. The whole proceedings were orderly, as such proceedings ever are. There was no excitement, and the lynching was participated in by several hundred people. In less than four hours after the assault the tragedy had ended and the town had returned to its accustomed vocations and the incident was over.

New Lodge Organized.

Albertville, Ala.—The Albertville Camp, Woodmen of the World, was organized here Friday with a large membership. The following officers were elected: Consul commander, Rev. S. J. M. Russell; trustees, W. N. Caldwell, Ernest Beavers and H. S. Stephens. District Department Organizer L. D. Holloway organized the lodge, and it starts off with promise of great success.

Farmers' Annual Jubilee.

Blountsville, Ala.—The town was filled with people Friday. It was the "Farmers' Annual Jubilee," and the tillers of the soil of this and other counties were here in vast numbers. O. W. Underwood delivered a strong address, covering a number of vital points on southern agriculture, laying great stress on Blount county's future prospects as a fruit-growing section. The address was full of wisdom and practical detail. Following Mr. Underwood, M. A. Crosby, representing the agricultural department, Washington, D. C., made a most interesting and practical address on diversification in farming, for which he made a

GENERAL STATE NEWS.

Current News Garnered as It Falls From the Plant of Report.

Will Have Motor Cars.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—Superintendent F. W. Monnish, of the Tuscaloosa Belt Railroad, has gone on a business trip to Chicago and Omaha. In the very near future the belt line will establish a motor car system, which is said to be the best and the most up-to-date means of locomotion in existence. The cars are built after the style of an electric car, with the exception of the front end, which is of a V-shape, this being of special advantage in making time. The doors open and close by compressed air, and are also heated in the same manner, while the lights both for the headlight and the interior of the car are furnished direct from the gasoline engine. The cars will seat fifty people and make splendid time. These cars are now in operation in Omaha of the Union Pacific Railroad, also at Portland, and are giving splendid satisfaction. When this line is established Tuscaloosa will be the second city east of the Mississippi river to establish this system.

Charged With Forgery.

Scottsboro, Ala.—Thurman Mitchell, a neat looking young white man, was brought down from Bridgeport by the sheriff of the county and lodged in jail here Thursday night on the serious charge of forgery. It seems that Mitchell, who is said to belong to a good family of South Pittsburg, Tenn., and who had just married, went to the bank at Bridgeport and presented a check purporting to have been issued by a Mr. Baumgartner, of South Pittsburg. The cashier of the bank became suspicious at Mitchell's actions and telephoned Mr. Baumgartner, who at once announced it a forgery and requested the bank officials to hold Mitchell, which they did, and in a preliminary trial the justice remanded him to jail without bail to await the action of the grand jury.

Troy Notes.

Troy, Ala.—Sim J. Seals, who has been for three years in the quartermaster's department at San Francisco, has been transferred to Fort Oglethorpe, which is Old Chickamauga. Mr. Seals was reared here and has many friends in this section, who are always pleased to have news from him. He married a Chattanooga girl.

Andrew Hughes was brought before Commissioner Tutwiler Friday morning by Deputy Marshal J. F. Greene, charged with illicit distilling near Harper, in Houston county. Deputy Collector Russell and Deputy Marshal Greene raided his distillery several weeks ago, but he was not at home at the time. He was bound over.

Arrested on Two Charges.

Huntsville, Ala.—On a charge of burglary and grand larceny Wilburn Strong, a well-known young man of New Market, has been arrested and lodged in jail. The jewelry store at New Market was burglarized a few nights ago, and several of the stolen watches were sold in Huntsville. The police traced all of the watches back to Strong, and the young man was placed under arrest. The arrest of Strong came as a surprise. He is related to some of the best people in Madison county.

Gadsden's Narrow Escape.

Gadsden, Ala.—Gadsden narrowly escaped a most disastrous fire at 2:15 o'clock Thursday morning, when flames were discovered by Officers Roper and O'Bannon pouring out of the second story of the building owned by Thomas G. Ewing and occupied on the first floor by Dr. R. F. Thornton and W. I. Fullington. The fire was caused by defective electric light wiring and caught in the office of Dr. Thornton, the wall being in a blaze and the flames pouring out ofl the windows when discovered. The alarm was sounded and the fire engine and reel wagon were on the scene in a few moments.

Killed by Lightning.

Brewton, Ala.—Charles Lewis, a negro employe of the Walden turpentine farm, near town, was killed by lightning Wednesday during a thunder storm. His dead body was found on Thursday under a tree, where it is supposed he took refuge from the rain.

County Bar Organized.

Gadsden, Ala.—The members of the Gadsden bar met at the court house Wednesday for the purpose of organizing the Etowah County Bar Association, and there were present nearly every lawyer in the city, called together by a paper which was circulated several weeks ago for this purpose. The officers elected are as follows: R. A. D. Dunlap, president; W. T. Murphree, J. E. Blackwood and H. T. Davis, vice-presidents; A. R. Brindley, secretary and treasurer.

Railroad Changes.

Anniston, Ala.—Richard H. Cobbs, Jr., who now holds the position as chief clerk to W. E. Knox, superintendent of the Alabama Mineral division of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company in this city, will on the 15th of the present month leave for Birmingham to take the position of chief clerk to Assistant Superintendent Smith, of the Louisville and Nashville at Birmingham.

Ambrose Cobb Shot.

Pratt City, Ala.—Gus Scherfort, a white man, charged with shooting and seriously wounding Ambrose Cobb, an aged farmer living west of town, about 10 o'clock Thursday night, was brought here Friday morning by Deputy Sheriff Sates and turned over to the city warden. He was later taken to the county jail at Birmingham. It is said that Mr. Cobb was shot accidentally by Scherfort, who was engaged in a quarrel with his (Scherfort's) father at the time Cobb came up and tried to make peace between the men.

Nothing definite is known of the affair in Pratt City. Both parties are farmers living between this city and Warner.

Made His Escape.

Tuscumbia, Ala.—The negro tramp who made an attempt on the life of Quarantine Officer Ed Little, of this city, near the Alabama-Mississippi state line Thursday morning, shooting the officer in the hand with a 44-calibre Colts' revolver, successfully eluded the posse of officers and citizens who left Tuscumbia soon after the occurrence to give chase and if possible effect the negro's capture. The Decatur dogs struck the trail where the negro alighted from the train near Cherokee, which was followed for two hours, but finally lost in the woods along the Tennessee river, north of Cherokee.

Escaped Serious Accident.

Brewton, Ala.—What might have been a very serious accident occurred on the Cedar Creek Railroad Thursday. Capt. T. R. Miller and wife and a number of guests were returning in their private car from a trip up the road. Their car was immediately behind the engine, and four carloads of logs were behind it. In coming down a long hill a few miles from town the log cars ran over the private car, turning it sideways on the track and crushing it badly. All of the occupants escaped serious injury, only a few of them getting bruised up a little.

Governor Returned to Blount.

Montgomery, Ala.—Gov. William D. Jelks left Friday afternoon for Blount Springs, where he is spending the summer with his family. He came to his office on the announcement of a case of yellow fever here and has remained as long as there seemed any danger of its spreading. Before leaving the governor paroled Jim Frost, a young boy, convicted in Bibb county last year of forgery in the second degree. The application for clemency was signed by the trial judge and solicitor and recommended by the board of pardons.

Opinion of Fever Expert.

Montgomery, Ala.—"I do not believe that the yellow fever in New Orleans will be stamped out until after frost."

This was the statement made by Dr. John Guiteras, the yellow fever expert, formerly connected with the United States marine hospital service, but now stationed at Havana, Cuba, when he was in this city Friday.

Dr. Guiteras is recognized the world over as a yellow fever expert, and during the yellow fever at New Orleans the last time he did much toward stamping the disease out. He came here from Tampa, Fla., and left for Mobile, where he intends to stay several days, and then goes to New Orleans.

Mr. Spurrier Honored.

Ensley, Ala.—Harry Spurrier, who for sixteen years has been in the employ of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company as foreman of the construction department at this place, was presented with a handsome and costly solid silver set of 106 pieces Saturday afternoon by his fellow employes.

Mayor N. W. Scott, president of the Carnegie Library Association, will call the executive committee together for the purpose of discussing plans for the early erection of the library building.

Negro Killed Resisting Arrest.

Brewton, Ala.—News has reached here of the killing of a negro by G. K. Fountain at the Williams-McLaughlin Company's turpentine comps near Local, in the western part of the county, a few days ago. Mr. Fountain was attempting to arrest a negro by the name of James Reese, who was indebted to the firm and who was trying to escape from the camp, when Columbus Donnelly, another negro, fired upon him with a 44-caliber revolver. Mr. Fountain, seeeing his only chance was to shoot, fired two shots at Donnelly, one of them taking effect in the neck and throat, the wound producing death some hours later. The evidence at the preliminary trial showed that the shooting was done in self-defense, and Mr. Fountain was discharged from custody.

Resignation of Sam Moore.

Tuscumbia, Ala.—Sam Moore, timekeeper and chief clerk in the office of Trainmaster Lasseter, of the Memphis division of the Southern Railway in this city, a position he has held for a number of years, has resigned as such and accepted a position as train dispatcher on the Northern Alabama Railroad at Sheffield. Stenographer Morrison, in the trainmaster's office, will probably succeed Moore.

YELLOW FEVER NEWS.

The Latest Reports From the Infected District.

New Orleans.—Following is the official report up to 6 p. m. Monday: New cases, 55. Total cases to date, 1,008. Deaths, 12. Total deaths to date, 166. New foci, 18. Total foci, 18. Cases under treatment, 256.

The foregoing figures for the day are surprisingly small, considering that nineteen of the cases reported Monday really belonged to Sunday's list, having come in after the closing of Sunday's report. Monday has usually been a heavy day for new cases on account of hold-overs from Sunday, and if the number of new cases for the next few days continues small, then it can be said that the situation is really improving. Of the new foci four are up town and four below Canal street.

Surgeon White's forces went to work Monday on the reorganized plan, all the fumigating and screening being done from the district headquarters instead of the central headquarters as heretofore.

Assistant Surgeons Mullans and Green reported for duty Monday. Surgeon Sporling, of the navy, arrived here Monday to look after the interests of the navy men who are at the naval stations.

Situation Is Encouraging.

Surgeon Guiteras returned Monday night from Patterson, where he has been in charge of the fumigation and screening and organizing the community to fight the infection. He reports the situation there as encouraging, and the people thoroughly alive to the necessity of the work mapped out by him.

Assistant Surgeon Berry is on the road to recovery.

Bulk From Below Canal Street.

Partly as a result of left over cases from Sunday and partly from the fact that the inspectors were able to put in a full day's work there was again a large number of new cases of yellow fever reported Monday, the bulk, as before, coming from below Canal street. That section is now very generally infected, though there are some areas of it which have thus far entirely escaped.

Slow progress is made by the disease in what is known as the American portion of the city and with few exceptions the cases there are isolated.

The marine hospital service will take general supervision of the work of removing filth and trash from streets and houses, the intention being to put the city generally in a sanitary condition. While it is contended that yellow fever is not, as was formerly supposed, a filth disease, experience here is that people who live in filth and in insanitary surroundings are much more likely to have a fatal termination of the disease when they contract it than are those who live in the midst of a better environment.

The campaign of prosecution of those who have not paid obedience to the anti-mosquito ordinance is to be participated in by the federal authorities, the city board of health, the police and the various ward committees. Sweeping orders have been issued by Inspector Whitaker to the police to prosecute all landlords and agents who fail to screen their cisterns.

The heavy increase in the number of cases which began four or five days ago is beginning to manifest itself in the death list, which can be expected to grow steadily for the next few days. The number of new cases Sunday seems small in comparison with Saturday's record, but it is really nineteen short, as that number of cases were turned in by an inspector just after the hour for closing the report.

Among the cases today is Louis Cucullu, Jr., cashier of the People's bank, who resides far out on North Johnson street. Another case is Maurice Kenny, ex-councilman and ex-member of the legislature. Two of Kenny's daughters were stricken Saturday. Only five of the new foci are above Canal street.

Surgeon White on Sunday made a change in his organization, by which he hopes to accomplish results much quicker. The fumigation and screening work was all done by a central department under Dr. Gessner, which sent squads out on notification of cases by physicians. Sunday afternoon Dr. White assembled all of his subordinates in conference and decided to place the screening and fumigation work under the several district headquarters. Dr. Gessner will be given charge of one of the districts.

Corput Investigates.

Assistant Surgeon Corput has just concluded a thorough investigation of conditions in Algiers, that part of New Orleans on the west bank of the Mississippi river. There had been two cases in Algiers since the outbreak of fever and Dr. White determined to ascertain by a house to house canvass if there had been any spread from them. Dr. Corput reported Sunday that he had found not a single suspicious case, which indicates that the prompt steps taken to screen and fumigate the original cases have been effective in preventing a spread.

Dr. White says that if he could learn of every case in the city and apply the proper methods immediately he is confident that he could stamp out the disease here in a short time. The great cause for the spread has been the concealment of cases and the change of residence of people who have been infected. Dozens of cases are on record which show conclusively that the people had moved away from a house where infection had existed. This Dr. White proposes to stop, and while no drastic measures are being taken, he is enforcing his authority. The effectiveness of the district headquarters, which are making close investigations of the seventeen districts, is responsible for a large number of the new cases which have been reported during the last few days, and as the efficiency of that force increases, an increase in the number of cases daily can be expected. Physicians who have failed to report cases that are discovered are given an opportunity to correct their omission, but a second offense will result in prosecution under the law. This has also brought out a large number of cases that were under cover.

First Death at Patterson.

Patterson, which is the largest center of infection outside of the city, reported three new cases Sunday and the first death. The victim is a young lady. She died Sunday morning and this has naturally depressed the spirits of the people. They have had thirty-nine cases there so far. They have opened an emergency hospital which now has seven patients.

At Bon Ami, in Calcasieu parish, there is now only one case of yellow fever, with no new cases and no suspicious cases.

At the detention camp near Tallulah, in Madison parish, there are two cases, one of which is in a serious condition.

State Health Officer Sanders, of Alabama, and Quarantine Officer Moore, of Mobile, are making an inspection of the Mississippi coast towns for the purpose of determining whether it would be wise to lift the Alabama embargo against the Mississippi coast. They reached Gulfport Sunday night without having struck any suspicious illness at any point visited up to that time.

Assistant Surgeon H. G. Egbert reported to Dr. White Sunday and Assistant Surgeons Mullans and Green are expected.

Assistant Surgeon Berry has passed the crisis in his attack of fever and is now on the mend.

While the Italians are gradually becoming pacified and amenable to reason, they are still inclined to run away, and to conceal illness which develops in their families. They are not admitted to most of the localities in Louisiana, no matter how many health certificates they have. Some of the parish boards of health have formally excluded them. The following notice received at the state board of health office is a sample:

Convent Bars Italians.

Convent, La., St. James Parish—By resolution of our board we have concluded to exclude all Italians and Syrians from entering into St. James parish, with or without health certificates or detention camp certificates, and baggage properly fumigated and stamped."

In the city as soon as an Italian family appears in a neighborhood the people notify the police, who in turn notify the marine hospital service and an inspector is immediately sent to make inquiries and arrange to have them watched.

While the mortality rate in the early stages of the visitation indicated that the type of yellow fever was particularly malignant, it is now apparent that it is not much worse than the fever in 1897. The death rate according to the official record, which shows 963 cases and 154 deaths, is just 16 per cent.

During the last two weeks in July the death rate appeared to be 25 or 30 per cent. The falling off is due to two things. One is that naerly all the cases are being reported now and the other is that many of the Italians are being given proper care and treatment. Yellow fever requires careful nursing and very little medicine and absolute abstention from solid food for a week or more. A large proportion of the deaths are due to patients who have practically recovered indulging in solid food before the stomach is prepared for it. One case occurred Sunday. An Italian had been discharged from the emergency hospital as cured and warned to abstain from solid food for several days. He went off, but yielded to his hunger and was found dead a few hours after in a garret.

Sue for Damages.

Gadsden, Ala.—Three damage suits aggregating $90,000 were filed in the city court of Gadsden Thursday by Mrs. Etta Cash, Mrs. Mary A. Watts and Mrs. Sallie Maddox, seeking to recover from the owners of the Curtis-Attalla Lumber Company the sum of $30,000 each for the deaths of their husbands, which were caused by an explosion of a boiler at the saw mill of the Curtis-Attalla Lumber Company.

Bessemer, Ala.—In a difficulty Saturday afternoon between John Andrews and George Ellerson at Parson's livery stable, on Fourth avenue, Andrews was seriously cut and the other badly hurt by being struck with a piece of iron. Both are negroes. They quarreled over a debt that Ellerson is said to owe Andrews. It seems that Ellerson had been garnisheed, and he refused to pay the debt while the garnishment was pending.

The Treatment of Love in Modern Books

By President G. Stanley Hall, of Clark University.

I HAVE slowly come to the conclusion that the publishing business is vastly overdone, and has become a menace to the mental and moral health of a large section of the reading community. Mere bookishness is a bad sign in itself, but it is worse yet in the child. During the last five years I have been trying to keep tab on the most popular books issued from the American press, and have personally looked over scores of them. Almost all deal with nuptial love, and under the treatment of these literateurs it has become a strange and abnormal thing, essentially unnatural even when it is not immoral.

Psychology is now coming to understand something about the normal sentiments connected with the attraction of the senses, and the more it knows the more monstrous does the romantic life of our days appear. One of the best signs of the times is that men and even women are coming to regard it as a little thing and have one standard by which to judge literature and another to act by.

Juvenile literature has also had an enormous recent development, and has certain abnormalities. "Water Babies," "Alice in Wonderland," neither represent the true child nor appeal to real interest, but both are like confectionery and are not mental food.

What I plead for today is inspection and even censorship, even in the juvenile department of our public libraries. The staple of reading for adolescence should be the roots of science, literature, and history, these three, and now it is possible to select in epitome nearly all that is classic in literature, important in history or essential and new in scence served up in good pedagogic form for the child.

Reading for entertainment is a very distinct thing from reading for real interest, and there is only one standard that ought always to be supreme for the reading of the young, and that is moral improvement. Ethical choices should be performed by it, and no child should satisfy the requirements of the school law until his mind has been at least exposed to the great story books that underlie the literature of the great races. By story telling and by judicious selections of reading this can be done. The craze for modernity and the interest in the latest novel as such is itself a sign of mental degeneracy.

The Finding of Paul Jones' Body

By General Horace Porter.

THE various developments in the identification of Paul Jones's body formed a succession of extremely gratifying surprises. I was positive from the location that the body must be Paul Jones's, but I was not prepared for the remarkable accuracy with which our discoveries comported with the historical records of his sickness and death.

Most wonderful of all was the autopsy performed by Surgeon-General Dr. Capitan with the assistance of other anthropologists. It disclosed a fibrous tissue where the left lung had been affected confirming our knowledge that Jones suffered from bronchial pneumonia. The viscera were in perfect preservation and there were shown all the symptoms of dropsy, a disease that we know he had, and most strikingly of all, the symptoms of nephritis, the disease from which he died. That these symptoms should be so marked, or indeed marked at all in a body from which life had passed 113 years before, was nothing short of amazing.

I was also amazed when on opening the casket and removing the linen winding sheet, which, by the way, was in excellent preservation, to observe how closely the countenance comported with the bust of Houdin which the anthropologists had to guide them. The face was a bit shrunken over the cheekbones, but in no spot did the measurements of the body differ from those of the mask by over two millimeters. The resemblance was perfect, even to the disfigured lobe of the left ear. The teeth were as we know them to have been in the Admiral's latter days, and the hair was brown tinged with gray.

A remembrance of Paul Jones's career as a dandy was given in the fancy shirt with its ruffles and pleats. It bore the mark "J." There was tinfoil around his hands and face, and around the body hay, evidently placed there to prevent the body from being disturbed in its casket on the voyage to this country which the embalmers probably expected it would take.

There were five caskets, all of them of lead, in the place we found the body. Four of them had name plates. This one had none. It was a mummy shaped casket, round over the place for the head, and displayed fine ornamental work.

The Search For Men.

By Herbert Jackson Hapgood.

THREE types of ability are in constant demand for the more important positions in the business world—the ability to organize, direct, and manage; the ability to create new markets, either by advertising or personal arguments; and the ability to supervise detail work and devise labor and time saving devices. For these abilities employers are willing to pay salaries that formerly would have been considered fabulous. It is the possession or lack of one or all of these types which divides men into three great classes. At one extreme are the extraordinary, capable executives, salesmen, and detail men; at the other extreme men who possess none of these qualifications, but are fitted to do manual labor or automatically perform routine clerical duties. Between them comes a large class—the mediocre man, too proud to work with his hands, and with only a limited amount of executive, selling, or detailing ability. The question of salary becomes a secondary consideration when employers see the man that they want. "We do not care how much we pay," said the president of a million-dollar manufacturing company, "provided we can get a man who can manage our sales department as it should be managed and show the right results." The one great ever-crying demand is for results; expensive machinery is purchased and installed, only to be thrown aside for something better. Old methods pass quicker than the years, and along with the old methods the old men. The business of a firm expands at an alarming rate, and the older men are forced into retirement nowadays at an age when formerly they would have been considered in their prime. The day when a man could stand on his past record is gone. Results alone count. When a man cannot produce, the business world quickly demands some one in his place. Today is the day of the young man. The pendulum of business demand has swung from one extreme to the other. The young man of thirty now holds the position formerly held only by a man in his sixties. The energy, push, and determination of the young man are given great preponderance over the conservatism and experience of the older man. A few years more will undoubtedly place a man's maximum earning ability five to ten years farther along in life than is considered today.—Harper's Magazine.

He Can Who Thinks He Can

By Orison Swett Marden.

WHAT would you think of a young man, ambitious to become a lawyer, who should surround himself with a medical atmosphere and spend his time reading medical books? Do you think he would ever become a great lawyer by following such a course? No, he must put himself into a law atmosphere, where he can absorb it and be steeped in it until he is attuned to the legal note. He must be grafted into the legal tree so that he can feel its sap circulating through him.

How long would it take a young man to become successful who puts himself into an atmosphere of failure and remains in it until he is soaked to saturation with the idea? How long would it take a man who depreciates himself, talks of failure, thinks of failure, walks like a failure, and dresses like a failure—who is always complaining of the insurmountable difficulties in his way, and whose every step is on the road to failure—how long would it take him to arrive at the success goal? Would anyone believe in him or expect him to win?

The majority of failures began to deteriorate by doubting or depreciating themselves, or by losing confidence in their own ability. The moment you harbor doubt and begin to lose faith in yourself, you capitulate to the enemy. Every time you acknowledge weakness, inefficiency, or lack of ability, you weaken your self-confidence, and that is to undermine the very foundation of all achievement.

So long as you carry around a failure atmosphere, and radiate doubt and discouragement, you will be a failure. Turn about face, cut out all the current of failure thoughts, of discouraged thoughts. Boldly face your goal with a stout heart and a determined endeavor, and you will find that things will change for you; but you must see a new world before you can live in it. It is to what you see, to what you believe, to what you struggle incessantly to attain, that you will approximate.—Success.

The Seven Stars, in Manchester, was a licensed public house in the year of Poictiers (1356), two-thirds of a century before the cathedral was founded, and it boasts to-day a staircase clock which began to tick ever so long before Dr. Johnson was born—nearly two centuries ago.

Seth Nation, father of James, the Assistant State Auditor of Kansas, has no fear for the number thirteen. He was born on April 13, enlisted in the war on August 13, was nominated treasurer of Neosho County on September 13, and was inaugurated on October 13, and has had thirteen children.

A writer in the National Geographical Magazine describes a peculiar kind of fishing in the South Sea Islands. The fruit of a tropical tree, the Barringtonia speciosa, is crushed and tied in a bag. Soon after it has been lowered into deep water the fish begin to appear on the surface apparently dead, being drugged by the fruit. The natives then catch them in their hands.

SUGGESTION FOR A PLOT.

A Writer Wonders Why a "Thriller" Hasn't Been Built Around Ambergris.

The death at Provincetown of one of the luckiest finders of ambergris suggests the query why this rare and remarkable substance has not been assigned a more prominent place in literature. One of the most important properties for the "thriller" is some article which combines great value with small bulk, and can therefore be easily abstracted or hidden in a sealed drawer. Usually it is a jewel, sometimes an amulet or ring of rare ancient workmanship, frequently a will or an envelope of valuable papers. But why not try a lump of ambergris? It is rare enough, certainly, since in fifty years only about a ton has ever been found, and, unlike gold or diamonds, the visible supply is constantly being used up in the arts. A whaler that brings in twenty pounds of ambergris from a cruise is accounted rarely fortunate, and of one which in sixteen years took 190 pounds it was remarked that the cost of the vessel was paid three times over from this item alone. Another of its possibilities lies in its deceptiveness. It is the veritable "fool's gold" of the sea. The lumps of ambergris picked up by strollers on the beach and enthusiastically described in the local papers usually turn out to be common tallow. There is no romance in gold mining by the cyanide process; even the operations in the diamond fields, for all their great "finds," have come down to the mere devising of elaborate systems to protect the companies from being swindled. But in the hunt for ambergris there might still be found the spirit of real treasure trove.—New York Post.

Laboring under the mistaken impression that the whiteness of wheat bread determines its quality—that the whiter the bread the better—the Parisian public has for years been growing more and more exacting on this score, and therefore the fineness of grain flour has been gradually approaching a limit. Doctoring in Many Lands.

Finding New Remedies Among Savage Tribes.

Experiences of a Medical Missionary--Treating a Turkish Woman--Work in a Plague Stricken City--New Treatment for Neuralgia--Hawaiian Cure.

DR. LYMAN B. BROWN, now retired as one of the wealthy men of Boston, has practiced and studied medicine in twelve parts of the world, and adapted from native practices of the tribes with which he has been thrown scores of new ideas as to the treatment of the sick and the injured.

His home in the Back Bay district, just off Commonwealth avenue, says the Chicago Tribune, is a museum of strange medicines and stranger surgical instruments that he has collected during his long life among the queer peoples of the world, among the savage, the semi-civilized and the Bostonese.

"I was first sent into Turkey as a medical missionary," said Dr. Brown. "That was in 1866, at the beginning of the missionary attempt to Christianize the Ottoman empire. I practiced medicine there under difficulties, contending with superstitions, customs and habits that were enough to discourage any young man. Civilized medicine and surgery were too new fangled for those people. I remember well my first obstetric case. The mother was not doing well, and I was working hard to save her life, when suddenly I learned that my methods were not at all ethical. The mother insisted on calling in a local physician for consultation. His methods were unique. First he started a fire under a brazier, and when it was red hot he dropped a clove into it and the clove burst open. That, I learned, indicated that the 'hazar,' or evil eye, had been averted and the mother got well. I continued my treatment, however. The native physician, having discovered that the danger was passed, proceeded to discover a cure. He cut a wisp of hair from the head of the infant and a lock from the head of the mother and burned them together in the brazier. The woman got well—and we both claimed the credit.

"His treatment may have been the best, but I kept contending with those Turkish doctors for several years, and I never could convince them that killing a calf in a public place would not cure measles. They were hopeless.

"I labored among the Turks until late in 1871, then I was moved over to help cure and convert the people of Kerbela, in the Irak country. I did well there. They had little medicine except herbs and incantations, but the general health was good until December in 1873, when I began the experience of my life. In that year the bubonic plague broke out in Kerbela and the surrounding country, brought there, I suppose, by pilgrims who had been down in Persia. The treatment accorded the plague sufferers was brutal—and effective, for all who were treated by the local medicine men died sooner than they otherwise would have done. They treated them by burning brimstone and applying the hot mass to their backs. I tried scientific treatment according to our best methods, but despite my efforts and those of the native doctors 20,000 died in five months. Toward the end I contracted the disease, but managed to cure myself, having fortified my system for weeks with medicines.

"I was sent into Africa after that, and my first experience was with the doctors in the Sudan, among the Arabs. They worked in the Galenic theory, and I must confess with some good results, although their system beats homeopathy all hollow. Old Galen would have rejoiced to see them. They worked on the theory of opposites—their medicines being hot, cold, wet and dry. They give water for fevers and heat for colds—and they get some good results. They are the best practitioners I have found outside of civilization.

"It was fine practice down in the Sudan, despite the fact that they wanted to execute me as a witch when I cured headaches by administering a cathartic.

"My next experience was in practicing on the Apingi—down in Central Africa, where the church had established a mission station. They are a strange people, and cannibalism is rapidly disappearing. Fine fellows they are, and I performed some great amputations among them. I also discovered down there a leaf juice that is better than cocaine for deadening pain and apparently has less perilous effects. The Apingi pull their two upper incisor teeth, working them loose with their fingers, and they sharpen all the rest of their teeth to needle points.

"The effect on a stranger who knows their cannibalistic tendency is immense. I witnessed some interesting surgical and medical treatments while among them. For instance, I saw a woman who was suffering from leprosy and lumbago. I treated the lumbago with some success, but was displaced by a native physician. His treatment was heroic. He first tied the patient down on the ground and then marked off a large checkerboard on her back with a knife. Then he poured on cayenne pepper and lime juice in copious quantities and gave her a massage rubbing in the combined juices. She seemed glad when I applied cocoa oils—but she died.

"There was a sub-chief who was sick with neuralgia—intercostal neuralgia, suprinduced by being kicked over an acre or two by an acquaintance. I was doing the best I could, but he called in a rival doctor, who dug up the bones of his ancestors, burned them into chalk and then marked on his body with them. After that the doctor lighted a bunch of grass in the fire and proceeded to scorch his body, spitting upon his patient duirng the process. The treatment did not appear to be doing any good, so the doctor claimed witches were persecuting the patient, and he accused three men in the tribe of employing the witches. They all denied it. To find out whether or not it was so each of the accused had to drink poison. They gulped down bowls of poison, they sweated and trembled in agony, but finally recovered and proved their innocence.

"I will admit that I gave each of the three ipecac to help prove their innocence. The witch doctor then took the poison and I withheld the ipecac—but he got well anyhow, having taken poison before.

"I was sent up into Ovampoland, among the Hereros, and encountered scurvy. Every man in the tribe was suffering from it. I secured lemon juice and held up a Portuguese steamer for a peck of potatoes, and cured them all. It was a strange form of scurvy, for the tribe will eat no salt at all, and I was forced to squeeze the juice from potatoes and mix it with salt to get them to take any, for I argued that the disease resulted party from lack of salt in the systems.

"The following year we moved up into Nyasaland, among another of the Bantu tribes, and had more trouble in practicing medicine than a faith curist would have at an allopathic convention. They believe there that death results from three causes—from the will of God, from warfare or murder and from witchcraft. All persons who die a natural death are supposed to be victims of witches. I had most of the practice there, for while they were hunting witches I was giving pills, and I saved them and made reputations for a lot of rivals.

"Then I got worn out at the missionary service and started on my own investigations. I practiced first among the Veddas, in Ceylon, for a year. They are the strangest people I ever met. They are, in the first place, the thinnest and most emaciated race in the world. The anti-fat specialist who would advocate their methods would grow rich. I tried to fatten a few of them and succeeded, but they did not appreciate it, for in the eyes of their friends they were hideous. These people never wash and never laugh—so they never grow fat.

"From there I went into Burma and hung up my shingle among the Chins, one of the finest people I ever met. They are akin to the Chinese. Cholera came among them while I was there, but this time I did better. The native method of treating cholera is to go into the bushes with guns and hunt evil spirits. The lessons I learned in the Irak country proved valuable. I succeeded in stopping human sacrifices. The people of Banzam, where I practiced, claimed that some one had been cutting the sacred groves, and they hunted for those criminals all the time, letting me do all the practicing.

"After that I determined to get into a colder climate, and for one winter I practiced among the Koriaks, up near the base of the Kamchatkan peninsula. My methods were too mild for them. The way a native physician treats a sick man there is to catch him by the heels and drag him around the house. Then if he does not get up and go to work and pretend he is cured, he is killed. I saved a couple of patients by massaging stiff muscles.

"That practice was too strenuous for me, and the next year found me studying new systems of medicine up in the Australian bush. Here I came in conflict with the 'blackfellow' doctor, who is quite as effective as the ordinary American quack. These doctors fly up in the air at night and come down trees, and they throw Bristol diamonds at patients during the darkness. They have, according to their patients, a bone in their stomachs, and splinters of it are caused to enter their patients and cure the disease. They see old man kangaroos in their dreams and they carry 'plongges,' or big clubs, with which they touch enemies and cause them to die. No man among them ever dies a natural death—but all are killed by witchcraft, and the main treatment of patients consists in leaving them alone and hunting the witches—which is the best part of their system. They did not take kindly to my treatments.

"For two years I fought galloping consumption among the Maoris in New Zealand—but it was useless. One can't cure consumption, and it would take a century to educate the natives into preventive measures—and by that time they will be all dead. The women wear furs, heavy cloaks, flannels, rugs and wraps while making calls and then come home and dress in a thin cotton skirt. They seek pleasure at the dampest spot they can find, and the edge of a swamp is their favorite building site. The men wear overcoats in summer and leave them off in winter and they all live tgother.

"They are dying like sheep, but they refuse to change their customs, so there is no use for physicians—what they need is grave diggers.

"Finally I wound up my career as a physician among the Hawaiians and combated the priests trying to practice medicine while they hunted witches and evil spirits. I was not ethical and got little trade."

BAD reports of the condition of cotton in the county are coming in, some claiming that the boll weevil is among us. This, however, is not well sustained, but that something is destroying the bolls in certain places is unfortunately too true. The Brownlow-Latimer bill to provide national aid to highway improvement sounds the key note to increased national prosperity and permanent advancement all along the line of social and moral well-being in the American home. It is a stride of the broadest statesmanship, because the proposition affects the whole body of the people. A systems of highways constructed as they would be under government supervision would accomplish more for the people of all classes than anything that can be named, in fact emphasised in the strong support given to the proposition by some of the ablest men in public life today. It is no longer a question that needs to be argued. Every thinking man knows that there must be a change in our highway conditions. It is universally admitted that good roads are absolutely necessary for the prosperity and happiness of the people. It is just as widely conceded, because a thousand times proven over and over, that we cannot have good roads by local effort under local systems. And it is futhermore an acknowledged fact that the solution of the road problem lies wholly in a great national movement. There are some real well-meaning men of ability not yet in line in its favor, but that number is diminishing as public sentiment in its favor is increasing. A few people yet look upon the road question as one which affects mainly, if not wholly, the people of the rural districts. No greater error could gain footing. Bad roads hinder and depress local trade by making it almost impossible for the farmers to get to town sometimes for weeks at a stretch. This depression in turn affects general trade and transportation, and everybody gets a share of the evil consequence. The good roads question is not one susceptible of local or class distinction. It is National with a big N, affecting the progress of the Nation and the wellfare of all the people. Of course, the farmers are to be benefitted, and what class of our people need it more, or deserve it more? But everybody will be benefitted, because every act that promotes the general wellfare of the country districts, increases the buying power of those districts and stimulates the commerce that makes the existence of cities and towns a possibility. We hope every one of our readers will write to one of our Senators and ask for Senate Document 204, Fifty-Eighth Congress, 2d session, and study up on this question. It is big with interest to all.

The Lady Managers Have Set An Example Worthy of Imitation by Men.

In view of the terrible corruption that is being unearthed in every direction among men who are entrusted with the handling of other peoples' money the report of the lady managers of the St. Louis exposition comes as a pure and refreshing breeze from an atmosphere polluted almost to suffocation by the dishonesties of men in high official positions.

The lady managers of the St. Louis Exposition were given $100.000 of the government money to expend, and they have done the unheard of thing, among men, of returning $26,667.56. There were no restrictions placed upon them. They could do with the money just as they chose, and in returning one-quarter of the amount with books all straight, bills all paid and proper vouchers for all bills, they have set an example in the expenditure of Government money which should cause people to think and silence those who are loudly denouncing the right of women to participate in governmental affairs on the ground that we are lacking in business ability.

If the return of money not needed shows a lack of business ability in the management of our government and more of the un-business methods of women. We need more heart sympathies and less head scheming in the business affairs of this country.

Miss Josie Mae Marlar is visiting relatives in Montgomery this week.

A very interesting game of ball was played here Saturday between the Blue Darters and Jones Switch, score 4 to 6 in favor of Jones Switch.

Protracted meeting begins at the Baptist church here Sunday.

The F. N. C. will meet at the home of Mrs. W. W. Carter Friday evening next.

OLD ROSE.

Vida.

The farmers in this section are having a bad time saving fodder on account of so much rain. The cotton is not much of a crop here, too much rain at the start, then not enough.

We are sorry to see Mr. Wade Richardson on the sick list.

Mrs. Tom Hester is also on the sick list; we hope they will soon be up again.

Mr. John Jones and wife visited Mr. Wade Smith's family, Sunday.

Messrs. A. M. and J. C. Gentry are attending court at Marion.

Mr. Harvey Honeycutt of Centreville is filling the sawyer's place at the Cruise & Splawn mill on account of Mr. Richardson being sick.

Miss Mamie Johnson of Jemison is visiting her aunt, Mrs. B. M. Gentry.

Rev. Williams of the M. E. church will be here on the first Sunday in September to run a protracted meeting; we hope much good may be done.

SUBSCRIBER.

Public is Aroused.

The public is aroused to a knowledge of the curative merits of that great medicinal tonic, Electric Bitters, for sick stomach, liver and kidneys. Mary H. Walters, of 546 St. Clair Ave., Columbus, Ohio, writes: "For several months, I was given up to die. I had fever and ague, my nerves were wrecked; I could not sleep, and my stomach was so weak, from useless doctors' drugs, that I could not eat. Soon after beginning to take Electric Bitters, I obtained relief, and in a short time I was entirely cured." Guranteed at Upchurch Drug co. price 50c.

Clanton, Aug. 16, 1905

Editor Banner: Please allow me space in the dear old Banner to say a few words about our ball game that we, the Blue Darters, played the 12th inst. against the Vine Hill boys at Billingsley. The game was one of the most interesting that we have played this season. The score stood 1 and 1 until the 7th inning, but by errors, changed 6 to 4 in favor of the Vine Hill boys. On the last half of the 9th inning we had two men on bases, one on 2d, and one on 3d, and our best batter was at the bat, when a decission was given by the umpire in favor of the Blue Darters and the Vine Hill boys refused to finish the game, and it was given to the Blue Darters. The greatest feature of the game was that Vine Hill's best batter struck out, which was his first time in five years.

I only say to the Clanton boys that we are still waiting for them to call at our grounds for the next game. I will close with best wishes to the Banner.

Pleasant Grove.

The singing school at this place conducted by Prof Jas. Franklin closed Thursday evening last with an interesting program of songs, quartets, duets and solos, which were very much enjoyed by all present.

Rev. Thomas has returned home after spending some little time at Auburn.

Miss Lizzie Lowery returned to her home after spending several weeks with her many friends at this place.

Mr. Archie Cleckler paid Jemison a flying visit Sunday evening.

GRANDMA.

A Touching Story

is the saving from death of the baby girl of Geo. A. Eyler, Cumberland, Md. He writes: "at the age of 11 months, our little girl was in declining health, with serious Throat Trouble, and two physicians gave her up. We were almost in despair, when we resolved to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds The first bottle gave relief; after taking four bottles she was cured, and is now in perfect health." Never fails to relieve and cure a cough or cold. At Upchurch Drug co.; 50c and $1.00 guaranteed. Trial bottle free.

District 32.

Dear Editor—Let me say a few words in regard to the piece written by "A Friend," but a friend to what, to the forms and fashions of this old unfriendly world, hypocricy and wine, or a friend to the spotless Lamb of God? Surely not, if they can stand up and say school teachers are far better able to teach school now than they were when they first sit down to say their A B C's. How did they know what his or her teacher could do? As the case might be they must have some close relatives that are school teachers or they are themselves or think they will be in the future. The way some express themselves people never had an education until now. How did doctors, lawyers, governors and presidents know what they knew 100 years ago? As I have not said anything about the Professor, good nor bad, I don't wish to, but writer, has the Professor ever went out in the hedges and highways and aided or helped any poor orphan child in any way in going to school? If so he has done that much good to the upbuilding of education, but if he has helped to cause schools to be taught in a way to deprive children from getting a chance to go to school he has done harm.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, D. C., Aug 14, 1905

The strenuous President of these United States is a lil piling up things for his extra session of the 59th congress to do. On the advice of Attorney General Moody he will add to his recommendations to the extra session the subject of the revision of the criminal law of the United States. This, undoubtedly comes from the fact there seems to be nothing in the criminal law as it now stands to catch and punish this fellow Holmes for leaking the cotton figures to the cot on gamblers in New York from the Agricultural Department. A law to cover such transactions as that may well be passed, but what is the use revising the criminal law when there is a whole lot of criminal law on the statutes to say that is not being enforced by this holier-than thou Republican administration. If it were enforced there would be no use for the railroad legislation that he is so strenuously asking for, because there is not a single case of railroad discrimination, or rebate that could not be checked if the law now on the books were honestly and vigerously enforced, and that is about the only thing that the people of the country are complaining of. No man, who knows what he is talking about, believes that the freight rates are too high. They are kicking because some fellow like the Standard Oil Trust or the Beef Trust is getting cheaper rates than they are, thus putting the little fellow out of business. Place everybody on the same plane and garantee to every shipper the same rates and there will be no need of placing the rates of the railroads in the hands of a partisan commission that knows no more about making rates than I do of navigathing a ship. What's the use revising criminal laws that are not going to be enforced after they are revised? That's the way the Republican party always is pulling the wool over the eyes of the people. Its leaders clamor loudly for reforms and for laws to enforce them and then with a great flourish of trumpets they pass these laws which are to remain dead letters on the statutes as have the Sherman anti-trust law and the Elkins railroad law.

The President's demand for all these things that shall be accomplished by the extra session is simply rot. It is a grandstand play to the people. He knows that the extra session can not accomplish anything and that he won't get what he asks for from the regular session, but it looks well in print to ask for them and then pose as the great champion of the people. His program for the extra session already includes legislation covering Federal control of railroad rates and of the insurance business and the Panama Canal. Possibly also tariff revision, if he has the courage to go against the wishes of the "stand-patter." Already they are trying to dissuade him. Speaker Cannon is preparing to descend on Oyster Bay. Senator Cullon and others are circulating arguments through the newspapers. They have driven the President to cover before. Why should they now depair of success?

Chas. A. Edwards.

Take Kodol After Eating.

After a hearty meal a dose of Kodol Dyspepia Cure will prevent an attack of Indigestion. Kodol is a thorough digestant and a guranteed cure for Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Gas on the Stomach, Weak Heart, Sour Risings, Bad Breath and all Stomach troubles. L. A. Soper of Little Rock, Ky., says: "Kodol Dyspepsia Cure deserves all the commendation that can be given it, as it saved the life of our little girl when she was three years old. She is now six and we have kept it for her constantly, but, of course, she only takes it now when anything disagrees with her. We feel grateful for the benefit derived from its use and would not be without it." Sold by Upchurch Drug co.

The Doctor In the Duel.

A medical man in France was asked to be present at a duel in his professional capacity. He got up early, traveled some miles, "flamed" the swords and ministered to his client, who was slightly wounded. When both honor and wound were healed he looked for his fees and sent in a bill for $10. The patient replied through his wife, who wrote: "I am told that between men there is a question of delicacy which forbids even the slightest appearance of trade in such a matter. Neither the doctors nor the seconds are brought on the ground for money. If you persist in your claim I shall, to my great regret, be obliged to leave to others the duty of settling this fine point with you."

A Warning to Mothers

Too much care cannot be used with small children during the hot weather of the summer months to guard against bowel troubles. As a rule it is only necessary to give the child a dose of castor oil to correct any disorder of the bowels. Do not use any substitute, but give the old fashioned castor oil and see that it is fresh, as rancid oil nauseates and has a tendency to gripe. If this does not check the bowels give Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and then a dose of castor oil, and the disease may be checked in its incipiency and all danger avoided. The castor oil and this remedy should be procured at once and kept ready for instant use as soon as the first indication of any bowel trouble appears. This is the most successful treatment known and may be relied upon with implicit confidence even in cases of cholera infantum. For sale by Upchurch Drug co., Clanton, A. Horn, Thorsby.

RIFT IN WAR CLOUDS

Discussion of Terms, But Consideration of Main Points Postponed.

MAY YIELD SAKHALIEN ISLAND.

Sessions Are Friendly, but Secrecy Makes News a Matter of Deduction.

Portsmouth, N. H.—There is a rift in the clouds. The prospects of a successful issue of the "Washington conference" have brightened somewhat as a result of Saturday's developments. The discussion of the terms submitted by Japan has actually begun, but this has been accomplished by postponing the consideration of the two main issues, indemnity and the cession of Sakhalin.

As far as ascertainable the Japanese were responsible for the tactics by which this hopeful stage was entered upon. As the mantle of secrecy has been thrown around the proceedings by mutual pledges not to divulge what happened within the council chamber, there are missing links in the chain of evidence, and it is impossible to judge whether this signified a back down on either side on the main points.

On the face of things, both sides are still uncompromising as ever upon two issues, the struggle over them being merely postponed. Some sort of private understanding arrived at by Baron Komura and Mr. Witte during the recess at the navy yard Saturday is hinted, but there is not the slightest confirmation obtainable.

No evidence of a change in the uncompromising attitude on the part of Baron Komura or Mr. Witte on the main points is observable. Nevertheless, the Japanese who are attached to the Nippon mission plainly manifest elation and some of them privately assert that Mr. Witte would never have consented to the discussion of the terms had he not been prepared to yield on the question of Sakhalin.

All this appears yet to be largely surmises or deduction, but certainly the curtain of mystery which has now been rung down must conceal important maneuvering from the public gaze. The Russian reply with its non possimus as to indemnity and Sakhalin was presented Saturday morning. Yet in spite of this at 3 o'clock in the afternoon the plenipotentiaries met, and after agreeing to discuss the conditions seriatim entered upon the condition of the first Japanese terms.

The proposition to discuss conditions in this way is believed to have emanated from the Japanese side. The first condition was of secondary importance—one of those which Russia had passed upon as conditionally acceptable as a basis of discussion—yet little progress was made.

Four hours were spent in debating it, but no conclusion was reached. As there are twelve conditions, and this one is of minor importance, the outlook is still gloomy.

Both of Saturday's sessions are described as "friendly," but no details were divulged. Mr. Witte, however, made no concealment of the fact that the rigid secrecy which the Japanese insisted upon imposing upon the proceedings is distasteful to him. With much earnestness he spoke Saturday night to the Associated Press upon the subject. At the time he was laboring under considerable excitement because of the published assertion, which had been called to his attention, that he had pleaded for an armistice. For the dignity of Russia and the pride of his country he asked that an absolute denial should be given to the report.

Recurring to the question of secrecy of the proceedings, he said he did not understand the Japanese desire to conceal what was taking place, nor could he appreciate the logic of the argument adduced in support of their position.

"We desire," said he, "that everything pertaining to the conference should be done in the daylight. Russia is ready to be judged by the whole world. We have nothing to conceal and nothing to fear. Before the conference began all sorts of reports and misstatements emanated from the other side. Now that the world needs enlightenment, now that the moment has come to face the supreme tribunal of public opinion, we are not permitted to place before the world the evidence in our possession from which a just verdict could be returned as to the issue between the belligerents. The Russian envoys stand ready to publish the text of the Japanese conditions, the full reply of Russia, presented Saturday morning, the diplomatic notes that have been exchanged and the minutes of the sittings. The issue now being tried at Portsmouth is not only a question of peace or war, but one which might produce a general conflagration, involving the shedding of blood in many countries."

CHINESE BOYCOTT NOW ON.

Ex-Senator McLaurin Thinks Commercial Bodies Should Act.

Washington, D. C.—The state department has abandoned all hope of bringing about through governmental agencies a satisfactory conclusion to the Chinese boycott of American goods. Former Senator McLaurin, of South Carolina, saw Assistant Secretary Loomis and bears from him a letter virtually announcing that the government has done everything in its power to arrange matters, but without success.

The assistant secretary suggests that one or two Americans be appointed to go to China and personally lay the matter before the Chinese business men.

"The government has done all it can in that matter," said Mr. McLaurin, "and the the president has also done everything in his power. We cannot make Chinese buy goods. It is up to the commercial bodies of the United States to appeal directly to the commercial bodies of China. Really about the only course left seems the modification of the laws regarding Chinese-immigration. The present situation is not at all surprising. Mr. Wu, when minister to the United States, told me that just such a condition would exist within a few years, and upon the strength of his statement I made a speech in the Senate against the Chinese exclusion law."

Mr. McLaurin has been mentioned as a member of the commission to visit China and look into the situation.

RAINS RUIN CROPS.

Farmers in Wilcox Disconsolate Over Condition of Products.

Camden, Ala.—The incessant rains are doing great damage to crops of all kinds. The cotton crop has shed to a ruinous degree. The bottom crop on the lowlands is beginning to rot; there will be no middle crop, and if the wet weather continues the top crop will be counted as lost. With some farmers the corn will be very good. The forage crop will be short.

The Farmers' Cotton Seed Oil Company has erected a ginnery near the mill site and is putting in a system of Pratt elevators with a ginning capacity of four eighty-saw gins. This company also established a bottling works plant.

Many new residences are in course of erection, and the business part of the town has already a new appearance, with many improvements to be added. A new spirit has taken possession of this people, and there seems no end to the building, repairing and beautifying that is going on at present. The many vacant lots, relics of the two devastating fires of 1868-9, are being filled with new business houses. Some of the old-time buildings have been torn away, and new brick structures are going up in their places. The block south of the court house square will present almost a solid brick front.

There is another enterprise, known as the Camden Bottling Works, established on Claiborne street. This makes two such additions for the town. The bakery will begin business Monday. Other small enterprises are in sight.

Atlanta, Ga.—A special to the Constitution from Danville, N. Y., says that President Lyman Hall, of the Georgia School of Technology, who has for several weeks been ill at a sanitarium at that place, is dying, and his physicians have no hope for his recovery.

Chapelle's Successor.

Wichita, Kas.—Catholics here believe that Right Rev. Bishop Theopile Mereschaert, of the Oklahoma and Indian Territory diocese, will be appointed successor to the late Archbishop Chapelle, of New Orleans. The selection is made by the bishop and priests of the archdiocese of New Orleans, which includes Louisiana, Texas, Tennessee, Oklahoma and the Indian Territory.

Bishop Mereschaert, who makes his home in Guthrie, O. T., is at present in Rome on his quadrennial visit to the pontiff. He is a Belgian by birth, and his familiarity with the French language is considered an indication that he is in line for the archbishopric of New Orleans.

Cure for Leprosy.

Manila.—American surgeons connected with the board of health of Manila declare that they have discovered a positive cure for leprosy. Of twenty-five cases treated all have improved, six cases being absolutely cured. Several patients, portions of whose bodies were gone, have recovered. All of the cases have been under observation for at least six months, and it is absolutely impossible to discover a trace of the germs of the disease in the blood of the patients. The method used is a system of X-rays. The surgeons do not desire their names to be mentioned at present. They will ask for the rewards which have been offered by various governments for a cure for leprosy.

Killed by Live Wire.

Tuscumbia, Ala.—Jim Waltrip, colored, employed as a section laborer on the Southern Railway, was killed by a live electric wire in this city Saturday morning. He was working under the approach of Spring Creek bridge, under which the trolley and electric light wires of the Sheffield Company run, and accidentally came in contact with a heavily charged wire and was a corpse in two seconds.

THE PULPIT.

A SCHOLARLY SUNDAY SERMON BY THE REV. J. D. BURRELL.

Subject: The Friend of God.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Sunday morning the Rev. Joseph Dunn Burrell, pastor of the Classon Avenue Presbyterian Church, preached an interesting sermon on the subject, "The Friend of God." The text was from James ii:23: "He was called the Friend of God." Mr. Burrell said:

The figure of Abraham is one of the most majestic spared to us by the past. He stands before us in singular dignity, serenity and power, and his supreme quality was that he was the friend of God.

The phrase is peculiar. It is not said that God was his friend, but that he was God's friend. There is a difference. We accept the friendship of God as a matter of course, like the air we breathe. But the thought that man may be a friend to God scarcely comes to us at all.

There is something deeply touching about that thought. For we usually look upon God as sufficient unto Himself. Yet in this other respect we see Him longing for friends. That desire is common among men, for there are many lonesome, misunderstood, hungry for a friendly word of appreciation. Now think of God also as misunderstood, grieved by neglect, yearning to be loved. Then think of Abraham as giving God his heart. You see how much it meant to God that Abraham was his friend.

One is led to be the friend of another by liking him. The reason why we like him may be inexplicable to ourselves, for there is no accounting for tastes. All fruits are the gifts of God to men, yet some we enjoy and others we reject. All people are children of God, and we can love every one of them in a disinterested and fraternal way. But this does not interfere with our liking some better than others. Even our Saviour felt this human tendency and was drawn by it to a special intimacy with the apostle John.

I suppose there never was a person about whom people differed more than Charles Lamb. Some could not endure his perpetual raillery, his bad puns, his stammer. Others knew him to be one of the rarest spirits, subtle in intellect, exquisite in taste and grandly unselfish.

Now that liking which makes friendship between man and man makes it between man and God. We can picture Abraham at the close of the day, when the tents had been pitched and the evening meal eaten, going apart from the camp for a little space that he might open his soul to God. We can imagine David at night time while the city slept, mounting to the roof of the palace and beneath the canopy of stars communing with the Most High. We can see Christ escaping from the crowds that thronged His steps and eagerly hiding for a brief time in the seclusion of some mountain top that He might be alone with His Father. It was because all three of these liked God.

It is a question worth asking whether we like God. I do not say reverence and honor, I do not say submit to and obey. Do we like God? It is a peculiar question. Perhaps asking it makes us wonder whether our appreciation of God does not lack something of the warm throb of life.

Friendship also involves similarity of tastes. In fact, most of our friendships come about through our being brought together in the pursuit of some common interest, by an ocean voyage, a golf club, a board of directors, a Sunday-school class, for example. People whose chief interests differ are not likely to become friends; Emerson and Boss Tweed, for example.

There is no better field for studying the laws of friendship than a college. Young men or women who have known each other pleasantly enter in the same class, go together for a time, then gradually, without any ill feeling whatever draw apart in order to form other combinations. This shifting is generally due to the dominating power of some common interest—French, boating, editing a paper together, membership in the same fraternity and the like.

The same principle holds true in the friendship between man and God. It is brought about by similarity of tastes and interests. Supreme in God is the sense of order, whose moral side is righteousness. How can He have any friendship with a man who lacks this sense of order? Who does not mind being a glutton or a drunkard or impure, or telling a lie or taking what is not his? As Paul says, "what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness?" And another characteristic of God is His spirit of charity. But suppose a man is indifferent, hard and selfish, prone to cherish grudges and to do unkindnesses, how is friendship possible between him and God? "He that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?"

It is important, then, for us to ask if we like what God likes, if we value highly, as He does, the soul, the spiritual life, a character of purity and goodness. These are the foundations of friendship between heaven and earth.

Again, part of friendship is loyalty. But loyalty how far? Through bad report as well as through good report? Assuredly. The friendship that will not endure strain is of little worth.

Twenty years ago a young man was swept away by the excitement of gambling in Wall Street, and misused the funds of the bank of which he was president. The deficit of millions was made good. But, of course, the disgrace was there. Yet to-day he has standing in a certain small social circle. His friends, you see, realized that the man was not really vicious at heart and stood by him to help him make a new life. How many a man, who in fact has done no wrong, but who has had some idle gossip raised about him, has found himself deserted in a minute by those he counted upon as his friends. There is no social tragedy more pitiful than this, and also none more discreditable to human nature.

To be a friend to God means to be loyal to Him through storm as well as through sunshine, in the day not only of prosperity, but also in that of adversity, when the skeptic says, "If God is good and is your friend, how can He permit this trouble to fall upon you?" Then when suspicion is raised about God, many who have called themselves His friends fall away from Him. The true friend is he who stands by God when strange and cruel things happen that cannot be explained, who maintains confidence in the divine goodness when others deny it, who defends God's name when others impugn it, who says with Job, "though He slay me, yet will I trust Him." God will never forget stanchness like that.

Generosity is one of the lovely traits of true friendship. It comes out in feeling, in conduct and in special tokens in the form of gifts.

The ancients illustrated this in the story of Damon and Pythias. Pythias was condemned to death, but begged leave to go home and arrange his affairs. His friend Damon took his place in prison. In the end in the nick of time, Pythias returned and surrendered himself. Because of the spectacle of such a friendship he was pardoned. But the interest of the story centres in Damon lying in prison while the days of Pythias' absence lengthen and the time of execution draws near. For not only was Damon content to endure imprisonment for his friend, but far beyond that he was prepared to die in his place.

The story is no doubt a fairy tale, but is gives us a true lesson, and has had influence upon the civilized conception of friendship. And as applied to our relationship to God it is suggestive. If our friendship to Him is genuine it will bear the mark of generosity. There have been not a few friends of God ready to die, if need be, for Him.

And yet there are many who render to God what they like rather than what He likes. Sometimes presents are given among us on the same irrational basis. You have seen a poor young couple receive from some rich acquaintance an absurd wedding present of a costly piece of bric-a-brac which would be utterly out of place in their modest parlor, and would divert an amount of money which would have been a great help in practical form. The donor consulted his desire rather than theirs.

So is it often with men's gifts to God; they give Him what they like rather than what He likes. In Jeremiah's age they offered sacrifices of bullocks and goats. In Christ's day they performed elaborate religious ceremonies and wore phylacteries and fringes. In medieval times they did penance and paid money. To-day they erect costly churches and endow colleges. But if we would please God we must consult His wishes in our gifts and not our own. And what does God like best? A pure heart, a humble and contrite spirit, days free from evil, practical thoughts of kindness for others, homes of real devotion, sacrifices of money from genuine love of His work, words of honest testimony for Him in public and private. These are the things God likes, and thou who love Him even offer them to Him.

In the fourteenth century, when the moral and spiritual state of Christendom was dark, a group of noble souls banded themselves together to strive after holiness. Their headquarters were at Strassburg and Cologne. Their greatest member was John Tauler, the celebrated preacher, whose printed sermons made a deep impression on Luther. The influence of those men was performed and abides to this day. But the thing to notice especially about them was their name: they called themselves "The Friends of God."

Is there not a place for such people in the life of to-day? Men are apt to become so absorbed in the concerns of this life as to neglect God altogether, and when they do think of Him it is often with the desire chiefly to get something from Him. How sordid and unworthy this all is. We ought to have our relationship on a higher level. Is it not possible for us to appreciate His grandeur and goodness for their own excellence? Can we not like Him for what He is? As He looks down upon a considerably indifferent world, can we not give Him the happiness of letting Him see that we are His friends? And when trouble bewilders us let us still believe in Him; when His good name is assailed, let us defend Him; when He wants some one to do His work, let us say, "Here am I, send me."

We are familiar enough with the idea that God is our friend. But the question is who are willing to be friends of God?

Ponder This Fact.

"Take your Bible, and carefully count, not only the chapters or the verses, but the letters from the beginning of Genesis to the 'Amen' of the Revelation; and when you have accomplished the task, go over it again and again—ten times, twenty, forty times—nay, you must read the very letters of your Bible eighty times over before you have reached the requisite sum. It would take something like the letters of eighty Bibles to represent the men, women and children of that old and wondrous empire. Fourteen hundred of them have sunk into Christian graves during this last hour; thirty-three thousand will pass to-day forever beyond your reach.

"Despatch your missionary to-morrow, and one million and a quarter of immortal souls, for whom Christ died, will have passed away to their final account before he can reach their shores. Whether such facts touch us or not, I think they ought to move our hearts. It is enough to make an angel weep."—Rev. Silvester Whitehead.

The Name of Jesus.

The Lord is the hearer of prayer. There should be waiting on Him, not only in the assembly of His people, not only with the attitude of reverent regard, in the forms of religion, but as the Psalmist puts it: "Truly my soul waiteth upon God." For salvation, for protection, He is to be sought; and whatever the trouble of our lives, we thus get stability.

What can we ask? The fulfilment of the exceeding great and precious promises. But what plea can we present, weak and sinful as we are? The name that is above every name—the name of Jesus.—John Hall.

The Way We Do Things.

Rev. F. B. Meyer says: "Knitting needles are cheap and common enough, but on them may be wrought the fairest designs in the richest wools. So the incidents of daily life may be commonplace in the extreme, but on them as the material foundation we may build the unseen but everlasting fabric of a noble and beautiful character. It does not so much matter what we do, but the way in which we do it matters greatly."

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR AUGUST 20.

Subject: Jehoiakim Burns the Word of God, Jer. xxxvi., 21-32—Golden Text, Jer. xxvi., 13—Memory Verses, 22-24—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

I. Jehoiakim's great sin (vs. 21-26). 21. "King sent." So that he might hear the roll read and not be obliged to learn its contents through second-hand reports. "Took it out," etc. The princes had filed the roll among the public records (v. 20) for safe keeping. "Jehudi." An under officer, descendant of a noble house, the one the princes had had sent to Baruch to get him to read the roll to them. "Princes—stood." The king sat on a rug and the princes stood respectfully about.

22. "Winterhouse." Great men had distinct houses or apartments, fitted for the different seasons of the year (Amos 3: 15). "Ninth month." Our December. The cold, rainy season. "Fire on the hearth." Fire in a brasier, a pot made of earthenware, in the form of a pitcher, placed in a hollow in the middle of the room.

23. "Four leaves." "Columns." R. V., margin. The roll was of parchment attached to a roller of wood at one or both ends. Our word volume, "that which is rolled up," points by its derivation to this older form of book. "Cut it." He could not tear parchment so he cut it. "Penknife." Scribe's knife. Used to shape the reed employed for writing, and to make erasures in the parchment. "He" refers to king (v. 22). As often as Jehudi read three or four columns he cut them out and burned them. "All these words" (v. 24) imply that the whole volume was read through. "Till all the roll was consumed" implies a gradual process.

24. "Not afraid." Contrast the humble fear of Josiah at the reading of the law (2 Kings 22: 11). Josiah rent his garments in grief that the book had been lost, his son cuts God's book and burns it. Throwing the fragments of the roll on the fire, he puts there, in symbol, his royal house, his doomed city, the temple and the people of the land. "His servants." His immediate personal attendants who did not share the reverences of the princes (v. 16).

25. "Nevertheless." This aggravates the king's sin. "Elnathan." A man of first rank and father-in-law of the king (2 Kings 24: 8). "Delaiah." Of this prince nothing more is known. "Gemariah." A scribe of the temple, a man of noble blood. From a window in his official chamber Baruch read aloud the prophecies of Jeremiah, and Gemariah's son Michaiah, reported this to him (vs. 10-12). "Made intercession." These princes would have aided the king in following his father's steps. We learn the same from the basket of figs (Jer. 24: 1). It is the more remarkable to find Elnathan thus interceding after the office he had performed in Jer. 26: 22.

26. "King commanded." He was not satisfied with burning the prophecy, but now desired to kill Jeremiah and his faithful scribe. He hoped to put an end to such prophecies. "Lord hid them." They had at the counsel of the princes hidden themselves (v. 19). Now, though a diligent search was made, the Lord did not permit them to be found.

II. Jeremiah restores the word of God (vs. 27-32). 27. "Word—came." That word was not burned, neither was Jeremiah hidden from the eyes of the Lord. 28. "Another roll." The entire book was rewritten, and this second manuscript, so far as can be known now, is the one we have to-day. Disaster is not necessarily defeat. The destruction of this book was a great disaster. No copy existed, and no human memory could produce it. But God re-inspired the prophet, and the second edition was fuller than the first. 29. "Concerning Jehoiakim—say" (R. V). It is doubtful whether Jeremiah and the king again met. Note the contrast between this morally hardened, impious king, boiling with wrath against God and His prophet, and the heroic man of God who does not shrink, but firmly speaks the words of Jehovah even in the face of death. "Saying, Why," etc. This was no doubt an actual message which the king had sent to Jeremiah to frighten him. "King of Babylon." Nebuchadnezzar, who had been once and collected tribute and gone. He should return and destroy the land. Nothing but the repentance of Jehoiakim and his people could prevent it. 30. "None—throne." His son, Jehoiachin, attempted it for three months, but the land was occupied by Nebuchadnezzar's army, and Jerusalem was in a state of siege, and he was taken captive (2 Kings 24: 8-17). No child of Jehoiachin succeeded to the throne. "Body—cast out." A repetition of the prophecy of Jer. 22: 19. Of its fulfilment nothing is known. The phrase, "he slept with his fathers," means that he died (2 Kings 24: 6). He was fettered by Nebuchadnezzar (2 Chron. 36: 6). "Day—night." In the East the thermometer often falls suddenly after sundown (Gen. 31: 40). Plumptre thinks it probable that the king, who was being taken to Babylon in chains with the other captives, died on the journey, and that his body was left behind unburied as the army marched.

31. "I will punish him." He was slain, his kingdom destroyed and his son carried in chains to Babylon. The inhabitants of Jerusalem were not punished for the king's crimes, but for their own sins. "They hearkened not." They might have been saved from the threatened evil if they had repented, threatened evil if they had repented.

32. "Added—many like words." Many more threatenings of wrath and vengeance were added in the second roll which were not in the first, for, since they will yet walk contrary to God, He will heat the furnace seven times hotter.

Dr. Duke, the leading English brain specialist, says the trouble with most brains is that they are not kept busy enough. The brain ought never to rest, except during sleep, and most persons take too much of that. A good, healthy circulation of blood would be maintained in the brain if professional men would relax themselves from their intellectual pursuits, not in golf, but in chess problems and scientific "investigations!"

THE STRANGE HABITS OF AN INSECT.

The Mantis Gongylus Gongyloides Makes Itself Look Like a Flower—An Alluring Resemblance.

Perhaps the most authentic instance of alluring resemblance is that described on the authority of Dr. J. Anderson—the mantis gongylus gongyloides from Southern India—a species which has been known to naturalists for upward of three centuries, but of whose strange habits nothing was discovered until comparatively recent years. Living examples of gongylus have been thus described:

"On looking at the insects from above they do not exhibit any very striking features beyond the leaf-like expansions of the prothorax and the foliaceous appendages of the limbs, both of which, like the upper surface of the insect, are colored green, but on turning to the under surface the aspect is entirely different. The leaf-like expansion of the prothorax, instead of being green, is a clear, pale lavender violet, with a faint pink bloom along the edges of the leaf, so that this portion of the insect has the exact appearance of the corolla of a plant, a floral simulation which is perfected by the presence of a dark, blackish brown dot in the centre, over the prothorax, and which mimics the opening to the tube of a corolla.

"A favorite position of the insect is to hang head downward among a mass of green foliage, and, when it does so, it generally remains almost motionless, but at intervals evinces a swaying movement as of a flower touched by a gentle breeze, and while in this attitude, with its fore limbs banded violet and black, and drawn up in front of the centre of the corolla, the simulation of a papilionaceous flower is complete. The object of the bright coloring of the under surface of the prothoracic expansion is evident, its purpose being to act as a decoy to insects, which, mistaking it for corolla, fly directly into the expectant, sabre-like, raptorial arms of the simulator."

A more perfect combination of protective and alluring resemblance than the above could hardly be conceived. The green coloring of the body and legs of the gongylus harmonizes with the foliage among which it rests, and affords an effective hiding from the sharp eyes of insectivorous birds. The usual shape and brightly colored under side of its prothorax and fore limbs constitute a lure, by means of which the mantis attracts to itself the smaller insects upon which it feeds.—Scientific American.

The Spirit of the Piano.

The fact that the piano is descended from the spinet and the harpsichord is still a stumbling block to amateurs of music; the fact that in tone and resonance it has lately been enormously developed is also a stumbling block to those who write for it. The first class have entirely neglected the harpsichord—a perfect and fully evolved instrument, the spirit of which is altogether different from that of the piano; the second class have been tempted by the dynamics of the piano to treat it too much like an orchestra, and to forget that it is not only a solo instrument but really a chamber instrument.

Its utterance, which Chopin understood so well, is really chamber music; and there is always something lamentable to me in the contemplation of a great artist distressing himself and his instrument in the attempt to fill a large concert-room with exaggerated expressions of a delicate and intimate temperament. The effect is never entirely satisfactory, however great the artist may be; for that note of intimacy which is surely the very essence and spirit of the piano cannot possibly be maintained in the presence of a large and miscellaneous audience.

When we consider among all our impressions of pianoforte music the moments that have given us memorable pleasure, we find that they took place in intimate assemblies where some one played and some one sang, and where the atmosphere thrilled with just that amount of electric disturbance which we call sympathy, which is born with the meeting of friends and dies when they disperse.—Filson Young, in the National Review.

A Graphic Description.

Shortly after the introduction of the electric telegraph into Scotland a West Highlander, who had been to Glasgow and was, consequently, supposed to have got to the bottom of all mysteries, was asked to explain it. "Weel," said he, "it's no easy to explain what you will no be understandin'. But I'll tell ye what it's like. If you could stretch my collie dog frae Oban to Tobermory, an' if you wass to clap its head in Oban, an' it waggit its tail in Tobermory, or if I wass to tread on its tail in Tobermory an' it squaked in Oban—that's what the telegraph is like."

A Great Improvement.

A new voting machine has been invented and is on exhibition at the State House in Trenton. It is absolutely impossible for persons on the outside to tell how the voter votes. In the good old times, before voting machines were invented, it was often impossible for the voters themselves to tell how they voted. Even the official count wouldn't show it.—Newark Evening News.

Lay Up Good Thoughts.

In the course of our reading we should lay up in our minds a store of goodly thoughts in well-selected words, which should be a living treasure of knowledge, always with us, and from which, at various times, and amidst all the sifting of circumstances, we might be sure of drawing some comfort, guidance and sympathy.

What London Eats.

The supply of meat in the Smithfield market during 1904 amounted to the little matter of 410,519 tons, of which the sum of 1,556 tons were condemned. In fact, Dr. Collingridge, the medical officer, made himself unusually busy during the past year. Out of a single consignment of rabbits from Australia he threw out 10,334 as a little spoiled. In another case a box invoiced as rabbits was found to contain immature kids. They were consigned from the Netherlands, and might better have been at school.

As for fish, 243,806 tons of them were delivered at Billingsgate. Of this amount 1,098 tons were condemned. In the matter of milk Dr. Collingridge reports that one in every thirteen samples was either impoverished or adulterated, or both. He blames the foreign free trader for this state of affairs. From 10,000 to 15,000 oysters are sold daily in London during the season. Last year no illness attributed to them was reported.

The Danger Spot in India.

It seems rather strange that at the very time Russia appears utterly exhausted by a disastrous war the British empire should be carefully and systematically strengthening its defenses in India. That it has been always Russia's ambition to reach the open sea through the conquest of India is a fact too well known to be even called into question. That her defeat at the hands of Japan has in any way altered that determination is not at all probable; on the contrary, the failure to secure the coveted ports in far east Asia has probably increased the desire to secure them elsewhere, either on the peninsula of India or in the Persian gulf. An attempt in either direction England would be compelled, in self-defense, to oppose.

Bad Ears Cause Drowning.

In drowning accidents where expert swimmers suddenly lose all control of their powers, the usual explanation of cramps is beginning to be looked upon as insufficient. It has been noticed that persons having disease of the middle ear, who have already shown symptoms of vertigo, are especially liable to such accidents, and as the semi-circular canals are the organs of direction, it is suggested that even a slight hemorrhage in that delicate structure from a blow by the waves would result in utter helplessness. Persons with ears not perfectly sound are therefore warned against swimming in rough water.

A Modern Solomon's Temple.

Prince Luca Esterhazy, who has enormous possessions in Transylvania, is about to erect a church on his estates which will be a model of King Solomon's temple. Count Esterhazy is a mystic, almost a recluse, and has for years been engaged in the study of ancient oriental architecture. He made a special study of the Biblical account of the building of Solomon's temple, and while he does not intend so lavish expenditure on cedar, gold and ivory as marked the venture of the Hebrew king, his church will be an exact copy of the original.

Mr. Anthony Hope has written a book, which is to be published in September. In "A Servant of the Public," as it is entitled, he studies the relations between the "Philistine" and the "artist," showing in the life of a famous actress and her friends how the occupation of the stage and temperament have their necessary effect on the life and action. It is said that the "author endeavors to exhibit all sides and takes none."

Big Sawdust Pile.

At Cheboygan, Mich., is the largest sawdust pile in the world. It is a hill, 1,080 feet long, 875 feet wide, 3,625 feet in circumference, ranges from 20 to 50 feet in height and covers twelve acres. It is the accumulation of one lumber company since 1877.

It is said that more than 4,000 lives, 200 ships and $100,000,000 have been expended at various times in efforts to reach the North pole. On this computation, should the goal ever be achieved, every acre of ground in the Arctic region will have been bought and paid for at better than market rates.

"Tama Jim" Wilson.

"Tama Jim" is the name by which James Wilson, secretary of agriculture, is known in the middle west. It was "Sunset" Cox, famous in congress a generation ago, who gave this sobriquet to the Iowa statesman. Wilson was a new member of congress then, and to distinguish him from another and better known James Wilson in the same body, who hailed from the Buckeye State, Cox called the new man "Tama Jim" Wilson, Tama being the name of the county in which Wilson lived. Wilson is the only cabinet member except Secretary of the Interior Hitchcock who thus far has served continuously through the McKinley and Roosevelt administrations up to the present. Born in Scotland seventy years ago, he has been by turns school master, farmer, legislator, congressman, professor in an agricultural college and fourth secretary of agriculture. In his pedagogic days he was so poor that he had to go barefoot in summer, but he managed to save enough to start the purchase of a farm, which he worked with such intelligence that it brought him a comfortable fortune.

Wonderful Litts Family.

The last of the Litts family, one of the most remarkable in New York, has gone with the passing away of Thomas, who died in Monticello. He died suddenly from the effects of the extreme heat while at work in a field near his home. He was 80 years of age, and for the last half century had been one of the most commanding and prominent figures in Sullivan county because of his size and wonderful strength. He was sergeant in the One Hundred and Forty-third regiment of New York Volunteers, and was the strongest man in the regiment. Every member of the family of ten—five males and five females—was as strong as a giant, and the wonderful feats of strength performed by them won for them almost national fame. Thomas Litts, while attending the old-time logging and haying bees, on different occasions has been known to pick up a barrel of cider and drink from the bunghole. A brother carried a barrel of pork on his back a mile without resting on a wager, the pork being the wager.

Honoring Vermont Heroes.

In view of the honors now being paid to John Paul Jones it may be interesting to note that two other revolutionary worthies are be honored the present week. Vermont is to honor one of her favorite sons, Ethan Allen, the leader of the Grenn Mountain boys and the hero of Ticonderoga, and a daughter, Ann Story. Mrs. Story took the place of her husband, a pioneer who penetrated the then wilderness of Vermont to make a home for his family, and was killed in an accident. Mrs. Story took his place, defied Indians and assisted as a patriot in running down and capturing a horde of Tory spies in revolutionary times. She made her home for a time in a cave, deftly dug out on the bank of Otter creek. The Colonial Dames are to erect a monument to her at Rutland. Allen's memory is to be honored by a memorial tower, at whose dedication are to be present among other notables Vice-President Fairbanks and Ethan Allen Hitchcock, secretary of the interior.

NO SLEEP FOR MOTHER

Baby Covered With Sores and Scales—Could Not Tell What She Looked Like—Marvelous Cure by Cuticura.

"At four months old my baby's face and body were so covered with sores and large scales you could not tell what she looked like. No child ever had a worse case. Her face was being eaten away, and even her finger nails fell off. It itched so she could not sleep, and for many weary nights we could get no rest. At last we got Cuticura Soap and Ointment. The sores began to heal at once, and she could sleep at night, and in one month she had not one sore on her face or body.—Mrs. Mary Sanders, 709 Spring St., Camden, N. J."

Edgar Wallace, of London, set a trap in his room for a mouse. After he had gone to sleep the trap snapped and he awoke to find the room rapidly filling with gas from a burner that he had left half turned on. He turned off the gas and then opened the trap and released the mouse—a life for a life.

Doctor Brigham Says

MANY PHYSICIANS PRESCRIBE

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The wonderful power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over the diseases of womankind is not because it is a stimulant, not because it is a palliative, but simply because it is the most wonderful tonic and reconstructor ever discovered to act directly upon the generative organs, positively curing disease and restoring health and vigor.

Marvelous cures are reported from all parts of the country by women who have been cured, trained nurses who have witnessed cures and physicians who have recognized the virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and are fair enough to give credit where it is due.

If physicians dared to be frank and open, hundreds of them would acknowledge that they constantly prescribe Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in severe cases of female ills, as they know by experience it can be relied upon to effect a cure. The following letter proves it.

Dr. S. C. Brigham, of 4 Brigham Park, Fitchburg, Mass., writes:

"It gives me great pleasure to say that I have found Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound very efficacious, and often prescribe it in my practice for female difficulties.

"My oldest daughter found it very beneficial for uterine trouble some time ago, and my youngest daughter is now taking it for a female weakness, and is surely gaining in health and strength.

"I freely advocate it as a most reliable specific in all diseases to which women are subject, and give it honest endorsement."

Women who are troubled with painful or irregular menstruation, bloating (or flatulence), leucorrhœa, falling, inflammation or ulceration of the uterus, ovarian troubles, that bearing-down feeling, dizziness, faintness, indigestion, nervous prostration or the blues, should take immediate action to ward off the serious consequences, and be restored to perfect health and strength by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and then write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., for further free advice. No living person has had the benefit of a wider experience in treating female ills. She has guided thousands to health. Every suffering woman should ask for and follow her advice if she wants to be strong and well.

Cairo the Gambler's Paradise.

Modern Cairo must be a sort of gambler's paradise, judging from some facts which I recently had from a friend who has been investigating the subject. In one of the principal streets near Mohammed Ali square a gentleman who knows the town well pointed out over twenty first floors over the shops with the names of bars upon them, every one of which he knew to be a gambling hell, and a police official admitted to the investigator that the town was full of such places. The police do not seem to be at fault. They raid the places from time to time, but the offenders, nearly all foreigners and mostly Greeks, are protected by their consuls and let off lightly and return to the business the next day. I should guess that the business is chiefly carried on for foreigners as well as by them. There is a sort of cosmopolitanism about gambling, and its votaries are drawn from all corners of the earth by the scent of the game. But this seems to be one respect in which Egypt has not improved under British influence.—London Truth.

Let's have a plain talk about your Kidneys

Let's have a plain talk about your health—right straight from the shoulder and without any "snatched from the grave" or "modern miracles" about it. We want you to believe in our sincerity and the medicinal value of Uracura in all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys and Bladder. If you have any of these troubles or have a tendency in that direction, we want to say plainly and frankly that Uracura will remove it even to the last trace. Now we don't want to frighten you into thinking you have something you haven't; but we do say earnestly and sincerely it is your duty to yourself to find out now—once for all what your balance is on the credit side of the ledger of good health. Kidney and Bladder troubles do not give violent warnings—they slowly and gradually creep upon you until the first thing you know you are tight in their relentless clutches.

The things we eat and drink and the hurried, worried and nervous lives we lead now-a-days are such that he is indeed lucky whose Liver, Kidneys and Bladder are all perfectly healthy.

DO YOU HAVE BACKACHE

Shortness of Breath, Loss of Appetite, Fever, Sleeplessness, Vertigo, Constipation, Sallow Complexion, Sour Stomach, High Colored Urine, Yellowish Eyeballs, Coated Tongue, Depression, Headache, Nervousness? It's Liver, Kidney or Bladder troubles; but even surer than symptoms

URACURA IS THE TEST AS WELL AS THE CURE

After taking a few doses of Uracura, you will notice, if you have Kidney or Bladder Trouble, that the urine will be of a very dark or reddish color with a strong odor of the medicine. This is not only an unfailing sign of the trouble but also an indication that a cure has commenced. After two or three days you will notice that the urine is clear—you will feel less pain about the Kidneys and your backache will leave. You will be less nervous and in every way will be better and stronger. This is not theory but the result of the testimony of thousands who have been cured—that's the reason WE KNOW it will cure you without question or doubt. Uracura is a purely vegetable compound or concentrated extract prepared from the roots and herbs that science has proved to be absolutely the only sure cure for these diseases, making Uracura a great Nervine Tonic, Blood Alterative, Liver Regulator and Kidney and Bladder cure. It restores strength, renews vitality, purifies the Blood, relieves Biliousness and Constipation and produces a healthy appetite and sound digestion. CLANTON'S FIRST BALE.

The first bale of this season's cot- was brought into town by John of Beat 10 early on Wednes- morning. Wade's ginnery had honor of ginning the first bale, turned out a bale of 532 pounds, ch John proceeded to market, buyers did not seem anxious to a fancy price for the first bale season and finally it was sold Pinckard & Co. for 10¾ cents per d. Last year the first bale brought in on August 26, so year we are three days earlier.

ow soon we get accustomed to ing conditions. A few years and 10¾ cents for the first bale ld have the whole country feel d, and now there seems to be a notion that John would have better in getting 15 or 20 cents the first bale. Anyhow, it is a ly good price, and it is to be ed that none will be sold for . Farmers have had a good on this year in the advantage of dumping all their cotton on the ket as soon as the crop is made. a week has passed this year cotton has not been brought on market, and realizing, on the ole, a fair price. There is ry reason to hope that a good e will be realized for the new p, but it stands to reason if it is wn on the market all at once, n goes the figure accordingly. ides, the man who holds back e of his cotton has money all year, a consummation devoutly e wished for all our people.

Caught Fox In Pond.

Last Wednesday morning while eating breakfast we heard a distant noise, which sounded very much like a strange band, approaching nearer, we recognized the clamoring of twenty or more frisky hounds.

"Fox hunters!" "Fox hunters!" exclaimed papa. All so eager to see the dogs chase the fox, arose from the table about the same time, rushing in the yard, clapping our hands for joy. We all ascended the fence, where we awaited patiently the approach of the dogs.

The dogs made a circle or two in a field near the house and then round the house, when suddenly mama cried out "See! O see! there is the fox." We all looked just in time to see it cross the lane in front of the house climbing the fence, as if it was a dog itself, and crossing the field again. By this time the dogs were within a hundred yards of the fox. The came across the field right on its track, one by one, which I must say, was the most picturesque part of the game. We were all so full of glee we began again clapping our hands and laughing merrily, which to our sorrow, caused the dogs to loose track of the fox. They were so fatigued they barely could run. After chasing through the field a time or two they found the track again. By this time we were in the lane and on looking around, what do you think? There stood sister Emma, unconscious of the fact that she had her plate, still eating. Well, Emma, I don't blame you, I would have gotten my plate too if I had thought about it. In the meanwhile, here came Mr. Mims Deramus galloping down the lane. "Well, Mrs. Ray," he said, "I believe we are going to loose the fox yet." "No, no," exclaimed another, we must have him boys, since we ran him from near Maplesville this far."

Waiting here patiently the dogs gained until at last they chased the fox to the banks of the pond, where it ascended a tree for refuge, but alas, the poor thing saw that death was drawing near, when suddenly up rushed the blustering hounds, where they took their stand and barked until the huntsman came to their aid. On riding up, and seeing the fox clinging to the tree, he blew his horn aloud, which of course we all knew they had captured the fox they ran so faithfully after. It being so close to the house papa and mama chaperoned us to the spot. It was a wonderful sight for us, who had never seen such before. Some one asked now what are we going to do with him? One remarked shoot it. No said another, let's shake it down and give another round. So they shook the tree and down it came in the pond Every dog around the tree went in with the fox. One seized it and they all went under together When they came up the fox was dead, one man waded in and brought it to the bank. Well done, good and faithful servants.

It is not the danger of a foreign foe which concerns the minds of thoughtful citizens of the Republic, asserts the Columbia State. Into that battle every patriotic citizen must throw himself, if he would not see the country a prey to grave political and social perils.

The Shetland pony has assumed the importance of a feature of the largest horse market in the world, states the Road. Never before has there been such a widespread insistent demand for Shetland ponies, and never have transfers among breeders been on so large a scale and sales of single animals and pairs so numerous and at such high prices. The greater demand comes from the families of the well-to-do, who appreciate the pleasure a pony will confer on children and the educational value that a child may derive from the use of such a pet.

The Germans have had considerable doses of the fantastic "yellow peril" mixture fed to them, and for a while it looked as if the stuff was working. It is not so, however, declares the Hartford Courant. The Germans have looked at the course of Japan in this war with their own eyes, and have judged the quality of her work with their own heads. The result is that they are as willing to lend money to Japan as to any other country.

REUBEN WHITE'S ESCAPE

BY DUKE CUYLER.

THE mountain tourists, as they follow along the banks of the winding Saco toward the place of its birth in the Great Notch, have their attention attracted by a huge rock by the roadside that bears the name of the Bartlett Bowlder.

It is not so much the size of the rock as its strange position that attracts the notice of the passer-by. It seems almost as though it was placed there through the agency of human hands, standing, as it does, on the summit of a small knoll, with a number of smaller stones placed under it in such a careful manner as to cleverly balance it.

Could man have had the power to do it, it could not have been done more effectively.

Conected with this stone is a legend of the early settlers, which I will endeavor to relate, it having been handed down from generation to generation among the residents of the mountain region.

Among the first setlers of Conway was a man by the name of Reuben White. His cabin stood on the high bank overlooking the fertile region that lies along the Saco, where he had made quite a clearing and got the most of it into a good state of cultivation. He had been subjected to the usual drawbacks incident to the settlers of that region, but thus far had triumphed over them all.

The wild beasts had given him much trouble, and the savages, when they came sometimes from the wilderness beyond the Notch, threatened him and his with destruction.

One day, early in October, the settler took his wife and started out for a tramp in the forest in search of game.

He turned his face up the valley, and striking the river something like a mile above, he followed it until he nearly reached a point where the bluffs came down on either side almost to the water's edge.

Thus far he had ill luck, for no game of larger size than a rabbit had crossed his path.

It was now past noon, and he began to feel as though a hearty meal would do him good. So he shot the next rabbit that crossed his path, and pulling off its skin, soon hod it ready for cooking.

Close up to the base of the cliff he built a fire, and in a little time the rabbit was roasting above it.

So intent was he with his work that he saw nothing of a couple of savages, who for several minutes past had been watching his operations.

If he had done so, he would have been on his guard and not allowed his rifle to remain where he had left it, leaning against the cliff a good dozen feet away.

Mindful only of the meal he was preparing, he saw not how the savages, keeping well under cover, were each moment drawing nearer and nearer to him.

Stooping over the fire, and just in the act of removing the nicely brown roast therefrom, he was startled by a hand being laid upon his shoulder, while a voice exclaimed in his ear:

"The paleface is a prisoner. If he tries to escape the red man will strike him to the earth."

Startled by the unexpected presence of the savage and the words he uttered, Reuben rose only to see that he was completely at their mercy.

A savage stood beside him with uplifted tomahawk, while another had got possession of his rifle, and stood with it pointed at his breast.

For a moment he was speechless at this sudden danger that threatened him, but at last he found his voice.

"What do you want of me?" he said.

"White man go with Injin," was the answer of the savage, while at the same moment he produced some stout thongs, and, signaling to his companion, he proceeded to bind Reuben's hands behind him in such a manner that he would be powerless to use them.

There was nothing he could do but submit. To resist would be only to lose his life at once.

Seeing their prisoner secure, the savages fell to and devoured the nicely roasted rabbit, without so much as giving him a taste. This done they signified to him that he was to go with them.

He thought of those at home, and of the danger to which they would be exposed, but there was no help for it. He must go with them or die.

He was powerless now to help himself. There was but one way, and that was to bide his time, and if the opportunity occurred, to make his escape.

All that afternoon they kept on up the valley, and, with every step the settler put between himself and his cabin, his heart seemed to sink still lower in his breast.

Night came on at last, and a thick gloom filled the valley. But still the savages kept on.

The way was familiar to them, for it was along the trail their race had used for centuries on their way through the Notch.

The night deepened, and with it came a cry that thrilled them all each time it was repeated.

The hordes of fierce wolves were gathering upon their trail from out the dark ravines on either side.

The Indians and their captive hastened onward, but the cries of the wolves came nearer and nearer, while each moment added to the volume of the cry.

They must seek a place of safety soon or the bloodthirsty brutes would be upon them.

The savages were aware of this, and also that a place of refuge was close at hand.

The rock of which we have spoken towered before them.

Reuben knew it at a glance, for he had seen it several times when on his hunting trips in the forest.

Once upon it he knew that they would be out of the way of the wolves.

But how were they to get there? This question was soon solved.

With the aid of their tomahawks a notched stick was hastily prepared, and, leaning this against the rock one of the savages hastily clambered thereon.

Then Reuben was told to do the same. He made the attempt, but it was soon evident that he could not get up without the aid of his hands.

Convinced of this the savages hastily unbound them, and he scrambled up.

The other savage followed close behind him, and not a moment too soon. The foremost wolf sprang at his legs as he drew them up.

Casting the stick down among them they felt themselves safe.

The wolves snarled about the rock, springing up against its sides only to fall back again in impotent rage.

Reuben threw himself down upon the summit, apparently without hope or thought of escape.

Of course there was no chance then, and the savages seemed to know it. At least they did not again bind his hands, as he had feared they would do.

The minutes went on and below them the wolves snarled and gnashed their teeth in impotent fury.

Suddenly an idea presented itself to Reuben—a thought that seemed to give him a promise of escape.

It might not succeed, but if it failed his situation could hardly be worse.

He watched his opportunity, and summoned all the strength he had for the attempt he was to make. It was his only chance, and a desperate one at that.

Selecting the moment when the gaze of both the savages was turned from him he suddenly sprang upon the nearest and gave him a blow and push. Taken by surprise it was impossible for the savage to resist the impetus given him, and, with a wild cry, he went down over the rock into the midst of the bloodthirsty creatures below.

Quick as thought Reuben turned upon the remaining savage, who stood as though confounded by the fate of his comrade, and gave him a vigorous blow. With a cry that almost drowned the snarling of the wolves he also went down among them to add to their horrid feast.

Thankful for his escape Reuben remained upon the rock till daylight sent the wolves back to their dens, when he descended and reached home in safety.—New York Weekly.

Bontou Deserves Well of France.

"Bontou has deserved well of his country," says a Paris journal. Who is Bontou? He is a canteen cook, and when M. Berteaux, Minister of War, visited a certain barracks, and expressed his astonishment at the excellence and economy of the cookery, he made the acquaintance of Bontou, and invited him to Paris. At the Ministry of War Bontou explained his system of regimental cooking, and suggested that all the hotel keepers in France should be asked to devote a few hours a week to the kitchens of the barracks in their neighborhood. M. Berteaux was enchanted with this idea, all the more because Bontou is President of the Hotel Keepers' Union, and is sure of a cordial response to his proposal. As for the French soldier, he will simply canonize this benefactor, and call him St. Bontou.—London Chronicle.

Elevator Manners.

Step all the way back.

Sing out before you get to your floor, so the boy won't have to reverse his machine for you.

Take off your hat in honor of an ancient lady, for a pretty girl is sure to step in next, and then how chivalrous you will feel.

If you want to be regarded as a man of mind, keep your hat on when all the other men in the lift have theirs off.

Don't block the doorway. Other people want to get out.

Don't gouge, don't push, don't scowl and say mean things. If you object to being shoved up against you ought to take the stairway.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

SERMON ABOUT A BOY AND A PILE OF DIRT.

Perhaps It Will Help Some Man to Make His Son Great, Strong and Brave.

I want to preach a little sermon, and I'll take for my text a great pile of rich earth that had been delivered in the street in front of my house. It had to be carried up a flight of steps, and I told my boy that it was his duty to help me dig and carry the earth.

He puttered away, boy fashion. He sat down on the curb and said his head ached. Then he had a pain in his side. He made three trips for drinking water. There was a wistful look in his eyes as he glanced at a little ball game in a near-by lot.

"Boy mine," I said "I'm disappointed in you. I'm a bit hurt. You are getting to the time of aches. You are getting a peep at manhood. You are close to the age when the callonsed places will smart and you'll feel the load pressing your shoulders. I won't force you. Go with the boys, but I'm ashamed."

He muttered, "I don't care," and started for the ball lot. Then he stopped. No one can say just what was going on in that brown thatched head of his. He darted into the house and in five minutes he was back, shovel in hand, making the dirt fly. He perspired and panted. He did not stop until the last basket of earth had been delivered.

After supper he came to my knee and said: "Papa, I guess you ain't ashamed of your little boy any more, are you?"

Ashamed! There are those who mock at sentiments, at caresses, at human love. I was proud to put my arms around my lad and tell him that it is better for a boy or a man to conquer himself than to wear a crown. Perhaps the blisters on his chubby hands will be worth millions to him some day.

So there you have my sermon, drawn from a pile of earth. Perhaps it will help some other man who has a boy and wants to make a great, strong, brave, true man of him.—Wilkesbarre Leader.

WISE WORDS.

Learning by doing is one way of acquiring knowledge.

When Love links arms with Commonsense nobody believes in him.

No man ever suffered much for his opinions until they got down below his collar.

Many people see their children grow up while they are planning on beginning to train them.

No matter how hurried you may be, no time is ever wasted that is spent in gratitude.

Remember you have not a sinew whose law of strength is not action, you have not a faculty of body, mind, or soul, whose law of improvement is not energy.—Edward B. Hall.

There is no day too poor to bring us an opportunity, and we are never so rich that we can afford to spurn what the day brings. Opportunities for character always bloom along the pathway of our duty, and make it fragrant even when it is thorny.—Samuel J. Barrows.

We never know through what divine mysteries of compensation the Great Father of the universe may be carrying out His sublime plan; and those three words, "God is love," ought to contain to every doubting soul the solution of all things.—Miss Muloch.

Testing Eggs.

A simple method for testing eggs is now being used in Germany. It is based upon the fact that the air chamber in the flat end of the egg increases with age. If the egg is placed in a saturated solution of common salt it will show an increasing inclination to float with the long axis vertical. A scale is attached to the vessel containing the salt solution so that the inclination of the floating egg can be determined almost to a day. A fresh egg lies in a horizontal position at the bottom of the vessel; an egg from three to five days old shows an elevation of the flat end, so that its long axis forms an angle of twenty degrees. With an egg eight days old the angle increases to forty-five degrees; with an egg fourteen days old to sixty degrees, and with one three weeks old to seventy-five degrees, while an egg a month old floats vertically upon the pointed end.

Older the Bet'er.

"Yes," said the old man to his young visitor, "I am proud of my girls, and would like to see them comfortably married, and, as I have made a little money, they will not go penniless to their husbands. There is Mary, twenty-five years old, and a really good girl. I shall give her $1000 when she marries. Then comes Bet, who won't see thirty-five again, and I shall give her $3000. And the man who takes Eliza, who is forty, will have $5000 with her."

The young man reflected a moment and then inquired:

"You haven't one about fifty, have you?"—Judge.

Good Stage Elocution.

It was one of Joseph Jefferson's distinctions that he was not only an advocate, but an example, of good stage elocution. He was, nowever, an exception that proved the rule. The first step toward a better state of affairs is to convince managers and actors that it is desirable. With the memory of many a bad quarter-hour of strained effort to hear what should be apprehended with ease, we respectfully submit this word of suggestion.—Century.

THE PULPIT.

A BRILLIANT SUNDAY SERMON BY THE REV. A. H. C. MORSE.

Subject: Powerful Promises.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Sunday morning, in Strong Place Baptist Church, the pastor, the Rev. A. H. C. Morse, had as his subject, "Powerful Promises." The text was from II Peter 1:4: "Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises; that by these we might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption which is in the world through lust." Mr. Morse said:

At any rate the Bible is frank. It says the plainest things about man's sin. But it also holds before him a wonderful hope. To-day he is mired in corruption. To-morrow he may have escaped from this and become like God. The whole gospel is found in these few words.

We have here a statement of the fact of sin and its origin. The fact is "corruption" and the origin "through lust." I know that there are worldly-wise men who sneer at the third chapter of Genesis. But this I have noticed, that they are uniformly unable to give us a simpler solution of the mystery of evil. Somewhere and at some time the race must have sinned. The stream of life has been poisoned, and this must have taken place at its fountain head, for we cannot find any divisions which do not have the entire characteristics of the whole. The Bible says the event took place in the first man, before a single son was born, and he lusted after something which was forbidden to him, and that by his disobedience he fell from a primal innocency, and lurched the race, and entailed a condition of corruption. And that we have aggravated this calamity by repeating sin and deepening the ruin.

But I am not so much concerned today about the origin of the condition. We can leave that with a single word. But there are certain facts that cannot be brushed aside. A man may question the story as it is written in Scripture, but he cannot deny it, for it does not come within the region of denial. Neither can he deny the story as it is reproduced in life to-day. Have you never plucked forbidden fruit? Have you never lusted for pleasure which has been distinctly forbidden? And as a consequence of transgression, have you never experienced a repulsive sickness and an intolerable loathing, so that you have known what is the meaning of this phrase, "the corruption which is in the world through lust?" Do you not know anything at all of the lashings of remorse?

Let me ask you another question. How does it happen that the heart is so constantly "running down?" Why must it be repeatedly wound up and fastened with ratchets? Why do we have to make and renew resolves, and lash the will to the "sticking place?" Why is it that a man never backslides into holiness? Why cannot we take off the brakes and find ourselves gliding into the highest moral living? Everything, we are told, tends to move in the line of least resistance. Do we find that we are drifting toward charity and holiness and benevolence and virtue? Nay, but to all of us these graces are the fruit of serious toil. They are magnificent possessions, more precious than gold and sparkling gems, but they are gotten only by struggle and privation and self-denial. And that word "self-denial" contains a fossil history of primal sin. It tells us of an evil self that must be constantly denied, because its desires are wrong. But whence this evil self, and whence these wrong desires?

But let us come a little closer to this subject. Let me hint at the things that we cannot spread before the public, our secret thoughts and faults which are hidden. The thoughts that creep into the heart and nestle there. Can you tell me whence they come? Tell me, for instance, whence come the envy and jealousy and malice and evil desire, and the lust for gold that makes the thief, and the thirst for blood which crimsons the hand of murder? Do you not think these things arise in human life as malaria and pestilence from a death-dealing bog? Do they not bespeak what this Scripture calls a "corruption which is in the world through lust?" I suppose that the angels before the throne of God would shirk from having their thoughts proclaimed with the trumpet of Gabriel. I know that Jesus has torn open His heart and flung out a challenge which no man can accept. "Which of you convinceth Me of sin?" said He. But we cannot do that. We hide our thoughts and cover our faults with a crimson blush, and walk among our nearest friends with a coward's step. But what has befallen man? If God made him innocent—and nobody questions this—something must have happened to corrupt his thoughts and make them so black that he stands in dread of the day for which all other days were made, when this hidden history shall be revealed.

There is something pathetic in man's attempts to assert his worth. We speak, for instance, of the "Majesty of conscience" and the "Dignity of human nature," and of the "Fatherhood of God," and the "Brotherhood of man" as if these terms were true and meaningful. Take the first of these and see what comfort there is in it. "The majesty of conscience!" But do you not know that conscience almost always speaks in judgment? It seems to have lost its authority to command if it ever possessed that authority. It cannot insist upon obedience, but can only raise its voice in remonstrance. It can be easily overruled, and voted down, and then it can only record a minority vote, and lapse into silence.

But there is more in this scripture than a statement of the fact of sin. Here are also "these great and precious promises whereby we may become partakers of the divine nature." That is, men may become as God. And the warrant for this promise is found in the fact of correspondence between the divine and the human. The natural man cannot discern spiritual things, and it is no use to talk to him about them, for there is no correspondence, no basis of affinity, no ground of fellowship. But man was made in the image of God, and it was possible for God to take upon Himself man's nature; and it is within the power of every man, by the grace of God, to take on also the divine nature, to be made like God.

That is what is said in the word be-

Cairo Health Officers Busy.

Yellow fever quarantine inspectors were busy Sunday. A man tried to enter Illinois from Birds Point, Mo., on a Kentucky health certificate. He was refused admission. He then purchased a Missouri health certificate at Birds Point and entered Illinois. He was arrested and sent out of the state.

A car load of negroes came from Tennessee bound for the mining town of Zeigler, Ill. The negroes were provided with certificats. The car was locked and placed under guard until it left Cairo.

Surgeon Guiteras, yellow fever expert, came from New Orleans Sunday morning and returned Sunday night. He said he did not expect yellow fever would he entirely stamped out in Louisiana until frost came.

Erecting Emergency Hospital.

Past Assistant Surgeon Corput went to Terre Haute plantation in St. Charles parish and supervised the work of erecting an emergency hospital there. It will be ready for occupancy in a day or two.

Patterson reports six new cases and no deaths.

There were no new cases at Mississippi City.

Regarded as Very Bright.

Though the number of deaths today from yellow fever exceeded those of the past two days, the total was so small in comparison with years when real epidemics prevailed that the situation continues to be regarded as infinitely more bright and hopeful than a month ago when it first became known that yellow fever had taken a firm grip in one of the most thickly populated sections of the city.

At that time also New Orleans was in a distressingly insanitary condition, and all the conditions seemed favorable for an exceptionally high death rate in August, which always heretofore has been one of the most fatal months of the epidemic season.

Steady Improvement in Conditions.

Dr. White went over some portions of the infected districts today. He saw few features of the work that have not already been described. Reports to his headquarters from the emergency hospital indicate a steady improvement there in conditions due to the fact that the work is so perfectly organized now that with many of the patients who are brought in there is chance to save their lives. At the beginning a considerable proportion of those taken to the hospital arrived there in a moribund condition.

Refugees Must Clear Alabama.

Montgomery, Ala.—State Health Officer Sanders on Friday said in answer to many requests that persons from infected yellow fever districts that are in other states and want to come through Alabama going to other states will not be allowed in the state until their seven days are up, no matter if they do not want to stop within the borders of Alabama.

Widespread Infection Formed.

The most important news outside of the city came from LaFourche parish, where the parish health officer, Dr. Stark, reports widespread infection in the Leeville settlement at the mouth of Bayou LaFourche. He says there are probably a hundred cases of sickness there, and he saw about one-third of them. He diagnosed six as yellow fever, and classes the others as either a mild type of yellow fever or dengue. This point is eighty miles south on the Southern Pacific road. The inhabitants of the settlement are mostly fishermen and oystermen, and they have been in close communication with New Orleans. They are mostly Italians and Austrians. The state board has dispatched Dr. J. A. Deveron to assist Dr. Stark in treating the infection.

Dr. A. R. Montjez today took charge of the situation at Terre Haute plantation in St. Charles, and reported two new cases. Dr. Bienvenue has been dispatched to LaPlace, in St. John parish, where twenty-one cases were found Wednesday. Assistant Surgeon Corput will have another tour through this section Friday.

Negotiations Are Satisfactory.

Paris, France.—A semi-official note was issued Friday with the object of allaying the increasing inquietude relative to the indefinite prolongation of the Franco-German negotiations concerning the proposed conference on Moroccan reforms. The note gives assurance that the negotiations are proceeding satisfactorily with the prospect of a final agreement in the near future.

Americans Not Perceptibly Affected.

Yokohama.—The anti-American boycott committee has virtually abandoned the proposed general boycott in accordance with the instruction from Shanghai. These instructions merely give advice not to buy American merchandise, though members may sell to Americans. So far American interests here have not been perceptibly intercepted owing to the strong stand taken by them.

Farmer's Loss By Fire.

Clarksville, Tenn.—Frank Kelly, a well-known farmer of Pembroke neighborhood, sustained a heavy loss by fire. A large hay shed on his farm was burned, together with sixty or seventy tons of hay and a considerable quantity of farming machinery. The origin of the blaze is attributed to spontaneous combustion. The loss aggregates $1,500, with no insurance.

EMPEROR NICHOLAS

Has Yielded to Urgent Demands For a Lower Legislative Body.

A LONG DESIRED CONCESSION.

Representatives to the Popular Assembly Will Be Elected by the People.

St. Petersburg.—Emperor Nicholas on Saturday announced the grant to the people of Russia of a national consultative assembly to be formed by elected representatives from the whole of Russia. The imperial manifesto, which was published simultaneously here and at Moscow, and which will be read in all the churches of the empire, is dated at Peterhof Saturday, and is as follows:

"The empire of Russia is formed and strengthened by the indestructible solidarity of the empire with the people and of the people with the emperor. This concord of emperor and people is the great moral force which has created Russia in the course of centuries by protecting her from all misfortunes and all attacks and has constituted up to the present time a pledge of unity, independence, integrity, material well-being and intellectual development.

"In our manifesto of February 24, 1903, we called to a close understanding all the faithful sons of the fatherland in order to protect the organization of the state by establishing on a firm basis the domestic life of the empire, and then we devoted ourselves to the task of co-ordinating elective public institutions with governmental authorities and of removing the disagreements existing between them, which had reacted so disastrously on the normal course of our national life.

Autocratic Power.

"The autocratic emperors, our ancestors, constantly had that object in view, and the time has come to follow out their good intentions and to summon elected representatives from the whole of Russia to take constant and active part in the elaboration of the laws, thereby attaching to the higher state institutions a special consultative body entrusted with the preliminary elaboration and budget.

"It is for this reason that, while preserving the fundamental law regarding the autocratic power, we have deemed it well to form a gosudarstvennaia douma (lower house of the assembly) and to approve the regulations for elections to this douma, extending the validity of these laws to the whole territory of the empire with such additions only as may be considered necessary in the case of some regions in which special conditions obtain.

"As regards the participation in the labors of the gosudarstvennaia douma of delegates from the grand duchy in Finland on questions concerning the empire in general and the grand duchy in particular we will take special measures.

"At the same time we have ordered the minister of the interior to submit immediately for our approbation regulations for the elections to the douma, so that deputies from fifty governments and from the military province of the Don may be able to assemble not later than the middle of January, 1906.

"Furthermore, we reserve to ourselves the entire care of perfecting the organization of the gosudarstvennaia douma, and when the course of events shall have shown the necessity for changes corresponding completely to the needs of the times and the welfare of the empire, we shall not fail to give at the proper moment the necessary directions.

Calls Assembly.

We are convinced that those who shall be elected by the conference of the whole people and who will thus be called upon to participate in the legislative work of the government, will show themselves in the eyes of all Russia to be worthy of the imperial trust in the virtue of which they have been invested to co-operate in this great work, and that in perfect harmony with other institutions of the government established by us they will contribute profitably and zealously to our labors for the well-being of our common mother, Russia, and for the strengthening of the empire, the security and greatness of which, as well as for the tranquility and prosperity of the people we so much desire.

"Invoking the blessings of the Lord on the labors of the institution established by us, and with unshakable confidence in the grace of God and in the infallibility of the great historical destinies reserved by Divine Providence for our beloved fatherland, we firmly hope that with the help of God Almighty and with the combined efforts of all her sons Russia will emerge triumphantly from the trying ordeals through which she is now passing and will be born again in the strength, the greatness and the glory of her history, extending through a thousands years.

"Given in the eleventh year of my reign. NICHOLAS."

Arrested and Lodged in Jail.

Florence, Ala.—Henry Nayes, colored, is in jail here charged with attempting to force an entrance into the room of two girls. The negro was frightened away by the screams of the girls, who were awakened by his efforts to force open the window. He was recognized and next day brought before Esquire H. D. Smith, who placed him under a bond of $400 to await the action of the grand jury.

Disastrous Floods.

Joplin, Mo.—Four people were drowned and property valued at $200,000 destroyed as the result of a cloudburst Saturday at Southwest City, in the extreme southwestern portion of Missouri. C. O. Kelly, a photographer, was drowned when the two-story house which he occupied was swept away and dashed to pieces against a tree. Ned Smith and two other persons, names unknown, were drowned while trying to rescue Kelly.

For several hours the water was ten feet deep in the streets of Southwest City, and the inhabitants were forced to flee to the highest lands. The St. Louis and San Francisco Rrailway bridge was washed away and the bridge of the same road at Beatty, Ark., was swept from its piers. It is believed that fully 1,00 head of stock were drowned. It is estimated that ten inches of rain fell in nine hours.

Expected Continuance of War.

Tokio.—It is confidently believed here that the peace conference at Portsmouth, N. H., will result in a rupture, but this news is calmly received. The weight of popular belief seems to anticipate and be reconciled to the failure of the peace negotiations at Portsmouth. The Japanese have resolutely supported the demand relative to reimbursement for the expenditures of the war and the cession of Sakhalin island, and evidently prefer a continuance of the struggle to the acceptance of lesser terms. The press and others are urging that Manchurian and Vladivostok campaigns be vigorously pressed, and also the seizure of Russia's possessions on the Pacific coast.

The rains have ceased and fighting in the Manchurian country will soon be possible.

Tokio continues exceedingly quiet and calm. The market is showing some weakness, but the declines are slight.

A Dive Ends Fatally.

Dresden, Tenn.—Van Garesche, 18 years of age, a member of one of the most prominent and wealthy German families of St. Louis, was visiting Mr. Russell Gardner. Near the home is an artificial lake, and the young men had built a high springboard on its banks and were in the habit of running down the hill nearby and jumping off the board into the lake. Saturday morning young Garesche and several other boys went down to jump off of the board the last time before leaving for St. Louis, and as it resulted it was indeed the last jump the young man will ever make. While endeavoring to make an extra turn he lost his balance in the air and fell on his head into the water with such force as to plunge his head to the bottom and break his neck. His head and shoulders were bruised, and his eyes and nose filled with mud. He managed to get himself out of the water, when his horrified companions ran to him. The unfortunate young man hanaged to get on the bank and there sank to the ground. He was conveyed to Mr. Gardner's home, near by, and medical aid summoned. When the physicians arrived and made an examination they found that his neck was broken.

Will Preserve Forests.

Washington, D. C.—The Mississippi Agricultural and Mechanical College, at Agricultural College, Miss., has recently created the position of instructor of forestry and plant breeding in the institution, and Mr. George L. Clothier, of the United States forest service, has been chosen by the college authorities to fill this important position. In addition to giving forestry instruction in the college Mr. Clothier will carry on propagation work in forestry in connections with the farmers' institutes and by means of bulletins issued from the agricultural experiment station. In co-operation with the forest service a special study will be made of various forest problems of direct interest to the state, among which are: Forest management for wood lot owners, forest planting for the reclamation of waste lands, method for preventing erosion through forest planting and preservation, forest survey of the state.

The officials of the forest service say that the authorities of the state have shown themselves fully alive to the need of such work, and under the able direction of Mr. Clothier they may expect that the state of Mississippi will soon formulate a wise and practical forest policy.

Liquor Causes Tragedy.

Waynesboro, Miss.—Wednesday afternoon about 4 o'clock John Applin and his son went to Obe Lowrey's house, about eight miles northwest of Waynesboro, and had a quarrel with Lowrey. Applin attempted to go into the house and Lowrey told him he would kill him if he came on, and as he reached the steps Lowrey fired a shot.

Florence's Teachers.

Florence, Ala.—The election of the teachers for the city schools for the term of 1905-06 has been held by the board of education.

Fowler Makes Bond.

Huntsville, Ala.—R. Frank Fowler, organizer for the Fraternal Order of Eagles, who was arrested Thursday night on a charge of embezzling funds of the order, made bond for $500 and will have a preliminary hearing.

Suicide at Coosada.

Coosada, Ala.—There was some excitement in this little community on Friday morning when it was learned that an old man named John Mullett had committed suicide. He lived alone in a little house near the depot, and was last seen alive Thursday afternoon. Some time during Thursday night he placed a pistol in his mouth and fired. The ball passed through and came out at the back of his head.

Situation in Corea.

Seoul.—It is rumored that the Russians in the northern port of Corea are withdrawing. The local food supply has been affected by the rains and is meagre for the population, the sea route being in the hands of the Japanese and the bridges over the Tumen river broken. It is not expected that there will be a battle south of Tumen. The Japanese army is confident and the weather is improving.

Bread Strike About Ended.

New York.—Three hundred extra policemen on duty for the past ten days guarding the district affected by the strike of east side kosher bread bakers were recalled to their station houses Friday. Ninety master bakers of Jewish kosher bread have signed the agreement presented to them by the strikers.

Boy Seriously Cut.

Birmingham, Ala.—B. Myers, a young white boy about 15 years of age, was seriously and probably fatally cut Friday morning by another young white boy, who it is understood is employed by the Alabama Fish Company.

Syrian Is Dead.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—The unknown Syrian who was found in an old cotton house two miles south of the station of Moundsville in an unconscious condition Tuesday is dead. State Health Officer Sanders and several other physicians went to Moundsville, as the case was reported suspicious. Blood of the deceased was sent to Birmingham, and it was found to contain malarial germs.

Negro Taken from Mob.

Paris, Tex.—Andrew Dimvidder, a negro, was arrested here Friday for attempting to assault Miss Daisy Collins, aged 17. A mob took him from the sheriff and was about to lynch him when County Judge Love pleaded with them to await full proof. The mob agreed to wait twenty-four hours and returned the negro to the sheriff. He is in jail.

On Another Charge.

Anniston, Ala.—Will Curry, colored, who had just finished serving a sentence of 104 days on the streets of this city for obtaining liquor for a minor, was turned over to the Talladega county authorities Friday morning, where he will be tried upon the charge of disturbing public worship. Sheriff Edwards, of Talladega, came over to this city and took the negro to that places Friday.

Free Express Delivery Wanted.

Troy, Ala.—On Friday a petition to W. W. Hurlburt, superintendent of the Southern Express Company, was in circulation among the citizens requesting free express delivery in the city. The lack of this advantage is a long felt want in Troy, which from the volume of business done with the company it has been entitled to for a number of years.

Forced to Take Poison.

Pueblo, Colo.—Frank Ward, foreman of a yard gang at the Pueblo steel works, caused the death of his daughter, Frances, aged 16, by forcing her to swallow a quantity of poison and then committed suicide by using the same drug. Neighbors said Ward had been drinking heavily and had threatened to kill himself and the girl. Ward was a widower.

Forced to Take Vacation.

Jackson, Miss.—No new cases of yellow fever were reported from Mississippi City Friday, and no new points of infection have appeared in the state. The Jackson health authorities refused admission to State Auditor Henry, who was at Beauvoir when the gulf coast infection was announced, and he was compelled to go north to spend the period of probation.

Sauber Bound Over.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—John Sauber, who has been in the county jail here, charged, together with Will Hunter, with the killing of A. J. Lindgren, who disappeared mysteriously on April 5, was tried before Justice Carson here Friday morning. He was bound over to await the action of the grand jury. His bail was fixed at $500. It is not probable that he can make bond.

Clarksville, Tenn.—Haley Peacher, colored, was arrested here on instructions from the authorities at Guthrie, Ky. Peacher is wanted there for shooting and seriously wounding another negro.

Illicit Distilling.

Opelika, Ala.—O. L. Hale, a white man from Buttston, Tallapoosa county, was brought here by Deputy Marshal Gibson. Hale is charged with illicit distilling, and his case will be tried before United States Commissioner J. D. Samford as soon as the witnesses arrive.

Brewton, Ala.—A number of the county public schools have opened, and they all have a very good attendance.

DETECTIVES ARE BUSY.

Tyring to Locate Sender of Infernal Machines in New York.

New York.—Almost all of the detectives at police headquarters, every detective in the Wall street police agency and a number of federal detectives have been put to work in a determined effort to find a clue to the person who sent infernal machines to Jacob H. Schiff, the banker, and to the offices of M. Guggenheimer Sons.

A close watch for the appearance of cranks in the financial district is being made. It is the belief of the police that one man sent both machines, tinies reserved by Divine Providence and that he is a dangerous crank, who fancies he has a grievance against all rich men.

Dash for Liberty.

Ozark, Ala.—About 3 o'clock Friday afternoon Mr. Hartman was guarding a squad of hands in the woods at Henderson & Boyd's mill, near Brockton. Early Hunter, one of the convicts, complained of his saw, and Hartman placed his gun between his legs and took hold to show Hunter how to use it. The negro stepped behind, and, jerking the gun out, leveled it at Hartman and was going to fire. The other negroes interfered, and the guard's life was saved. Three of them—Early Hunter, carrying the gun; Will Jackson and Andy Brown—then escaped. Near McDonald's mill, ten miles away, they were overtaken by a party headed by Charley Zeigler. Both parties emptied thenr guns, the contents of which ridddles Zeigler's hat and the negroes' clothes. Hunter was taken, and as Brown ran out he was halted by one of the party with an empty gun. Jackson made good his escape.

German in Trouble.

Anniston, Ala.—A German by the name of Joseph Sonntagg, who speaks English but poorly, is resting in the city jail under a charge of disorderly conduct. He was arrested by Officers Hill and Crabtree in the yards of the Southern Railway Company. Sonntagg hails from Luxemburg, Where he says that by the death of some relative he has an estate of about $1,000 awaiting proof of claim. He has been in this country about five years, being employed principally during that time in railroad yards and in the mines.

Candidates in the Field.

Cullman, Ala.—Owing to the rumor that Governor Jelks will call an extra session of the legislature to convene in December, it is understood that an election will be called to fill the vacancy in this (the Third) senatorial district occasioned by the death of Senator Robert L. Hipp. It is currently reported that Cullman county will have at least two candidates in the person of County Solicitor S. J. Griffin and A. A. Griffith, a rising and popular attorney of this city. All indications point to a rather heated contest, as both of the gentlemen named are very able and forcible orators.

Big Raid on Distillers.

Opelika, Ala.—Deputy United States Marshal H. Gibson and Deputy United States Collector Knox Booth came in Saturday from the wilds of Randolph county, where they made an important capture of a "moonshine" outfit. The still was an old United States government still of fifty gallons capacity, and was operated by Will Montgomery (white), an old offender, wanteed in Carroll county on several charges, where a reward is offered for his capture. With him was Will Lashley, who pleaded guilty to assisting in operating a still running illegally.

In the event of Gov. Jelks calling an extra session of the legislature, it becomes necessary for Chilton county to hold a special election and elect a representative, our late representative, Hon. L. H. Reynolds, having resigned on his election as probate judge. In any case, it behooves the voters of the county to be selecting a good conservative man to represent them, as next year at the latest a representative must be elected. With the growing importance of Chilton county it becomes more necessary than ever that our representative should be a man of conservative views and good education, a man who will make his influence felt in the general assembly, and who will reflect cred it upon the county. Above all he must be a sound Democrat, or the election will amount to nothing, there is no use electing a stray member of the opposition.

Why should the federal government aid in improving the highways of the country? The answer to this question is a logical one. The policy of the government should be to so use the funds placed at its disposal by the people for national purposes and to so shape its fiscal and other legislation as to promote the best interests of the people. It is hardly susceptible of controversy that the thing which will do most to promote the further prosperity and development of the country is a system of improved highways reaching out into the farming districts. As has been wisely said, city development will take care of itself. Indeed it has gone on in the past at the expense of rural development principally because the great burden upon agricultural communities of wretched blic roads has kept back agricul al development. The govern nt has recognized its obligation aid in furthering means of trans tation by the help it has extend to railway and water facilities. provement of our highways an the rounding out of tion facilities in the ie giving to remote dis [illegible] quate means of reaching and distributing centers, rform the final work in al progress and prosperity. se are some of the reasons why federal government should aid improving the highways.

THE RACE OR NEGRO PROBLEM IN THE SOUTH AND ITS SOLUTION.

BY F. A. GULLEDGE

Editor Banner—There is a question before the Southern people called the "Race or negro problem" with many theories advanced for its solution, the most difficult feature of which is the question of labor, and each young white man and young white woman of the South could and should play their part well, for it is upon them this problem largely hinges either for good or bad. If the parents will encourage, teach and require their boys and girls to perform the daily work of not only the farm and farmhouse instead of allowing them to sit idly by while the poor father and mother pays out their hard earned dollars for work which should be done by children, this part of the race problem at once would be settled. Why I know of fathers and mothers whose every effort is exerted to its full capacity to live, and yet who allow their children, boys and girls, to roam up and down their railroads and highway at will, always ready to spend every dollar their parents may chance to get, and yet the average girl or boy who is thus raised envies those who do work and are independent. All work is honorable and not only the poor farm boy and girl but the rich as well should be taught and required to work more or less, should be at least learned to and required to do all housework. Why just imagine young Mr. "Shoat" getting married to Miss "Lamb." He has by hard work and economy bought or rented a little one-horse farm. Has a cow, a stove and other household goods to which he takes Mrs. "Shoat" the day after their marriage. To make as good show as he could he has expended all his means, and yet very poor as they are, (and this is the rule and not the exception) first thing which greets him in his new quarters is "Well, Mr. "Shoat," you will have to hire a cook and you must milk that cow if you get any milk." For the sake of his never failing love he tries it awhile. The cook wants her pay, Mr. "Shoat" has no cash. They have lived on love thirty, sixty or ninety days. He finds her plans will not work. He gets up right close to Lucy and says "Darling, I am mighty poor and I don't feel able to undergo all these expenses, can't you cook what little we have and milk the cow while I rustle around and try to prepare for the next year?" To this she may reply: "Go off, you old hog! Take me back where you got me, mother never required this of me and I shall not do this for you nor any other old hog, do you hear?" Now, mind you, this girl was raised by a mother who always did these jobs, and yet her girl has been taught that it is disgraceful, or at any rate the child should be above it.

Why just imagine the wedding tour of "Delia" and myself; married Dec. 21st, 1868, license cost $2.50 and they were cheap too, bought them on credit for I never had a cent in my pocket nor did not have for six or perhaps eight months afterward, but I could work and did work at 50¢ a day and paid for the license. We walked around over the settlement balance of the week after our marriage. Monday I went to the new ground, Delia went to the cards and wheel and for eight long years we worked and saved, and one hundred dollars would cover all our raiment for the eight years except what Delia carded, spun, cut and made for our wear while I made the shoes for myself, and yet during these eight years there were born to us Mallie, Joel, Lilla and Willie, and later Charlie, all taught to and required to work, they today like it, have become interested in it, and without this special and greatest accomplishment I should feel I had fallen far short of my duty.

So I want to urge, first, the parents to help to remedy this great and damaging evil; Second, to the boys who love their homes, and to lay off their finery, roll up their sleeves and go to work. Third, to the girls to take heed lest they should finally be "Weighed in the balance and found wanting." While in Chicago a few years ago I visited the family of Mr. G. L. Zimmerman, my former neighbor and book-keeper. Found him living in elegant quarters for which he was paying high rent. I asked who the owner of the three-story brick was, when his wife called me to the back door and pointed out a large fine looking Irish lady who was in her back yard doing her own washing, when I made some to do at this, I was informed that her check was good in a local bank for eighty thousand dollars. Do you think Mr. Editor, if she lived in Chilton county she would wash and iron or even speak to common folks? And by the way have you (I know you have) ever noticed what a fad it is now for the girls and boys to move in from the country and as soon as they have met a few trains and the girls have "flirted" with a few railroad boys and worn a few "cocked hats" that they forget to speak to or respect older people? This is true of Verbena, also of Clanton, and I suppose of other little "ticky" towns. Something wrong at home, parents, better look out.

(To be continued next week)

Maplesville.

Mr. Ed Blalack, wife and little son Owen have visited here.

Mr. Finis Walker was called to see his uncle near Randolph last week, the latter being very sick.

Notwithstanding the very rainy day a great many people from Maplesville attended the big barbecue given at Stanton on Saturday. Some of the "Spooney couples" which I saw pass the road were not aware that it was raining, so much engrossed were they in each other's conversation.

Your scribe has recently paid a very pleasant visit to Misses Rea and Florence Adair, who are spending the summer with their aunt, Mrs. Apperson, who lives near Billingsley.

We have much to look forward to now in the mornings, as the "Red carrier" has route No. 2 out this way on the Selma road between Maplesville and Stanton; Mr. Jesse Hayes is the carrier.

Messrs. John and Edward Ensign have returned from Binghampton, New York; we sympathize very deeply with them in the loss of their brother, who was killed by being thrown from his buggy.

Mrs. Dr. Claughton and children, Lillian and Joe, have been visiting relatives in Montgomery and Verbena. Dr. Claughton was seen to land with an immense watermelon this time instead of a wild turkey.

Mr. and Mrs. James of Centreville, Mr. and Mrs. Roy of Vine Hill, Mr. Ed Smitherman and his sister, Miss Alpha Smitherman, have all been the guests of Mrs. Noah Foshee recently.

Mrs. R. L. Nelson of Stanton is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Buck Bowline. SUBSCRIBER.

Public is Aroused.

The public is aroused to a knowledge of the curative merits of that great medicinal tonic, Electric Bitters, for sick stomach, liver and kidneys. Mary H. Walters, of 546 St. Clair Ave., Columbus, Ohio, writes: "For several months, I was given up to die. I had fever and ague, my nerves were wrecked; I could not sleep, and my stomach was so weak, from useless doctors' drugs, that I could not eat. Soon after beginning to take Electric Bitters, I obtained relief, and in a short time I was entirely cured." Guranteed at Upchurch Drug co. price 50c.

Verbena.

Rev. Hudson filled his regular appointment at the Baptist church here Sunday, morning and evening

We are having a lot of rain through this section now.

Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Nelson arrived from Raton, New Mex, Thursday night; they report their son doing well, who is there for his health.

Fire destroyed the dry kiln and about 16000 feet lumber on last Saturday night week. Loss $800, no insurance.

Mr. Harry Patton came back from Hattiesburg, Miss, where he has been attending school.

Miss Clevie Cox is here after spending several weeks in Birmingham with her sister.

Prof. J. B. Jones left for Raton, New Mex., last week for his health. We are sorry to see Mr. Jones leave.

Mr. Hugh Coatts of Birmingham is visiting relatives here this week.

The protracted meeting at the Baptist church was postponed until the third Sunday in September.

Mr. Malley Gulledge of Dolomite is spending the summer here to the delight of his many friends.

Miss Lee Robinson of Thorsby was a pleasant visitor here Sunday.

Mr. D. I. Deramus is spending a few weeks at Fate Springs for his health.

Commissioner John A. Elmore has moved his office here during the yellow fever scare, so United States Court is held here now. X.

We have plenty of rain, sorry crops, and farmers are getting along s ow trying to save fodder

The health of the community is not very good; there are several cases of sickness of various kinds, caused by so much rain, we think. However, we are hoping for better times in the future.

We are glad to see the people taking more interest in the cause of education. They seem to be waking up to their duty after a long nap. I long to see the day when we can have longer schools and better schools. A man cannot do a better thing for his son or daughter than to give them a practical education.

The farmers of this section have organized a "Farmers' Union," which, if carried out will be a great help to the laboring class. Let us first look at the name, "Unity," which means power. Where there is unity there is power. When people come together in the cause of education they have good schools; when they unite in the cause of Christ they have good churches, and when the people come together as a band of laborers and co-workers they will reap happiness and prosperity as the fruit of their labors. But they say we can't stick, we are too poor Yes, we are poor, and always will be if we don't change our habits and customs of farming. We let other people do our calculating, price our products and run things to suit themselves, and we stand off and look on, thereby trusting the other man's honesty, which he may be ever so honest, but if he was to beat us through mistake probably we might not find it out. "Let us love not sleep lest we come to poverty." We are all renters in one sense. We work from the first day of January to the first day of January, and then get about one fourth of what we make. There is no reason on earth why we should not have what properly belongs to us. There is one way by which we can get it, and only one way, and that is to organize and stick. We support the world and the world is wholly dependent upon us for food and clothing. Why not let what we have belong to us? With best wishes to the Banner and its readers.

Foot Amputated.

Birmingham, Ala.—J. H. Terrell, a white man employed in the yards of the Southern Railway at First avenue and Twenty-seventh street, has his foot mashed Saturday afternoon about 7 o'clock by a switch engine. He was carried to the Copeland infirmary in Lige Loy's ambulance. It was found necessary to amputate the foot just above the ankle. No other injuries were received. Terrell, it is stated, was attempting to cross the tracks, when his foot was caught in a switch. He was only a short distance in front of the engine, and before he could extricate his foot the accident had occurred

Fell From Roof.

Birmingham, Ala.—R. E. Ogden, superintendent of the Grasselli Chemical Company, who was seriously but not fatally, injured by falling from the roof of one of the stock houses at the works of the company Friday morning, is improving. His injuries consist of a broken leg, a fractured arm and body bruises. That Mr. Ogden escaped more serious injuries is considered remarkable. He was on the roof of one of the stock houses, when his support gave way, causing him to fall forty feet. In falling he struck several pieces of timber.

Richardson Goes to Bailey Springs.

Huntsville, Ala.—Congressman William Richardson returned to the city Friday night from the reunion of Camp Fred A. Ashford, United Confederate Veterans, at Prewitt Springs, near Town Creek. There was a large crowd present, and Judge Richardson delivered an address. Judge Richardson went to Bailey Springs Saturday to confer with Senator John T. Morgan on matters relating to the improvement of the Tennessee river. Senator Morgan is now keenly interested in the Tennessee, and will assist in securing legislation allowing the great power at Muscle Shoals to be developed.

End of an Old Feud.

Scottsboro, Ala.—On Sand Mountain, in Dutton precinct, John W. Heel shot and instantly killed B. F. Woollum, using a double-barreled shotgun.

Woollum was passing Heel's house in a wagon in company with his two sons, all three being armed with shotguns. Just as the trio reached a favorable spot Heel fired, killing the elder Woollum instantly, and as he rolled from the wagon it is said the two sons were so frightened that they ran, leaving their dead father and their guns.

It is alleged that the killing grew out of an old feud, the two neighbors having engaged in various vexatious lawsuits, and it is said each had threatened the life of the other.

Heel surrendered to Constable Nichols, who brought him here and placed him in jail to await a preliminary trial.

Negro Excursionists Drowned.

Norfolk, Va.—Owing to the inability of Engineer D. L. Reig to control his airbrakes, an excursion train from Kingston, N. C., bound for this city, plunged through an open draw in a bridge over the western branch of the Elizabeth river at Bruce station, eight miles from Norfolk, Thursday afternoon, and half a hundred persons, mostly negroes, were drowned.

Distillery Raided.

Troy, Ala.—Deputy Collector E. N. Winters and Deputy Marshal C. M. Cox have returned to Troy from a raid in Dale county. They raided an illicit distillery near Haw Ridge, where they destroyed a complete distillery outfit said to belong to Russell Moring and Ezekiel Brooks, who were arrested by Deputy Marshal Cox and brought to Troy. United States Commissioner C. S. Tutwiler bound them over to the next court.

Serious Cutting Affray.

Gadsden, Ala.—There was a serious cutting affray on Walnut street Tuesday afternoon about 6 o'clock, in which Jasper Martin was seriously and perhaps fatally cut by T. P. Ferguson. There are numerous rumors as to how the fight commenced. Some say it was caused by Martin making fun of some painting done by Ferguson, while others say Ferguson became angry because Martin would not drink with him. However, both men, who are painters, met on the corner of Sixth and Walnut streets in front of the Cumberland Presbyterian church, and in a few moments, it is stated, Ferguson struck Martin, and, getting his knife out, began cutting him. The men fought all the way up Walnut street to near Eighth, where Ferguson lives. Martin was cut and slashed in nine different places.

Gone to Mobile.

Demopolis, Ala.—Prof. W. A. McLeod, who for the past eleven years has had charge of the Demopolis public school, and has been a very prominent citizen of this county, left with his family Friday for Jackson, where they will spend a few weeks, after which they will go on to Mobile, where they will make their future home and where Professor McLeod will be coprincipal of the Mobile Military Institute.

News of Opelika.

Opelika, Ala.—The educational board of Lee county has issued a strong address to the voters of the county urging them to awake to the importance of securing the one mill tax for school purposes, and it is confidently predicted that this county on September 20 will register its vote in favor of education by a rousing majority.

Homer Fuller, who has held the position of night baggageman at the union depot here for the past two years, has been promoted to assistant ticket agent at Montgomery, and has left for his new field.

Walter R. Samford, the successful contestant at the inter-collegiate oratorical contest at Greensboro some time since, has gone to Monteagle, Tenn., where the interstate contest will be held soon. Mr. Samford will be Alabama's representative, and his subject will be "The Injustice of a Protective Policy."

Mahan-Baird.

Centreville, Ala.—A marriage of unusual interest occurred at Briarfield, in this county, on the 17th inst. The contracting parties were Miss Christabel Mahan, of Brierfield, and Mr. A. D. Baird, of Colorado, Spanish Honduras. More than a year ago Miss Mahan made a visit to her brother, who is a prosperous merchant in Honduras. While there Mr. Baird met her and was immediately captivated by the many charming qualities of this beautiful American girl. His love was reciprocated, Miss Mahan returning to her ancestral home some weeks ago to prepare for her approaching marriage. The ceremony was performed in an impressive manner by Rev. Father Madding, of Selma. Miss Mahan, now Mrs. Baird, was born and reared in Bibb county, and is the youngest daughter of Mrs. Anna Mahan, of Brierfield.

A Prospective New Jail.

Demopolis, Ala.—Steps have been taken by the county commissioners looking to the building of a modern jail, and the publication of a notice asking for bids for the building of the new jail was authorized. The grand jury at the last term of the circuit court in this county condemned the county jail in the strongest terms and called the attention of the county commissioners to the fact that former grand juries had done the same. These things, together with the fact that a wholesale jail delivery occurred only a few weeks ago, has induced the commissioners to act, and the county will soon have a modern jail.

Preparing for Winter Trade.

Anniston, Ala.—The Southern Railway Company, which recently purchased the compress of Robinson Bros. on the company's track near the Southern freight depot, has begun improvements which will greatly increase the capacity and efficiency of that plant, the improvements aggregating in the whole about $6,000. To the compress proper the Southern has added four large rooms, increasing the storage capacity by 40,000 square feet. To enhance the efficiency of the compress two new boilers of modern make have been installed in the engine room, while by way of improving the building the company is building a new roof and erecting a new platform preparatory to meeting the demands of the winter trade.

County Seat Fight.

Anniston, Ala.—By a decision handed down by Judge Pelham the question as to whether the county seat of Cleburne will remain in Edwardsville or be removed to Heflin will be left to the voters of the county. Some time ago the governor was petitioned by a majority of the voters of the county to order an election to decide the question. The petition was granted and election commissioners were appointed. This was followed by quo warranto proceedings on the part of the people of Edwardsville, who claimed that the act was unconstitutional and that a majority of the qualified electors had not signed the petition. The case was heard by Judge Pelham, who dismissed the quo warranto writ. The election commissioners will set the date for the contest in the near future.

Charged With Grand Larceny.

Centreville, Ala.—Sheriff Crawford left here Friday for Cornelia, Ga., in response to a telegram from the sheriff of that place stating that Augustus J. Bell, a white man, who is wanted in this county for grand larceny, has been arrested and placed in jail. About a year ago the grand jury of Bibb county indicted Bell for grand larceny, but he fled the state. He will be tried at the approaching term of the circuit court.

Funeral of Mr. Brown.

Scottsboro, Ala.—The burial of Hon. J. E. Brown was conducted at the family residence in this city Friday afternoon by Rev. Dr. Claybrook, of Huntsville. A special train bearing the members of the Huntsville bar and other prominent citizens of that city was furnished by the Southern Railway. Every business house in the town was closed out of respect to the deceased. The floral offerings were numerous and beautiful.

School Tax to Be Voted Upon.

Demopolis, Ala.—Prof. W. S. Compton, county superintendent of education, appeared before the court and asked that a notice be given that in September a vote will be taken on the subject of the imposing of a one mill school tax, but the commissioners think the time too short for this election to take place in September, and it was postponed until November. The county superintendent has been an ardent advocate of local taxation for school purposes, and it is believed now that a vote will give Marengo county this law.

Two Wrecks on Road.

Mobile, Ala.—Two wrecks on one trip is fairly good for a freight train. It was a northbound freight on the Southern which left here early Thursday morning. Some cars were derailed near Mackintosh. The track was cleared and the northbound mail allowed to pass.

The freight went about two miles north and stopped. Before a flagman could be sent out a southbound freight ran into the train: this time, however, with little damage. No one was hurt.

Ruinous to Cotton Crop.

Selma, Ala.—Farmers in the city Friday report that the heavy rains of the past week have ruined the cotton crop. This report is not confined to any one locality of the county, but seems to be general, and from every direction comes the same report. Too much rain is stated to be the cause, and it is expected that the crop this year will be shorter than it has ever been in this county during any previous year. The cotton plant itself is reported to be in a healthy condition, and in most fields the growth is exceptionally large, but the rains have caused the cotton to rust in the bolls, and most of the bolls that are not ruined by rust are dropping off of the plant. In many cotton fields it is reported that the water is standing in great ponds so great has been the rainfall. While this is reported to be the general condition on most of the farms in the section surrounding this city, there are a few farms where the crop will be above the average. But where the crop is reported good there has not been such rainfall as there has been in other parts of the county.

Louisiana Visitors.

Brewton, Ala.—Mrs. J. Z. Carson and children, of New Orleans, are visiting friends in Alco, having arrived Friday afternoon. A report was circulated to the effect that they were directly from New Orleans, which caused a little excitement, but it was soon learned that they had been in Kentucky for several weeks on a visit. They will remain here and wait for the yellow fever to die out before returning to their homes in New Orleans. Mr. Carson is one of the efficient conductors on the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, and spent a few hours in the city Friday afternoon, leaving at night to take his regular run.

Tampered With Mail.

Birmingham, Ala.—Bossey Kirksey, a negro, was bound over to the grand jury in the sum of $500 by United States Commissioner H. A. Wilson Friday on a charge of tampering with the mails. Kirksey is a youthful negro, and is said to have been a mail carrier between Eutaw and Faulkner, two settlements in Greene county. He was suspected of tampering with the mails, and a decoy letter was sent out by postoffice inspectors, which resulted in the arrest of the negro. In default of bond the negro went to jail.

Death of an Esteemed Citizen.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—A telegram has been received here from Alton, Ill., announcing the death of P. H. Hannon, one of Tuscaloosa's most substantial citizens. Mr. Hannon came to Tuscaloosa when the Montgomery division of the Mobile and Ohio Railway was constructed, and since that time has been an efficient passenger engineer on this road. In years he was the oldest man and second in service on the division. Mr. Hannon left here last month for a vacation, thinking perhaps a change might be beneficial. He was a loyal Knight Templer and had a host of friends here. He is survived by a wife.

Walking Boss Is Killed.

Sheffield, Ala.—Oscar Harris the colored "walking boss" of the Cole furnace, met with a fatal accident when a cap flew off of a blow pipe and struck him in the stomach. It was thought at first that he was not seriously hurt, but it soon developed that the wound was fatal. He died about twenty-four hours afterward.

Held for Murder.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—John Sauber, who is charged jointly with Will Hunter, with the murder of A. J. Lingreen, who mysteriously disappeared last April, while crossing the Warrior river bridge, was tried Friday morning before Justice J. W. Green. He was held to await the action of the grand jury under $1,000 bond.

Mr. Alvarez Dead.

Mobile, Ala.—Mr. Joseph F. Alvarez died Thursday morning at his home in Whistler after an illness of three months. Mr. Alvarez was 77 years of age and one of the oldest citizens of this county. For many years he was an engineer on river boats here. He is survived by his wife, one daughter, Mrs. R. B. Chastang, and three sons, Messrs. Emanuel, Edward and Clarence Alvarez, besides many relatives here.

ITEMS FROM THE STATE CAPITAL

Warm Fight Predicted.

Since it is almost a positive fact that B. B. Comer is going to be in the race for governor, the politicians are looking forward to one of the warmest fights for governor the state has ever witnessed. The race will no doubt be between Lieut.-Go. R. M. Cunningham and B. B. Comer, president of the railroad commission. Others may announce, but the race in the end will narrow down to these two.

The announcement by Mr. Comer that he would run if no one else would run upon the platform which he was elected as railroad commissioner can be taken as an assurance that he is now in the race.

Cunningham has expressed his views upon the question of the regulation of freight rates, and he favors the state taking action to see that the people are not imposed upon. He practically stands for the same thing Mr. Comer does. But Comer has won one fight on this platform, and he is looked upon as the champion of the cause. It seems to be the platform that is the whole thing in the coming campaign. Since both Cunningham and Comer are somewhat on the anti-railroad platform it is rumored that a conservative candidate may come into the field and contest for honors. This man is supposed to be H. S. D. Mallory, of Dallas. Colonel Mallory is as well known as either of the two other candidates, and he would make a good race, but at this time it is not expected he will make the race.

For Lieutenant-Governor.

Several prominent Alabamians are mentioned in connection with this office. Henry B. Gray, of Birmingham, is an avowed candidate, and W. H. Samford, of Troy, and W. W. Quarles, Selma, are mentioned as most likely candidates.

The race for secretary of state seems to be between Frank Julian, of Tuscumbia, and A. C. Sexton, now of this city, but who lives in Cullman.

Brooks Smith, of Hale, and Editor J. R. Rosson, of Cullman, are candidates for state auditor. The name of W. W. Brandon is also connected with the office of state auditor.

Robert Poole, present commissioner of agriculture, is being spoken of in connection with the office of state treasurer.

Major H. C. Gunnels, of Anniston; Joel DuBose and I. W. McAdory, of Jefferson, will no doubt fight it out before the people for I. W. Hill's place as state superintendent of education.

Capt. W. M. Sedden, of Marengo; J. C. Adams, of Dale, and J. M. Thornton, of Talladega, may be candidates for commissioner of agriculture.

Next to the fight for governor the prettiest fight will be over the places of Associate Commissioners Tunstall and Sanders, of the railroad commission, which become vacant soon. Comer intends to have men put on the commission of his way of thinking if there is any possible chance. In a short time announcements for the places will be forthcoming.

Railroad Company Increases Stock.

President H. Austill, of the Mobile and West Alabama Railroad Company, whose headquarters are in Mobile, has filed with the secretary of state an account of the proceedings of that company's stockholders at their September, 1904, meeting, when the capital stock was increased from $6,000,000 to $10,000,000, and the board of directors was authorized to issue as much as $20,000,000 of first mortgage bonds.

These proceedings were had in order to "raise money to complete construction of the railroad" of the company.

Other notices of corporations were filed as follows with the secretary of state:

East Pratt Coal Company, of Birmingham, incorporated with a capital stock of $20,000; incorporators, John T. Morgan, K. B. McConnell and D. S. Acuff.

Rokeby Realty Company, of New Jersey, appointing as its Alabama agent G. J. Perry, and office at Birmingham.

Death of Mr. Rambo.

News was received in Montgomery Friday of the death of Mr. George Rambo, formerly a well-known resident of this city. His friends will be grieved to learn that Mr. Rambo died Monday night in a hospital in Brooklyn, N. Y., where he had been carried for treatment for heart trouble. Until two years ago the years of Mr. Rambo's life had been spent in Montgomery. He was for a number of years a popular railroad conductor and at other times a trusted employe of the Southern Express Company. He was a man of strong character and attractive nature, and he had drawn about him during his life in Montgomery a circle of strong friends.

Negro May Recover.

Birmingham, Ala.—Dan Howard the negro who was shot by Policeman Ray late Wednesday night, has a chance to recover from his wound, according to the physicians at the Hillman hospital.

Will Meet at Colorado Springs.

Toronto, Ont.—The convention of the Typographical union decided Thursday to meet in Colorado Springs next year.

Tinner Falls Ninety Feet.

C. L. Downer, of Princeton, Ind., a tinner working on the new Exchange Hotel here, fell a distance of ninety feet Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock from a scaffold projecting from the seventh story. The man, remarkable to say, will live unless unforeseen complications arise.

System Under Fire.

Montgomery's system of registration quarantine, which has been more or less under fire since its installation, will again be up for trial. In official circles it is regarded as extremely improbable that it will be changed, notwithstanding the attacks made upon it. Acting Mayor McIntyre stands for the system which has been both so praised and so condemned. The acting mayor and the other aldermen who favor it are not contending that it is a perfect system, nor are they willing to admit that the train style of quarantine is a perfect system. The registration system is held to be as effective as a train quarantine by its friends, as well as more compact and easier worked. The matter of saving to the city in money is considerable, although all the city officials are ready to declare that the cost of the quarantine in such a time is not to be considered.

Military Officers.

Ajutant-General W. W. Brandon has issued commissions to officers in the Second regiment as follows, the same having been examined and recommended as qualified: Captain H. B. McKenzie, First Lieutenant A. M. McDowell, Second Lieutenant P. A. Sapp, Company G, Eufaula: First Lieutenant James F. Walker, Second Lieutenant E. H. Hagler, Company F, Tuscaloosa; Captain H. B. Peacock, Second Lieutenant J. H. Powell, Company H, Opelika; W. H. Stoddard, second lieutenant, Company I, Luverne; Julian C. Smith, second lieutenant, Company K, Tuskegee; Captain J. A. Holmes, Jr., Company E, Wetumpka.

The canvass for the colonelcy of the Second regiment is proceeding quietly, with no developments beyond the fact that Colonel Graves has no open opposition.

State Pension Board.

The state board of pension examiners on Friday completed its labors relating to the different county pension rolls and devoted the rest of the day to summarizing the work already accomplished. The board also took up on Friday the work of culling from the rolls the names of old soldiers who have married, departed from the state in the last year and otherwise disqualified for drawing pensions from the state. As soon as this feature of the work is completed the board will prepare its report and submit it to the state auditor. This is expected to be done soon.

Mr. Harris Dies in Texas.

A telegram from Dallas, Tex., announced the death of Mr. Thomas W. Harris, a prominent business man of Alexander City, which occurred there on Friday. His many friends and relatives in this city and state will regret to learn of his death. One of his sisters, Mrs. H. V. Owens, lives in Montgomery.

The Governor Explains.

Blount Springs, Ala.—Gov. W. D. Jelks said Friday at the Blount Springs Hotel that if a special session of the legislature was called, which he anticipated doing, to be effective not before the yellow fever scare had subsided, he would advise the legislature to appropriate every dollar of such surplus as could be safely spared from the treasury to the public schools of this state, the money to be distributed over two years, covering the two fiscal years beginning October, 1905.

The impression might have gone abroad that this money was to be appropriated for one season's school. The governor said that that would disturb, if all was allowed to be expended in one year, the school arrangements in the state. He designed that it should be divided, and will expect either the accumulation from the increased assessment through the 3 mill tax to provide for as much additional for the fiscal year beginning October, 1907, or perhaps the legislature in its regular session in January, 1907, would appropriate an additional amount, making the whole appropriation for the following years at least equal to the money to be disbursed in the two coming fiscal years.

Pure Food Show.

Birmingham, Ala.—The Retails Grocers' Association will conduct a pure food show in Birmingham commencing November 6 and continuing ten days. Demonstrations will be made during each day of the show, and the stipulations are that each participant or exhibitor must present a certificate showing the food handled to be pure. The Grocers' Association has elected J. R. Ellard, of Avondale, president; J. W. Fain, vice-president, and A. A. Jones, secretary-treasurer. The pure food show will be the first ever held in North Alabama.

Livingston Raises Quarantine.

Livingston, Ala.—The quarantine of this place against Montgomery has been raised. Health certificates will still be requested of persons getting off here.

Hong Kong.—The application of the Chinese commercial union in this city to meet and discuss the anti-American boycott has been refused by Sir Matthew Nathan, governor of the colony.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR AUGUST 27.

Subject: Jeremiah in the Dungeon, Jer. xxxviii., 1-13—Golden Text, Matt. v., 10—Memory Verses, 8-10—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

I. Jeremiah's enemies (vs. 1-4). 1. "Then." After the events referred to in chapter 37, where Jeremiah was delivered from the dungeon. "Shephatiah," etc. Some of Jeremiah's enemies who were seeking his life. "All the people." They had free access to him in the court of the prison. 2. "Life for a prey." A proverbial expression. To make one's escape with life like a valuable spoil or prey that one carries off; the narrowness of the escape, and the joy felt at it are included in the idea. He shall carry off his life as his gain, saved by his going over to the Chaldeans. Had Jeremiah not had a divine commission he might justly have been accused of treason, but having one which made the result of the siege certain he acted humanely as interpreter of God's will under the theocracy in advising surrender. 3. "Surely be given." This was a testimony that he constantly bore; he had the authority of God for it. He knew it was true and he never wavered or equivocated.

4. "The princes said." Their reasons were plain enough, but the proof was wanting. "Seeketh . . . the hurt." An unjust insinuation, for no man had done more for this people than had Jeremiah. His preaching was calculated to arouse them to a sense of their sins and cause them to turn to God. One of the commonest ways of injuring others is to misunderstand and misinterpret their motives, as Jeremiah's motives were maligned because it was possible for him to have done what he did with bad motives. When there are two possible motives for the conduct of another, it is not only a more charitable, but probably a more truthful judgment to impute the better motives. "Judge not that ye be not judged," should be written in capital letters, yea, in flaming letters, before us all.

II. Jeremiah in the dungeon (vs. 5, 6). 5. "King is not he." Zedekiah was a weak king. He had a conviction that Jeremiah was a phophet of the Lord, and yet he dared not oppose his statesmen, but yielded to their will without a question. An innocent man was thus sacrificed to their malice. These princes were wroth with Jeremiah (chapter 37: 15); "he had compared them to rotten figs" (chapter 24). But for him they would have had affairs all their own way, they were anxious to be rid of him.

6. "Then took they Jeremiah." Jeremiah was the butt of ridicule and scorn. He was put in the stocks, was publicly whipped, was misrepresented as an enemy, was imprisoned several times, but he kept right on. "The dungeon." Literally "the cistern." It was not a subterranean prison as that in Jonathan's house (chapter 37: 15), but a pit or cistern, which had been full of water, but was emptied of it during the siege so that only mire remained. Such empty cisters were often used as prisons (Zach. 9: 11); the depth forbade hope of escape. "Sunk in the mire." They evidently expected that he would die in that place.

III. Jeremiah's friend (vs. 7-9). 7. "Ebedmelech." The servant of the king. He probably was keeper of the royal harem, and so had private access to the king. Already even at this early time, God wished to show what good reason there was for calling the Gentiles to salvation. An Ethiopian stranger saves the prophet whom his own countrymen, the Jews, tried to destroy. So the Gentiles believed in Christ whom the Jews crucified, and Ethiopians were among the earliest converts (Acts 2: 10; 8: 27-39). "Sitting in the gate." The gates of cities were the places where justice was administered. 8 "Went forth." The servant went immediately to the king. There was no time to lose, for if he delayed the prophet might perish. What a bold, courageous act this was. It ought to put many of us to shame.

9. "These men," etc. He must have been in the king's confidence or he would not have dared raise his voice against the action of the princes. The Lord can raise up friends for His people where they are least expected. "No more bread." That is, no more bread left of the public store in the city (chapter 37: 21); or, all but no bread left anywhere. This shows to what straits the city was reduced.

IV. Jeremiah rescued (vs. 10-13). 10. "King commanded." Zedekiah's better nature was stirred. "Thirty men." Not merely to draw up Jeremiah, but to guard Ebed-melech if the princes should oppose him. The king was determined that he should be rescued by force if necessary. Ebed-melech was rewarded for his faith, love and courage, exhibited at a time when he might well fear the wrath of the princes.

11-13. Ebed-melech took the men as the king had commanded and rescued Jeremiah. He let down into the pit some torn clothes and worn out garments and instructed Jeremiah to roll them around the ropes and place them under his armpits, so as not to suffer injury from the ropes when he was drawn up. Although Jeremiah was thus rescued from a terrible death, he was not set at liberty, but remained in the court of the prison. He was still in prison when the armies of Babylon took Jerusalem. He was found in chains and carried with other captives on the way to Babylon, but was released at Ramah, six miles from Jerusalem. Thus ended the prison life of the prophet. How long he was in prison it is difficult to determine, probably for years. The Lamentations which he wrote after the destruction of Jerusalem must have been his frequent meditation while in confinement.

Jebeles Murdered.

Anniston, Ala.—By the verdict of the coroner's jury Thursday afternoon much credence is now given the theory that John Jebeles was murdered and is not a suicide as the story that was given out after the shooting Tuesday night. It will be remembered that Jebeles was killed in a bawdy house in the room of a woman, who was also shot. The inmates of the place say that he took his own life.

LOST 72 POUNDS
Was Fast Drifting Into the Fatal Stages of Kidney Disease.
Dr. Melvin M. Page, Page Optical Co., Erie, Pa., writes: "Taking too many iced drinks in New York in 1886 sent me home with a terrible attack of kidney trouble. I had acute congestion, sharp pain in the back, headaches and attacks of dizziness. My eyes gave out, and with the languor and sleeplessness of the disease upon me I wasted from 194 to 122 pounds. At the time I started using Doan's Kidney Pills an abscess was forming on my right kidney. The trouble was quickly checked, however, and the treatment cured me, so that I have been well since 1896 and weigh 188 pounds."

Novelty in Statistics.

Statistics of all sorts and even of the most trivial nature seem to have a very considerable fascination for some people. A Mr. F. G., for instance, nas takenu the trouble to calculate that while Graef, a well-known German artist, was painting his portrait some years ago, over 20,000 strokes of the artist's brush were required to transfer his visage to the canvas. About a year and a half ago F. G. was again "oiled" by the late Charles Furse. Although this artist had an entirely different style from Graef, F. G. was surprised to find that the total number of strokes of the brush was about the same. It is unfortunate that he did not count the bristles in the respective brushes of the two artists, and the number of hours required for the work. Without these figures the bare number of strokes is of little value. By dividing the number of strokes by the number of hours and multiplying this figure by the number of bristles, the number of bristle points actually sweeping the canvas per hour could have been accurately determined. As it is the number of strokes unaccompanied by any data as to size of brush, time required or the pattern of the clothes he wore, is of little scientific value.

Wooden Pavements.

In view of the return to wood pavements in a small part of the streets of lower New York, certain facts as to wood paving tabulated in the Sanitary Record are of great interest. From these it appears that in provincial towns in England the creosoted soft wood pavement has a life of from twelve to fifteen years, and hardwoods from fifteen to eighteen years. At St. Pancras, London, where there is a traffic of 411,318 tons per yard of width per annum, the greatest wear of the Australian wood jarrah was 0.18 inch, or less than one-fifth inch per annum. The best wood for paving purposes, according to London experience, are the Australian karri and jarrah, while Australian and California gums are said to promise well.

Three Human Lungs.

Three human lungs—one white, one black and one gray—form an instructive exhibit in an Edinburg museum. The first came from an Eskimo, who breathed the pure air of the Arctic regions; the second from a coal miner, who inhaled much coal dust; the third from a town dweller, kept in city dust and smoke.

Vaccinating Chickens.

It has been discovered that fowls can be rendered immune from the ravages of cholera by means of vaccination with cultures of the cholera bacilli. The discovery will prove a great boon to poultry raisers, who often lose their entire flocks in a few days from cholera.

His First Shave.

The earliest known mention of shaving is in the Bible (Genesis xliv, 14): "And he (Joseph) shaved himself and came before Pharaoh." Shaving the beard was introduced by the Romans about 300 B. C.

Curious Ancient Law.

Many curious instances of old laws may still be found in England. In Chester the man who fails to raise his hat when a funeral is passing becomes liable by an old law to be taken before a magistrate and imprisoned.

The canals which form a network throughout a great part of China abound in fish. The rice fields, which are irrigated with the water from these canals, make ideal hatching places for them.

A process has been invented by an Englishman of giving artificial age to wood. He replaces the sap of trees by beet sugar or saccharine.

Bonaparte's Long Speech.

While Charles J. Bonaparte, the new secretary of the navy, was connected with the Baltimore Reform League it was decided to investigate the conduct of a prominent federal officeholder. Friends of the crooked official learned this and decided to "pack" the council, so that the report might be voted down. Bonaparte listened attentively to the argument against the report, and then rose to give his own views, bitterly attacking the official and urging that the charges be immediately accepted. He saw, however, that his words would have little effect on that portion of his audience which sided with the accused man, so when he had finished his discourse he began over again, repeating his speech, word for word, pause for pause, gesture for gesture—not once, but a dozen times, until towards morning the friends of the accused official were fast asleep. Mr. Bonaparte and his associates then approved and adopted the report.

Blotches on Hands, Ears and Ankles For Three Years—Instant Relief and Speedy Cure by Cuticura.
"Thanks to Cuticura I am now rid of that fearful pest, weeping eczema, for the first time in three years. It first appeared on my hand, a little pimple, growing into several blotches, and then on my ears and ankles. They were exceedingly painful, itching, and always raw. After the first day's treatment with Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills, there was very little of the burning and itching, and the cure now seems to be complete. (Signed) S. B. Bread Is Radio-Active.

Sir William Ramsay believes that it is quite possible that in some cases bread is radio-active. He thinks that the radio-activity would not do any harm, as is shown by the presence of radium in the waters at Bath and at Wiesbaden. In both cases the water has to be drunk on the spot in order to get the full value of the cure. Sir William Ramsay thinks that this is partly due to the radio-active properties of the water. He is inclined to think that there are radio-active gases in the air. The "freshness" of the air at certain times, he believes, is due to their presence.

There Was No Danger.

A very stout old lady was recently passing a cab stand. One of the horses laid down his ears, and, with a vicious look, made as if to bite her arm.

The lady uttered a cry and hastily jumped aside, while she reprimanded the owner of the horse for his carelessness in allowing the animal to frighten her.

"'E won't bite you, mum," said the John encouragingly; then, seeing her still hesitate, he added, "Lor' you needn't be afraid; 'e's a vegetarian."

All Albania mourns the loss of the Princess Uirditese. She died of heart failure caused by the sight of the devastation created by the earthquake at Skutari. She was the best friend of the poor. Her brother has been a prisoner at Constantinople for sixteen years, as it is feared the Albanians might choose him to be their ruler.

THE TURN OF LIFE
A Time When Women Are Susceptible to Many Dread Diseases—Intelligent Women Prepare for It. Two Relate their Experience.

The "change of life" is the most critical period of a woman's existence, and the anxiety felt by women as it draws near is not without reason.

Every woman who neglects the care of her health at this time invites disease and pain.

When her system is in a deranged condition, or she is predisposed to apoplexy, or congestion of any organ, the tendency is at this period likely to become active—and with a host of nervous irritations, make life a burden. At this time, also, cancers and tumors are more liable to form and begin their destructive work.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

These symptoms are all just so many calls from nature for help. The nerves are crying out for assistance and the cry should be heeded in time.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was prepared to meet the needs of woman's system at this trying period of her life. It invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried thousands of women safely through this crisis.

For special advice regarding this important period women are invited to write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., and it will be furnished absolutely free of charge.

Read what Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound did for Mrs. Hyland and Mrs. Hinkle:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I had been suffering with falling of the womb for years and was passing through the Change of Life. My womb was badly swollen; my stomach was sore; I had dizzy spells, sick headaches, and was very nervous.

"I wrote you for advice and commenced treatment with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as you directed, and I am happy to say that all those distressing symptoms left me and I have passed safely through the Change of Life, a well woman. I am recommending your medicine to all my friends."—Mrs. Annie E. G. Hyland, Chestertown, Md.

Another Woman's Case.

"During change of life words cannot express what I suffered. My physician said I had a cancerous condition of the womb. One day I read some of the testimonials of women who had been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I decided to try it and to write you for advice. Your medicine made me a well woman, and all my bad symptoms soon disappeared.

"I advise every woman at this period of life to take your medicine and write you for advice."—Mrs. Lizzie Hinkle, Salem, Ind.

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Hyland and Mrs. Hinkle it will do for any woman at this time of life.

It has conquered pain, restored health, and prolonged life in cases that utterly baffled physicians.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Succeeds Where Others Fail.

CONSTIPATION
"For over nine years I suffered with chronic constipation and during this time I had to take an injection of warm water once every 24 hours before I could have an action on my bowels. Happily I tried Cascarets, and today I am a well man. During the nine years before I used Cascarets I suffered untold misery with internal piles. Thanks to you I am free from all that this morning. You can use this in behalf of suffering humanity."
